that Gen. Washington was bled to death. His last illness was slight, and caused principally by weariness. A physician was called who 'bled him copiously.' Strange to say the patient became no better. Another doctor was called, who again took away a large amount of the vital fluid. Thus in succession four physicians drew away the life of a great man who was intended by nature for an old age, and who prematurely died—murdered by malpractice—bled to death. That was the age of medical bleeding!"

The speaker then graphically described another period which came upon the people, in which they assigned the origin of all diseases to the stomach, and after showing the falsity of his theory, and that the kidney and the liver were the causes of disease, and that many people are suffering from kidney and liver troubles to-day who do not know it, but who should know and attend to them at once, continued:

"Let us look at the matter a little more closely. The human body is the most perfect and yet the most delicate of all created things. It is capable of the greatest results and it is liable to the greatest disorders. The slightest causes sometimes seem to throw its delicate machinery out of order while the most simple and common-sense care restores and keeps them in perfect condition. When it is remembered that the amount of happiness or misery we are to have in this world is dependent upon a perfect body, is it not strange that simple precautions and care are not exercised? This is one of the most vital questions of life People may avoid it for the present, but there is certain to come a time in every one's experience when it must be faced.

"And here pardon me for relating a little personal experience. In the year 1870 I found myself losing both in strength and health. I could assign no cause for the decline, but it continued, until finally I called to my aid two prominent physicians. After treating me for some time they declared I was suffering from Bright's disease of the kidneys, and that they could do nothing more for me. At this time I was so weak I could not raise my head from the pillow and I

FAINTED REPEATEDLY.

My heart beat so rapidly it was with difficulty I could sleep. My lungs were also badly involved; I could retain nothing upon my stomach, while the most intense pains in my back and bowels caused me to long for death as a relief. It was at this critical juncture that a physical longing which I felt (and which I most firmly believe was an inspiration) caused me to send for the leaves of a plant I had once known in medical practice. After great difficulty I at last secured them and began their use in the form of tea. I noticed a lessening of the pain at once; I began to mend rapidly; in five weeks I was able to be about and in two months I became perfectly well and have so continued to this day. It was only natural that such a result should have caused me to investigate most thoroughly. I carefully examined fields in medicine never before explored. I sought the cause of physical order and disorder, happiness and pain, and I found the kidneys and liver to be governors, whose motions regulate the entire system."

After describing at length the offices of the kidney and liver, and their important part in life, the doctor went on to say:

"Having found this great truth, I saw clearly the cause of my recovery. The simple vegetable leaf I had used was a food and restorer to my well-nigh exhausted kidneys and liver. It had come to them when their life was nearly gone and by its simple, yet powerful influence had purified, strengthened and restored them and saved them from death. Realizing the great benefit which a knowledge of this truth would give to the world I began in a modest way to treat those afflicted and in every case I found the same which I have experienced. Not only this but many, who were not concious of any physical trouble but who, at my suggestion, began the use of the remedy which had saved my life, found their health steadily improving and their strength continually increasing. So universal, when used, was this true, that I determined the entire world should share in its results, and I therefore placed the formula for its preparation in the hands of Mr. H. H. Warner, of Rochester, N. Y., a gentleman whom I had cured of a severe kidney disease, and who, by reason of his personal worth, high standing and liberality in endowing the Astronomical Observatory and other public enterprises, has become known and popular to the entire country. This gentleman at once began the manufacture of the remedy on a most extensive scale, and to-day Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, the pure remedy that saved my life, is known and used in all parts of the continent

"I am aware a prejudice exists toward proprietary medicines, and that such prejudice is too often well founded, but the value of a pure remedy is no less because it is a proprietary medicine. A justifiable prejudice exists toward quack doctors, but is it right that this prejudice should extend towards all the doctors who are earnestly and intelligently trying to do their duty? Because Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure saved my life before it became a proprietary medicine, is it reasonable to suppose that it will not cure others and keep still more from sickness now that is sold with a government stamp on the wrapper? Such a theory would be childish."

The doctor then paid some high compliments to American science, and closed his lecture as follows.

"How to restore the health when broken and how to keep the body perfect and free from disease must ever be man's highest study. That one of the greatest revelations of the present day has been made in ascertaining the true seat of health to be in the kidneys and liver, all scientists now admit, and I can but feel that the discovery which I have been permitted to make, and which I have described to you, is destined to prove the greatest, best and most reliable friend to those who suffer and long for happiness, as well as to those who desire to keep the joys they now possess."

Harper's Weekly has hit the mark in a spirited sketch entitled, "Let the Chinese embrace civilization and they may stay." In this picture we find as proofs of civilization, two Chinamen, counterparts, doubtless of Sullivan and Ryan, engaged in a boxing match. One Chinaman has a huge placard over his shoulder, bearing the inscription "No Rent." Another is holding out hooches of ballots at a poll; another carries a placard inscribed "High wages and no work." A fat Celestial sits begging with the inscription, "I am starving" in front of him. Another is embracing a whiskey bottle, and another is so drunk that he falls against a lamp-post and pushes it over. Such words as "Strike," "Beg," "Drink," "Fight," are up in all directions—these being the evidences of civilization which entitle men to vote.

The Supreme Court of California, sitting in banc, decides the validity and constitutionality of the Sunday law. Justice Thornton delivered the opinion of the Court, Chief Justice Morrison and Justices Myrick and McKee sustaining the law. Justices McKinstry, Ross and Sharpstein dissent. Thus the Supreme Court of this State puts itself in the long line of able jurists who, in many States, have made similar decisions. What we need now is no irritating and foolish prosecutions, but a steady, manly, reasonable pressure on the leading violators of the law, to-wit, the rum-sellers. They create 80 per cent. of the crime of the State, and are the head and front of all uncleanness and unrighteousness. Strike at the saloons. Prohibition will follow after awhile.—California.

A convention of colored men met in Goldsboro, N. C., composed of 300 delegates. Resolutions were adopted to the effect that while they do not favor the abandonment of any of the principles of the Republican party, and indorse the administration, they hail with pleasure the unmistakable evidence of a liberal movement in North Carolina, and will support such liberal movement and join hands with the liberal men who have heretofore acted with the Democratic party, and who are willing to bury the dead past, in an earnest effort to build up the State and guarantee to all equal rights and privileges.

The Devil's Servants.

The devil has a great many servants, and they are not only very busy and "desperately wicked," but "deceitful above all things." They are so deceitful that they often make children, and grown-up people too, think they are their servants. And none of them are worse or more deceiving, or do more harm than these four, whose names we give:

DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC.

A combination of Protoxide of Iron, Peruvian Bark and Phosphorus in a palatable form. The only preparation of iron that will not blacken the teeth, so characteristic of other iron preparations.

GENTLEMEN:—I have used Dr. Harter's Iron Tonic in my practice, and in an experience of twenty-five years in medicine, have never found anything to give the results that Dr. Harter's Iron Tonic does. In many cases of Nervous Prostration, Female Diseases, Dyspepsia, and an impoverished condition of the blood, this peerless remedy, has in my hands, made some wonderful cures. Cases that have baffled some of our most eminent physicians, have yielded to this great and incomparable remedy. I prescribe it in preference to any iron preparation made. In fact, such a compound as DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC is a necessity in my practice.

MESSRS. H. H. WARNER & CO.:

About two years ago I was attracted by the advertisement of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. My system was much run down and I had suffered the excruciating agonies of kidney and blood difficulties and especially from calculus. I determined to try the cure and bought 2 bottles, and when I had taken the first bottle I noted immediate improvement, and after taking the second I called myself toned up all through the system and extraordinarily well for a man of seventy-five. I have used in all about four bottles and would not be without it in case of any further trouble for any consideration. I recommend it freely to my friends as I consider it just what it purports to be a sure cure for kidney difficulties. Mrs. Guthrie, wife of my son, has also used it freely and with very marked benefit and perfect cure.

About 2 years ago I purchased some of the Safe Kidney and Liver Cure for my own and my wife's use. We took about four bottles and were both completely restored to health, my system having lost tone and Mrs. Connell being in very poor physical condition. We know it is a good thing from our own experience with it. A short time ago I was taken sick with a billious attack. My kidneys and urinary organs were involved to a very painful degree. I am using the Safe Kidney and Liver Cure now in the hope that it will do me as much good as it did before.

A GERMAN TRUST SONG.

Just as God leads me, I would go;
I would not ask to choose my way;
Content with what He will bestow,
Assured He will not let me stray,
So as He leads, my path I make,
And step by step I gladly take,
A child in Him confiding.

Just as God leads, I am content;
I rest me calmly in His hands;
That which He has decreed and sent,
That which His will for me commands
I would that He should all fulfil;
That I should do his gracious will
In living or in dying.

Just as God leads I will resign;
I trust me to my Father's will,
When reason's rays deceptive shine,
His counsel would I yet fulfil;
That which His love ordained as right,
Before He brought me to the light,
My all to Him resigning.

Just as God leads me, I abide,
In faith, in hope, in suffering true;
His strength is ever by my side—
Can aught my hold on Him undo?
I hold me firm in patience, knowing
That God my life is still bestowing—
The best in kindness sending.

Just as God leads, I onward go;
[illegible] thorns and briars seen,
[illegible] His guidance show—
[illegible] the end it shall be seen,
[illegible], by a loving Father's will,

[illegible] there are [illegible] community [illegible] overflowed [illegible] Arkansas, [illegible]

2. Are there any overflowed persons, within your knowledge, who are beyond the reach of distributing agencies?

An immediate and truthful response to these inquiries will prove exceedingly beneficial to those in want, under the conditions above stated.

Have your answer certified or endorsed by some well known or responsible citizen of the community where the persons now are, concerning whom these answers are given. Forward the answer immediately, to the Rev. A. S. Jackson, Pastor of First Free Mission Baptist Church, at the corner of Gravier and Bertrand streets, Rev. R. L. Beall, Pastor Thomson Chapel, M. E. Church, or Rev. A. M. Green, Pastor St. James Chapel A. M. E. Church, 85 Roman street, New Orleans.

To the Pastors and Members of Colored Churches, Officers and Members of Benevolent and Social Organizations of Colored People of the City of New Orleans, and all Others interested in the rescue from Starvation and Death of Hundreds of our People in the Overflowed Regions of the Valley of the Mississippi:

Beloved and Dear Friends.—The cry of distress and weeping is heard through the great valley of the Mississippi, as in days of yore it was heard "In Rama, of Rachel weeping for her children, and would not be comforted, because they were not."

The sweeping flood of waters covering millions of acres of the land, upon whose productive resources our own people, and the people of distant lands, are in large degree dependent for their bread, cannot fail to arouse every generous instinct of our nature in their behalf.

The suffering which now exists, and which can scarcely be realized in the full measure of its desolation, will not cease with the decrease, or even with the final abatement of the waters. Long weeks, and perhaps months, of privation and distress must follow this terrible inundation.

We are striving in the best way we can to assist and encourage the National Government, who have already so liberally responded to the demands of the suffering people of the Mississippi Valley.

And we desire also to show to our friends here at home, who have organized a general Relief Committee, (under the auspices, or rather composed of, the Stock Exchange, Cotton Exchange, Produce Exchange, Mechanics, Dealers and Lumbermen's Exchange, Chamber of Commerce, Clearing House Association, and representing nearly every branch of trade in this city,) that we thank them from the depth of our hearts for their humanity and generosity to the afflicted and suffering people whom they have organized to aid: and we promise them our hearty co-operation in every way that we can, in means, and prayers, and sympathy and labor for ameliorating the condition of those distressed.

We therefore most earnestly appeal to all persons to assist us to whatever extent they can, that we may be able to report to the General Relief Committee, and through them to our people, or directly to those in need, a good account of our work.

Responses to this appeal may be made to Pastors of the following named Churches: Rev. H. B. Parks, Pastor of St. Peters A. M. E. Church; Rev. Joseph Gould, Pastor of Simpson Chapel M. E. Church; Rev. C. B. Thompson, Rector St. Philip's P. E. Church; Rev. H. C. Green, Pastor [illegible] Shiloh Baptist Church; Rev. Stephen Priestley, Pastor of Union Chapel M. E. Church; Rev. J. W. Gordon, Pastor of Morris Brown A. M. E. Church; Rev. R. H. Steptoe, Pastor of 4th African Baptist Church; Rev. Charles Malone, Pastor of St. John's A. M. E. Church; Rev. J. H. Hall, Pastor of Morris Brown Congregational Church; Rev. A. M. Green, Pastor St. James Chapel A. M. E. Church; or Address directly: A. S. Jackson, Secretary (Executive Relief Committee) Orthodox Evangelical Alliance, corner of Gravier and Bertrand streets, New Orleans.

Chinese Jottings

BY REV. M. C. WILCOX.

The empire of China has an estimated population of four hundred millions, or eight times that of our Republic. Kiang Su province alone has thirty-four millions, which is equal to the population of all the [illegible] Islands. Some of its cities deserve special notice. Chinkiang, [illegible] which this is written, is situated [illegible] two hundred miles above the [illegible] of the Great Yang Tse Kiang, [illegible] at this point is nearly two [illegible] wide. It is navigable for ocean [illegible] as far as Hankow, about [illegible] above this place. Chinkiang has a large trade in silks and other fabrics from Nankin, [illegible] agricultural interests [illegible] of the M. E. Church has [illegible]

One of its many fine temples has 10,000 gods. This city was ruled for three years by Marco Polo. Nankin is the great literary center of the empire, once famous for its porcelain pagoda, which was destroyed by the Tai Ping rebels. Soo Chow is noted principally for its iron manufactures. Shanghai is the "model (foreign) settlement" and great commercial port of the nation. With all its immense cities, its beautiful scenery, its rivers, plains, and mountains, and its vast natural resources, the moral condition of China is deserving of commiseration. Where the influence of Christianity has not been felt the masses are under the absolute control of heathen priests, whose absurd notions are apparent in their notions of good and bad luck, of lucky and unlucky days, etc. Pasted above the doors of all kinds of buildings, on the craft in the river, and even on the horns of the cattle are red, blue, and yellow strips of paper representing good luck and similar notions. The times, places and modes for disposing of the bodies of the dead are determined by necromancy. Hence in traveling through the country coffins partially or entirely unburied are frequently seen. The disagreeable state of things thus caused, and the effect upon the health of the inhabitants may be easily inferred.

Resulting from such a system of superstition and from the almost universal worship of ancestors is an excessive conservatism, which looks upon all innovations with an eye of jealousy, as was illustrated a few years ago by the tearing up of a railroad built by foreigners from Shanghai to Woo Sung, a distance of twelve miles. However, a better day seems to be dawning, as is indicated by the completion, within a few months, of a telegraph line from Shanghai to Yientsin, passing through Chinkiang and Yang Chow along the Grand Canal. A few mornings since the Shanghai Courier spoke of the subscription by Chinese capitalists of ten millions of taels (about $13,000,000) with which to build a railroad from Peking to Tientsin, which it is understood will eventually be extended along the telegraph line just alluded to. When it comes the railroad, with all its accompaniments, will be a mighty factor in bringing a new and better civilization to this land.

We are now in the midst of the Chinese New Year festivities. With them, this season is equal to our Fourth of July, Christmas, New Years, Thanksgiving, etc., boiled down. For a week or more before the all-important day, February 18th, this year, it was evident from the increasing volume of exploding firecrackers and from other indications that something was "in the air." About ten days before New Years all the government officials go through a ceremony called "Sealing up the seal of office." During the month for which the offices are closed, the officials abandon themselves to mirth and dissipation. The close of the year is the time for business settlements. I understand that debts remaining unpaid after New Year's Day cannot, according to Cinese custom, be collected. One who fails to pay in full at that time is thereby dishonored and will be no longer trusted. Every effort is made to adjust claims. Theft is even resorted to in order to procure the "wherewith." But even with the Chinese there is occasionally an embarrassing "shortage." The day before New Years we noticed several violent altercations caused by failures to pay up, and on New Year's we noticed several debtors carrying lanterns in broad day light—as custom requires—hunting debtors. When the light expires, the search must cease, probably on the principle that,

"While yet the lamp holds out to burn,
The vilest sinner may return."

During this holiday season all stores and shops are closed from three to ten or more days, it being understood that the longer they are closed the greater is the wealth of the proprietors. The forts and ships and some of the buildings are adorned with banners and illuminated at night by lanterns with red lights. The noise of our Fourth of July is nothing compared with the din of common fire crackers, drums and gongs that greet our ears, being accompanied by sky rockets and Roman candles by night. On New Year's day everybody, except the beggars, appeared in new apparel, some being very grandly arrayed. Instead of shaking hands when greeting each other they place their fists together and shake their fists in each other's faces slightly bowing in the meanwhile. As with us, New Year's day to the Chinese is a day of family reunions, present-making, and ceremonial calls. Their visiting cards are of thin red paper, about three by seven inches in size. The temples are more frequented than ordinarily, the God of wealth receiving attention as in America and Europe. Fire crackers are exploded at the temples and elsewhere, as an act of worship. Story tellers and showmen are seen more frequently than usual entertaining staring crowds. These tricksters whirled plates on the ends of sticks, kept three or four sharp knives flying in the air, and went through the feat of sword-swallowing. This is a great and wonderful people. The one fact that presses itself upon us is the need of more workers. This field is indeed white unto harvest. May the time soon come when China with its millions of immortal souls will be given to our Lord for His inheritance.

Temperance.

BY REV. L. M. HAGOOD.

This question has agitated the minds of Christians and right thinking people for two hundred years or more in this country. Demon Alcohol is opposed by right minded men and the church of the living God. It is the bane of any nation as well as the despoiler of good government everywhere; in the State, county and family. It is far reaching in its effects and as destructive as far reaching. From the days of Asbury until now this demon has met an inveterate foe in the M. E. Church. The church teaches until now that men should flee from "wine, when it moveth itself aright in the cup" as from death itself. The war the Church has been carrying on has been and is now sustained by the word of the Lord. She has from the beginning warned her sons and daughters, and entreated them to stand "on the Lord's side" in this war. God commanded Moses to say to Israel that if any man desired to set himself apart for the work of the Lord, that he should neither drink wine nor strong drink. In all God's dealing with that people the idea of temperance stands prominently forth. If God intends to bring forth a strong, valiant man to lead or defend His people, his parents are commanded to "drink no wine or strong drink." Not only this but the causing others to indulge is prohibited in the "war unto him that giveth his neighbor drink, that putteth thy bottle to him and makest him drunken; that thou mayest look on his nakedness." However much the would may point the finger of scorn at some who do not observe her wholesome doctrine, the Church does not seem to slacken, but rather accelerates her speed while pursuing this common enemy of man. She ceases not day nor night to cry aloud to all the world, "wine is a mocker and strong drink is raging; and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise." At the eighthh annual conference held in Baltimore, Md, 1780, she gave no uncertain sound when it was asked: "Do we disapprove of the practice of distilling grain into liquor? Shall we disown our friends who will not renounce the practice?" and the answer "Yes." She has been saying "yes" ever since. She has kept abreast the times and lead forth in her last General Conference by declaring it an actionable offense for any member to sign petitions in favor of granting license for the sale, becoming bondsmen for any one engaged in the traffic, renting property as the place in which, or on which to manufacture, or sell intoxicating liquors. When he was aroused by voice the Church he had rested a long time, if he was ever aroused before, amidst the people. In fact the darling baby had been raised up as the play-fellow of demon alcohol, and often carried the baby to his dismal home never to return. When Methodism sounded the tocsin he arose, as it were from betwen Gerizim and Ebal where the people had long dwelt with him in comparative peace. But now he arose and "from his horrid hair, shakes pestilence and war," and the people beheld him as never before "the hydra headed monster." He fled to Ebal and there followed those who were enthusiastically attached to him—old men, young men, women and children, while the Church perched herself on the opposite mount, followed by a number of right thinking liberty-loving men, while the deep blue sea at its base reflected the smile of approbation from the angels of God. There stood the church besprinkled with God's approbation while the angels shouted "Who is she that looketh forth as the morning, fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners?" The host on the other side is best described by Milton's description of Satan on another occasion. "On the other side, Satan alarmed, collecting all his might dilated stood, like Teneriff or Atlas, unmoved. His stature reached the sky, and on his crest sat honor pinned, nor wanted in his grasp what seemed both spear and shield."

From the valley the voice of sin, death and the grave was heard in favor of demon alcohol, but the Church was not dismayed for a voice cried "fear not little flock it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom," for to him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, and remember "and be not among wine bibbers, for the drunkard and the glutton shall come to poverty." Now this I understand to be the attitude of the Church. She will never furl her banner or sound the bugle for retreat until the demon is routed. The Church of God has routed him from Maine, Kansas and some other places, and they are at peace, save now and then when a band of his brave Ku Klux rush down upon innocent old men and women. Wherever the people have succeeded in routing his army they have returned every man to his farm, and now they are beating their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks, and converting penitentiaries into churches, saloons into mission rooms and jails into school houses. But the war still goes bravely on elsewhere. Many frail excuses are framed in defense of alcohol by those addicted to its use, but common sense and Christian religion pick the wind out of them as fast as produced. Scientific men tell us that alcohol is not a food or medicine, nor does it increase muscular force, but that in it is the power to vitiate, delude the man and increase the lower animal passions of the body. They tell us that in it is the "poison of dragoons and the cruel venom of asps." It is a sorrowful fact that all in Israel are not Israelites. There are some to-day who stand high in the estimation of those whom they serve, as preachers and teachers, who while they may not use it themselves condone it in those over whom they have, or could have influence for good. There is but one way to deal with the demon and that is to hoist the black flag, whether in the annual, district, or quarterly conference; whether in the pulpit or family circle, and let no man escape, but with the two edged sword of the spirit cut upon the right and left crying "for Zion's sake will I not hold my peace, and for Jerusalem's sake I will not rest." Now it is said that once the Devil met a minister and bargained to do any three things he commanded if he would sell him his hopes of heaven. The minister consented and told the devil to fill up a mudhole through which he had to pass. The devil filled it up and returned. The minister asked him next to cut a road through a mountain over which he had to pass. The devil finished and returned smiling thinking the poor preacher about to give up his hopes of heaven. The preacher then commanded the devil to go find him a man truly born of God who sells, buys or uses liquor as a beverage. The devil touched his head and went off howling, "I can't find him in the universe." No temperance movement can succeed if the church of God stands in the way. The cause of temperance must suffer and more of our friends and neigbors go down to death and to hell unless as preachers and Christians and official members we better define our position.

Notes From Ireland.

One of the colored delegates to the Ecumenical Conference is still in England lecturing in the interest of some educational enterprise, and he is meeting with very considerable success, and is treated, in all the places where he lectures, as a man and a brother—welcomed to the homes and tables of all. Color lines are unknown in England, and the caste spirit that excludes the African from refined society on account of his color has no existence on this side of the sea.

The Irish Roman Catholic bishops are trying to assuage the turbulence, and restrain the passions of their people in pastorals denouncing outrage and lawlessness and condemning the no-rent doctrines of the Land League. This association will soon go out of existence. What its leaders will do when released from prison in the way of calling it back again to life it is difficult to say. They should learn wisdom in confinement, and when they breathe the air of freedom again they should become true patriots and serve their country wisely and well in speech and act.

Although the condition of Ireland is very unsatisfactory a change for the better is beginning to dawn. The Romish bishops are now speaking emphatically and decidedly on the side of law and order. The government is dealing vigorously with the malcontents who break the law, and the remedial provisions of the Land Act are becoming more and more apparent. These things combined will contribute to a better state of things and will produce, if not a permanent and satisfactory state of contentment, at least a condition of waiting for full justice without recourse to outrage, violence and lawlessness, as has been the case during the agitation which has now almost closed.

Protestant evangelizing agencies should pursue their panaceacal work with renewed zeal and earnestness, for, after all, the Gospel is the only effectual remedy for the ills of Ireland. Even when Protestants have been compelled to agitate for a redress of grievances and a removal of wrongs they have always done so within constitutional limits. Let the perpetrators of all the outrages which have disgraced the country during the past century be known and it will be found that, without a solitary exception, they belong to the Church of Rome. Does this fact not demonstrate beyond the slightest footing for controversy that Romanism is not good for the Emerald Isle. Had the people been all Protestants, subject to Protestant teaching and the Protestant faith, and had the Land League been organized and carried on under Protestant auspices, the government would never have found occasion to arrest its leaders, proclaim it illegal, and adopt vigorous measures for its suppression. These things show that, although the land laws are unjust and require thorough amendment, Popery is an encumbrance to the material, intellectual and religious prosperity of the country that must be removed in some way before the day of Ireland's complete emancipation comes.

Much talk is afloat concerning the next President of the Wesleyan Conference. Some say William Arthur will be elected. I do not think so. Re-elections are becoming unpopular. Some name Dr. Moulton, who was a member of the New Testament Revision Committee. Some Richard Roberts, a Welshman and a popular preacher. Some Charles Garrett, the temperance leader of English Methodism. I believe Mr. Garrett will be elected.

A recent traveler in Siberia asserts that birds go there to breed, not in thousands but in millions, and that for the reason that they find there a prodigal abundance of food. Berries of many kinds in inexhaustible quantities, frozen during the winter, are ready the moment the snow has melted for the fruit-eating birds, and for the insect-worm varieties mosquitos in such swarms that the birds have but to open their bills to have them fly down their throats.

Cutting the Church in Pieces.

The question of Methodist fraternity has not been limited to a mere discussion of its desirableness. Projects have been proposed for its practical realization, with how much of wisdom, time alone can tell. We have seen none, however, that bespeaks a special genius for legislation. One proposes that arrangements be entered into whereby the bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church South may swop preachers, provided they can find any to swop. There is merit in this plan. It shows good, kind feelings on the part of its proposer, and then it will amuse its readers, if nothing more. Something, however, must be subtracted from its value from the fact that an exchange of preachers between the two Churches is not at all difficult to effect now, only the preachers themselves are the parties to make their own arrangements with their respective Conferences.

Another proposition is to split the Methodist Episcopal Church in two, and thus have three Episcopal Methodist Churches in the United States, each governed by its own General Conference. These General Conferences are to create a third General Conference, a sort of Methodist Amphictyonic Council which is to have authority to give advice and such things. This proposition comes from the South and must be regarded as phenomenal in its generosity, inasmuch as it is willing to convert the M. E. Church into an old ecclesiastical polyp and allow it to multiply by fissipparation, as it were. This shows an aptitude for statesmanship that ought to be recognized. There is one difficulty, however, in carrying out of this method of "hari-kari." It would furnish a spectacle, no doubt; but the Methodist Episcopal Church has no authority to give it, no matter how entertaining it might be. A strict construction of the Constitution of the Church—and the South are great on strict construction—furnishes no authority for either its bisecting itself or splitting itself longitudinally along the meridian line. The most liberal construction will not permit it. The Constitution was made for conserving, not destroying. Perhaps, though, our brethren at the South think they can tell us how to cut ourselves in two in spite of the Constitution, and so they can. We must be excused for the present, at least, for not putting ourselves under their tutelage in this matter.—Pittsburg Advocate.

The following dialogue, which is reported to have occurred between a certain Deacon Smith and a wealthy merchant, represents the hypocritical Christianity of many professing Christians:

"Brother Smith, what does this mean?"

"What does what mean?"

"Bringing a nigger to this church."

"But he is intelligent and well educated."

"Who cares for that? He is a nigger."

"But he is a friend of mine."

"What of that? Must you, therefore, insult the whole congregation?"

"But he is a Christian, and belongs to the same denomination."

"What do I care for that. Let him go and worship with his fellow-niggers."

"But he is worth $5,000,000," said the merchant.

"Worth what?"

"Five million dollars."

"Worth $5,000,000! Brother Smith, introduce me."

Such Christianity smells like the very seed of death. From any such, good Lord deliver us!

A delegation of ministers of the African M. E. Church, headed by Bishop Brown, accompanied by Frederick Douglass, waited on Attorney-General Brewster, and made complaint against the United States Attorney for the northern district of Florida from failure to enforce the provisions of the civil rights bill. The particular case referred to was that of that of Bishop Paine, who was put off of the railroad train at midnight several miles from the nearest station, after having purchased a first-class ticket. It was represented that all applications to the District Attorney for legal redress were of no avail. The Attorney-General promised the delegation that the matter should be investigated.

The Flood.

The readers of the SOUTHWESTERN have heard and read more or less about the great flood that is sweeping over the valley of the Mississippi. Many of them have had a very unpleasant and bitter experience connected with it. They have been driven from their homes and have suffered the loss of all their earthly goods.

It was 11 o'clock Monday morning, March 27, when we left Terrebonne on the Morgan railroad for the upper part of the South New Orleans District. We first came in contact with the waters at Cohcahoula and from thence on to Morgan City it covered the entire country save one or two mounds, and these were covered with lowing cattle and bleating sheep. Passing along mile after mile the eye could rest upon little or nothing save the interminable waste of waters. The first floors of nearly all the houses we passed were covered with water. At Morgan City we found full two-thirds of the city completely submerged; the floors of the stores on the front street were covered with water that was rising at the rate of six inches every twenty-four hours. Farther on, at Centreville and Franklin, it was fast rising. The people were leaving their homes, business was nearly suspended, while the general topic of conversation was the awfulness of the flood. Monday, April 3rd, having finished our work, we were ready to return home, but learned that on Saturday night the water had washed away the bed of the railroad, that all through travel had been suspended, and that our only way of reaching New Orleans was by steamer. But day after day the waters kept rising. For seven weary days we waited, when, on Monday, April 10, we stepped on board the steamer John M. Chambers, T. R. Muggah, captain, Geo. W. Belt, clerk. She was crowded to her utmost capacity, but all that could be done was done for the comfort of those on board. We can never forget the uniform kindness of the Captain, and, in fact, all the officers, not merely to ourselves but to all on board. Often in our hearts did we say God bless Captain Muggah. All the way down Bayou Teche and the Atchafalaya there was but one continued scene of devastation. A number of plantations were pointed out to us with nothing to mark their location but the numerous house tops. The only way the people can communicate with each other is by skiffs and flat boats, the water being from four to ten feet deep. Frequently we saw the people on floating floors, and were told that in many instances were living on corn meal and parched corn. They were evidently making the best they could of their miserable condition. At Churchill the most of the people had left their houses and were occupying the church. All along the Atchafalaya levees, cattle, mules and hogs were seen standing on rafts fastened to the side of some building, and the poultry would be huddled together on the tops of the houses. All through this region our trip was more like a voyage across the sea than a mere trip on Bayou Teche and the Atchafalaya. The entire country from the Mississippi to the Gulf of Mexico is one vast inland sea. The total rise of water [illegible] to be 34 inches above the flood of 1874, 23 inches above that [illegible], and 11 inches above the [illegible] flood of 1828. Many of the [illegible] are gone, and nearly all the fences, and many of the people are without means to subsist upon or [illegible] their teams should the waters recede in time for plowing and planting corn and cotton. We do not know what is in the future, but to us those who talk so flippantly and confidently about making crops this year after a [illegible] inundation like the present [illegible] either their utter ignorance of the real condition of affairs or their want of consideration. Look at the facts in the case. All the working force of the plantations [illegible]. The mules and cattle [illegible] have been taken to the parts not affected by the overflow, most of them from one to two hundred miles away, [illegible] all damaged, to say [illegible] influence [illegible] better to look the matter square in the face, [illegible] all the [illegible] we would not have [illegible] and in the end [illegible] Certainly [illegible] upon the [illegible] help them [illegible] through some special school of training for that work.

We are apt to speak of the prophets and Apostles as unlettered men, yet who like these unlettered men of the Bible inspired the souls of men, not merely with the truth they uttered but by the sublimity of the very language in which that truth was clothed. No man ever had more power to move the people than John the Baptist, but his abode was not in kings' houses or stately palaces. He was brought up in obscurity with God only for his teacher. He suddenly appeared among men; "his raiment was camel's hair and a leathern girdle about his loins, and his meat was locusts and wild honey;" his preaching was the stern Gospel of repentance. He was simply "the voice of one crying in the wilderness," a prepared preacher calling upon the people to "prepare the way of the Lord."

Bro. Armston, at Live Oak, is a true minister of the Lord Jesus, doing the work of his Master with a heart full of love for God and man. He has gathered and organized a good Sunday-school of about fifty scholars, has secured a subscription of $140 towards the erection of a new church 25x40, and in all other respects is moving among the people as an instructor.

A wise workman strikes when and where he can hit with the greatest execution. He must, therefore, mainly aim at the wide levels of common life. Harvests are not gathered on summits of snow, nor in deep sunless gorges, but on the broad plains and gentle undulations where sun and shade, where the biting frosts of winter and the fervid heat of summer glow alternate in every possible order. Uncommon men and things are not half so valuable as common. Writers can say what they please about race, color or previous condition, but there are certain facts we do well to consider. It is a fact that all the heart's needs are kindred. Thirst and hunger are the same among black and white, rich and poor, peasants and princes, and sin, repentance, faith, regeneration and final salvation are facts which know no distinction between the throne and the dunghill. The white, the educated, gifted and rich in earthly goods, when the heart is burdened with a sense of sin and the soul is hungry, crave the same bread of God which poor, ignorant beggars eat. Nothing else will satisfy. Happy is that minister of the Lord Jesus who knows how to feed all classes.

When we were at Morgan City the flood was driving some of the families from their homes. The hearts of the people were failing them through fear. It is a mighty faith that keeps one steady in the midst of a flood that is sweeping the entire face of the country and destroying everything as it moves along.

We found Bro. Claiborne at his post, loved and respected by the people, and, so far as we could see, was doing his work well. The seating capacity of the church had been increased one-third, while the Sunday-school and congregation had more than doubled. The reports at the Quarterly Conference were in perfect order.

At Centreville matters had not been quite so smooth. Bro. Richardson had encountered some opposing influences.

"First pure then peaceable" is the order of the Supreme Lawgiver, the Everlasting Father. Contracting debts without the probability of paying them is a sin against society, the Church and God. Christ can never "present to himself a glorious church not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing" so long as she allows her members to borrow money, take up goods, and thus contract debts and then refuse to pay. Men who preach an honest gospel ought to be honest enough to pay their debts or stop preaching.

The reports at the Quarterly Conference were satisfactory and indicated that a good work had been done. The congregation is the best we had ever met. Bro. Richardson reported two Sabbath-schools with one hundred and fifty scholars enrolled. We have at Centreville some as good people as we have ever met. We predict for them and their pastor a glorious year. The work of the Gospel is to reform and make men better. The necessary qualifications for the office and work of the ministry are few. There must be familiarity with the letters of the Gospel and a deep and thorough acquaintance with the grace of the Gospel, and entire consecration to the one work of propagating the Gospel. Consecration to this work will wonderfully simplify the aims, invigorate the energies, sharpen the intellectual perceptions and keep a man true to the "Rules for Preachers" contained in the Discipline. May [illegible] become the abiding [illegible] preachers and people.

Small-Pox.

This dreadful disease, which has visited so many of the larger towns and cities in this country, with such fearful desolation, during the past few months, has, in a measure, abated. This change for the better, however, is not due to the loss of any of its virulent contagion or fatality, but rather to the lack of material upon which to act. As a consequence, vaccination, the only safeguard, is again being fully demonstrated to be the only fortified intrenchment against this loathesome and mortal enemy. Satisfied of the grand importance of immediate vaccination, we urgently call upon all of our readers to see to it that they and their families be vaccinated; and if they have been vaccinated six or seven years ago, that they be re-vaccinated, and thus secure their measurable degree of protection against small-pox. There are in the United States thirty establishments where vaccine is taken directly from perfectly healthy calves and young cattle, affording an abundant supply, stored upon ivory points, and obtainable by druggists and physicians at moderate prices. Hence none need dread the danger of being inoculated with some terrible disease, since the supply is so ample that there no longer exists the necessity of resorting to the use of humanized vaccine.

Let no absurd superstition of interfering with God's work, nor any other nonsensical notion, deter any one from the fulfillment of this his sacred obligation as a man and a neighbor.

The one time that "vaccination should be avoided is when the system is suffering from manifestations of a tendency to erysipelas or inflammation of any kind. Children while teething should not be vaccinated."

In this city, with only one-third of the population, the death-rate among the colored people is greater than among the whites; not because the race is dying out (the late census has settled that to the contrary), but because the laws of health are disobeyed and defied. Obey the laws governing thy physical, as well as thy spiritual nature, and days shall be added unto thee.

Baldwin Mission and Seminary.

Baldwin Mission, and Baldwin Seminary, located at Baldwin, La., under God, is the child of John Baldwin, Esq., a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and a steward of the Lord Jesus Christ. The location of the seminary is one of the most delightful spots in Louisiana, situated on the beautiful Bayon Teche, and surrounded by one of the most charming groves, in which there is the greatest variety of trees found in any grove in the State. The entire gift of Bro. Baldwin to the Freedmen's Aid Society includes thirty acres of land, the old mansion with four cottages all in good order, chapel, and seminary, with six recitation rooms, and a new boarding house with sufficient capacity to accommodate thirty students. His one great desire is the establishing of a school where the white young men and women of this State can receive a thorough scientific, and religious education with as little expense as possible.

Rev. W. S. Fitch, A. M., a graduate of the Ohio Wesleyan University, and a transfer from the North Ohio Conference to the Louisiana Conference, is the pastor of Baldwin Mission, and Principal of Baldwin Seminary, Mrs. Anna M. Fitch, M. E. L., Lady Principal. For the present Bro. Fitch teaches during the week, and preaches upon the Sabbath, and so far as we can judge they are the right persons to open up and develop this new and important work, well qualified by grace and education for the position. Bro. Fitch is a musician and a practical printer, and has already established the Baldwin Seminary Press. Thirty-two names are enrolled as connected with the Seminary. The future is full of promise.

A Talk with the Man Who Laughs.

The SOUTHWESTERN ADVOCATE, of New Orleans, complains that the Texas Advocate was flippant in its treatment of the jury verdict in the suit of Bishop Cain against a railroad—the railroad having denied the good bishop the privilege of riding in a first-class car. Why, brother, would you have us treat such a matter seriously? All such suits seem to us to be really amusing. It is impossible to establish social equality by law—and whoever attempts it is comical, and should be laughed at. Let the brother in black, the brother in brown, as well as the brother in red, and the brother in white, all stand upon their merits. This is the only level upon which men can meet. The man who really merits social recognition or distinction will rarely demand either. Do you perceive?—Texas Christian Advocate.

We do not perceive, that the brethren of all colors are allowed to stand upon their merits, when Bishop Cain is ejected from a car, for the sole reason that he bears the color God gave him, while any whisky-drinking gambler bearing a white skin, or red or brown man, decently attired, is admitted to the same car. The question of social equality is not involved; it is simply that of the right of a citizen to enjoy a common right at the hands of a public carrier, or the denial of equal rights by a corporation given the right of way and other valuable considerations from the treasury of the State. For the same reason that a State has no right to divert public moneys for sectarian purposes, it has no right to exert its powers or appropriate valuable considerations for the benefit of a single class of its good citizens, or to the exclusion of any. From a Christian standpoint there is nothing amusing in the case, and not a line or precept of Holy Writ to justify the indignity to the good Bishop. Were the conditions reversed, and Dr. John the victim, instead of his black brother, he would be most lusty in his demand for redress, and no sentiment of mock modesty could induce him to silence that spirit of manhood which is inseparable from a God-fearing American citizen.

We have received the initial number of the Daily Advocate of the M. E. Church South. The second number will appear May 3 and daily thereafter, Sunday excepted, until the close of the session. It presents a very neat appearance. Rev. O. P. Fitzgerald, D. D., is editor, and Rev. J. B. McFerrin, D. D., publisher. Subscription price $1.00.

An exchange says: "When Hooper, a monogamist, was superseded as delegate to Congress by Cannon, the husband of four wives, Brigham Young said, 'I have chosen Brother Cannon to represent us in Congress, because I wish to cram polygamy down the throats of the American people,' and he did. And for eight years we have had the spectacle of an unnaturalized polygamist sitting as a delegate in a Congress whose laws in other States and Territories are sending men to the penitentiary for bigamy; and the same unnaturalized polygamist is now demanding a continuance of the same outrage." The anti-polygamy bill, which recently became a law, will rather put a quietus upon "Brother Cannon." It will also teach the Mormon hierarchy that with all of their cramming polygamy down the throats of the American people, they have utterly failed in securing its digestion. Consequently the American people threatened to spew it out of their mouth, and they have done it.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Dr. J. P. Newman is too ill for pastoral duty.

—The Post office address of Rev. I. L. Pratt is West Point, Miss.

—Bishop Bowman is in a more hopeful condition, and his friends are encouraged.

—It is said that Queen Victoria is punctilious in the recognition of the devotion of her servants.

—Dr. Archibald Alexander, an eminent Presbyterian divine, died at Princeton April 8, aged 64.

—George Washington Green, of Greenwich, R. I., is to write the biography of the poet Longfellow.

—The silver wedding anniversary of Dr. and Mrs. C. H. Payne was celebrated at Delaware, O., March 24.

—The re-appointment of J. R. G. Pitkin to the U. S. marshalship is received with satisfaction here. President Arthur has selected an able Republican, a scholar and a gentleman, whose skirts were never soiled by corruption in office.

—Rev. S. L. Baldwin, D. D., has been appointed by Bishop Hurst pastor of St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church, Newark, N. J., for the ensuing year. He retains his connection with the Foochow Conference, as he expects to return to China next year.

—Rev. M. C. Harris of the Japan Mission arrived, in company with Mrs. Harris and Mrs Loper, at San Francisco, March 26. The voyage was a stormy and trying one. The state of health of the two ladies compelled their return home. The party remain for the present for recuperation in the neighborhood of San Francisco.

—Mrs. Amanda Smith, the colored female evangelist, so well known in this community, is now in Africa, and when heard from last was recovering slowly but surely from an attack of African fever. She hopes to be able soon to commence work in that dark land whence her parents came. May she have long life and much success.—Philadelphia Methodist.

—During the seven days we were flood bound at Baldwin, we found a most delightful home with Rev. W. S. Fitch, A. M., and his [illegible] were [illegible] in their efforts to make our stay with them pleasant. Nevertheless we must say that we were not a little pleased when Bro Fitch took us into his skiff, and pulled up by the side of the steamer Jas. M Chambers, and we were on board and bound for our New Orleans, home.

— Edward Dosher, a merchant at Baldwin, La., refuses to sell liquors of any kind, or to open his store upon the Sabbath day. We advise all the Christian and temperance people living at Baldwin or La Teche to patronize Edward Dosher. Purchase your groceries, and dry goods, of the man who respects the commandments of God, and who will not sell that which fills the land with drunkards, crime and woe.

— Rev. Dr. Maclay happily finds his health and strength very much restored by his sojourn in the United States. He left New York, April 11, by the overland route for his beloved field of labor in Japan, where the missionary force will gladly welcome him back to the discharge of his duties as Superintendent, of the Mission. The body of laborers has received some valuable accessions since he left the field; and the prospect in the educational work will be specially encouraging to one so fully convinced as Dr. Maclay is of the necessity of advancing largely in this line.

— On Sunday, at 2:55 a. m., Dr. C. B. White, a native of Thetford, Vt., aged 56 years, died. An excellent physician, a famous sanitarian, formerly President of the Board of Health, and later the sanitary director of the Auxiliary Sanitary Association, his death is regarded as a public calamity. For some time his failing health was regarded with anxiety by himself and friends. His talents were freely used for the benefit of mankind, and highly appreciated in this community.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

Rev. John Franklin writes from Simsport that the water covers the land, and that he and his people are in great distress, but they are holding on.

At Live Oak, Bro. Armston is working hard to secure funds to erect their new church. Sabbath, April 2d, he held a union basket meeting and raised $112 25, Rev. Bros. Ford, Stewart, and Sawsman preaching. It was a jubilee for all the people.

TEXAS.

B. F. Pinkard, Mexia, gives an encouraging account of the work accomplished by class-leaders connected with his work.

Bro. S. W. Harvey sends an encouraging word from Caney, Texas. Since Conference the Lord has been with him and blessed him in all of his work. A good number have been converted and joined on probation.

S. C. Coleman, from Waelder, Gonzales county, says: "We have a good Sunday school, with Levi A. Allen, Mary Parson, and S. Wilson as teachers. The Elder has given us a nice lot of new books." Their preacher, Lee R. Reed, has just closed a protracted meeting, in which twenty-four were converted to God.

Bro. P. N. Crawford writes from Belton: "Our presiding elder, Rev. C L. Madison, held our first quarterly conference on March 12. We had a good time. The love-feast, the sermons, and the sacramental services were all accompanied with spiritual benediction. Ten dollars were collected for the Elder. Rev. S. Smith is fully alive to his work."

Rev. W. McKenzie writes from Moscow, Texas, that they are soon to have a new church, 6000 feet of the lumber being now upon the ground. Rev. W. B. Pullam, presiding elder of the Hunterville District, spent February 24 and 25 with him, attending to all parts of his work and preaching to the acceptance of the people. But Bro. McKenzie complains that some of his predecessors have neglected their work, and we confess that to us his evidence is pretty conclusive. In a Sunday-school of forty-eight scholars, only eight can read, and within three miles of the church he found thirty-five families without the Bible. We advise Bro. McKenzie to get some Bibles, Hymn Books, and Disciplines, and see that his people are supplied; and if a good teacher cannot be secured to open a day-school, to open one himself.

P. Carmichael, Victoria: "Up to date, with 170 full members, we have raised $119 90 for all purposes of the church excluding building and improving, paid pastor $100, for sexton, fuel, etc., $19 90, for Sunday-school $10 70, for building and improving $65, with which we have made a very nice addition to the parsonage. On the first Sunday night in March we began a protracted meeting, which resulted in the conversion of twenty souls. We have added since conference twenty-one souls, and our membership is now 209. Our Sunday-school numbers 100 regular attendants. The day-school, under W. A. Fortson, late of Central Tennessee College, is doing finely, with an attendance of sixty-five. There is some talk of building a new house for worship, as the present one is too small. You will pray for us."

MISSISSIPPI.

J. M. Shumpert: "I wish to say that there is a gracious revival of religion going on in Columbus and Corinth, Miss. Many precious souls are being converted to God. The Lord be praised."

R. Hayes, State Line: "We are having a good time. Elder Dunn held our quarterly conference; collection $7 25."

TENNESSEE.

Rev. C. L. Fields has been appointed to the Memphis circuit, in place of H. C. Welch, resigned, and is filling the place with credit. So writes Jesse Price, presiding elder.

ARKANSAS.

W. O. Emory, Little Rock: "In our revival since conference we had eight converts and a number of accessions. Last Tuesday was the city election for aldermen. The Sixth Ward stepped forward and defeated the whisky men again. Our church, of which Bro. Albert spoke, is in this ward. Let it be remembered that this ward is three-quarters colored, the only one that elects a colored alderman. Our white brothers will have to move up or hand over the mantle to the brother in black."

From Our Mission Rooms.

Dr. Maclay communicates four letters recently received giving the following views of the special efforts now being made in Japan by the adherents of heathenism to strengthen their false and decaying systems against the influence of Christianity:

OPPOSITION TO CHRISTIANITY.—The enemies of the Cross in Japan do not propose to yield the field without a struggle. It is true that the methods of opposition once in general use, such as torture, crucifixion, beheading, banishment to distant parts of the empire, and others of that ilk, could scarcely be applied with success in our day. The government in its present attitude of at least comparative enlightenment, and with its existing treaty relations with the Western powers, no longer desires to employ barbarous and inhuman methods for educating the minds and controlling the consciences of its subjects. But it does not require a very profound acquaintance with human nature to convince any thoughtful observer that a government so long connected with other and, as we hold, erroneous forms of religious belief, will not, in the absence of a powerful pressure in that direction, break away from the old and adopt a new system of religion; that forms of religious faith and worship so ancient as Shintoism and buttressed by such potent supports in the way of endowments and revenues as Buddhism possesses, will not cheerfully succumb to a rival; and that a nation, the successive generations of which have been so long accustomed to the teachings and rites of generally received and revered religious systems, will not suddenly lose faith in its old spiritual guides, and welcome to its confidence a system whose profound teachings involve mysteries which finite minds cannot solve, and whose morality directly antagonizes some of the strongest and most cherished passions of the human heart.

It reflects great credit on the Japanese government that it is evidently trying to grapple with this confessedly most difficult subject in an enlightened spirit; and there is every reason to expect that in due time a satisfactory adjustment of it will be reached. Meanwhile, however, the Shintoists are somewhat jubilant in view of the evident favor of the government toward their system and its efforts, which do not, indeed, promise to be successful, to make Shintoism the religion of Japan; the Buddhists, chafing under the loss of government influence and patronage, are putting forth extraordinary efforts to retain their hold on public sentiment; and a small coterie of Japanese students, guided by some foreign teachers, are quite active in endeavoring to disseminate atheistical principles. These influences and discussions are stirring the minds of the Japanese most profoundly with reference to all questions of morals and religion; and are directing the attention of the entire nation to the work of Christian ministers, now making such cheering progress in Japan. Let the Church remember and pray for the faithful laborers she has sent to occupy this inviting field.

THE CHICAGO DISTRICT OF THE N. W. SWEDISH DISTRICT is one of great extent. It reaches into five States, and, according to the statement of the presiding elder Rev. N. O. Westergreen, is over 800 miles in compass from east to west. The extreme eastern limits are Jamestown, N. Y., and Chambers Valley, Pa., the extreme west being at St. Louis, Mo. There are eighteen charges in the district. "Victoria, Ill.," says the elder, "is our oldest charge, the cradle of Swedish Methodism in the West." The society was organized in 1848, with five members. It forms now an extensive work. One of the original members, the late Rev. P. Newberg, who had been long active in the Northwest Swedish Conference, died at his post of labor, among the Swedes in Texas, January 10.

The presiding elder reports the Market-street Church, in Chicago, as the largest charge on the district, and very prosperous. During the pastorate, now nearly closed, of Rev. D. S. Sorlin, a heavy debt of several thousand dollars on the church property has been paid, and the membership has, in spite of the removal of many members, grown from about 300 to over 400. Over 100 have been received on probation since the last conference. The congregation exhibits much vital energy and missionary zeal.

AGRICULTURAL PROGRESS IN INDIA.—A fact which goes far to assure us that India is on the march of improvement is the recently exhibited disposition of the ryots (or farmers) in some sections to seek for foreign and better agricultural implements. The government has taken pains to exhibit English plows with their working, and they have been ordered by the native farmers. Since months ago a number of large Swedish plows were sent over, and as a result 300 of them were taken up at Bellary. A very interesting letter to C. P. Hard, published in the Buffalo Christian Advocate, March 23d, contains the statement that with sixty plows manufactured on the Cawnpore model 1900 acres were cultivated (at Ballery) with cotton seed from all parts of India; "and the crops are at least 200 per cent better than those on the lands that were plowed with the Indian plow." Mr. Hard's correspondent has just ordered six cast-steel plows from a Hartford firm, and states his belief that "American implements are well suited to our Indian soil." If the Hindoos will learn agriculture from us, it will have no small effect to open their minds at least to the teachings of the Gospel.

THE LIBERIA CONFERENCE recently held passed a vote of welcome to Mrs. Amanda Smith, the female evangelist recently arrived in that country. Rev. Dr. Blyden addressed the conference as fraternal delegate from the presbytery of Western Africa. The Baptist Providence Association was also represented by Rev. I. T. Richardson.

Memoirs were read before the conference of Rev. James R. Moore, Rev. Charles Cummings, and Rev. J. S. Payne, deceased during the conference year, Mr. Payne's death occurring, as is well known, at the date of the session. Mr. Moore was a native of the United States, had received early advantages in education, and pursued the study of medicine. He had maintained a Christian profession for fifty years, joined the Liberia Conference in 1867, and was at the time of his death a supernumerary on the Bexley Circuit. He was characterized as an earnest worker and a warm lover of Liberia; his style as "soft and persuasive, but cogent and conclusive." Mr. Cummings was a native of the Kroo tribe, and in the later years of his ministry he labored as a missionary among them. He was regarded as a man of ability, and highly esteemed by his brethren. There is a gloom hanging over the manner of his death, and a strong suspicion of treachery on the part of the native heathen for whose welfare he lived. Mr. Payne went to Liberia from the United States in his boyhood, being a member of a large family. He displayed unusual ability in the pulpit. "In fact, he has been justly esteemed," says the memoir, "as the prince of Liberian pulpit orators." "He was distinguished for his great firmness and decision of character. He identified himself with every thing that looked to the elevation of the negro race and of Liberia, and used his pen freely when necessity called for it." To the Conference at his bedside he said: "Be faithful; preach the Word;" and again: "The Lord has richly provided for us. He is complete; He is ample; He will receive all who apply to Him. I am now able to realize this. I have no other hope, no other trust." And just before he breathed his last, "All is well. Hallelujah!"

As two laborers were digging a drain on the 1st inst., in St. Louis, on the premises of James E. Haggerty, No. 912 Collins Street, they found between $20,000 and $30,000 in coin, which is dated in the last century.

CHILDREN'S DAY CIRCULARS—1882.

In obedience to requests made by Annual Conferences, our Children's day circulars for this year will be sent out early, in the month of April. It is desired that they may be in the hands of all pastors and their associates in Canada time for the best plans and preparations, and yet not so soon as to be in danger of being overlooked. Children's day will come this year on the eleventh of June, and it is thought desirable that official notice be given of it about eight weeks in advance. The careful preparation and mailing of so many circulars, containing such a variety and quantity of printed matter, is not the work of a day. Hence, as they cannot be mailed simultaneously, those sent to the greater distances will be posted first. But it is intended that all shall receive them by or before the middle of April, except in those Conferences that meet in the first half of that month. For them, the circulars will be mailed as soon as the new Minutes are printed. For the five conferences to meet after the middle of April, the circulars will be sent early, according to their Minutes of 1881, and pastors receiving them are specially requested to dispose of them properly before leaving for their Conference sessions. In all the Conferences, except those in foreign countries and the seven that will meet on the 5th and 12th of April, the circulars should be delivered before April 16. Any pastor, therefore, in all the Conferences not included in the exception, that up to April 18 shall not have received one of the circulars in question, is invited to apply for it by postal or otherwise.

The circulars will be sent in stamped Government envelopes bearing the imprint of the Board of Education. Each envelope will contain two copies of our report on the Children's day collections of 1881 for pastors and superintendents, a special circular to pastors, [illegible] circulars to Sunday-school and Christian workers, a form of report, and a return envelope. Dear friends, now is the time for action, we know that some of you can not do as much now as in the fall, but can you not do something?

Work on the new building is moving rapidly, and we need help from every pastor.

Shall we not have a report from every appointment at the close of this month? W. W. HOOPER.

From Palestine District.

MR. EDITOR:—The Palestine District of the Texas Conference has been glanced through once more. The last three months has been one of the hardest times that I have ever witnessed. It has been almost impossible to travel in parts of the District, and a harder time to live has never been seen. Nine out of ten of our people, who are farmers, have to live on the credit system until crops are made. It has been a hard struggle for preachers to live. In the midst of poverty there has been some increase in the District in members this quarter. By the grace of God the work still moves on.

We are trying to build at several places, but we find it almost impossible [illegible] Our church at Crockett was burned about the time of our last Annual Conference and we are preparing to build again, though we find it a struggle. Our work at Tyler is on a stand. This is one of the most noted places in Eastern Texas. We have one of the most central lots in town, yet to build we must have help to move on. We asked for a donation to build, but as the trustees could not comply with the terms of the Church Extension Board we could not [illegible], so we stand. We are determined to struggle on. I hope the brethren will not forget [illegible] collections. I hope you will publish the amounts assessed to each charge, which are as follows:

SECOND QUARTER. LESSON IV. April 23. CHRIST WALKING ON THE SEA. (Mark vi. 45-56.)

After Jesus had so wonderfully fed the five thousand, he sent his disciples across the Sea of Galilee, and he went alone to pray. He was the Son of God, and yet he needed to pray alone. Do we follow his example? O we need it. We must do it. We can't follow Jesus without praying to him often alone. The oftener we pray alone, the nearer we get to him, and the safer we are.

The disciples obeyed Jesus; took a boat and started across the sea. But the rowing was hard. Jesus was alone on the mountain praying, yet [illegible] from them, but he saw them. Jesus could see and care for them in darkness just as well as in daytime. So in the middle of the night Jesus came to them. Did Jesus come in a ship? No, he came as no man could come. Jesus came walking on the water. The disciples were frightened, and cried out; but the voice of their dear Master answered: Be of good cheer. It is I, be not afraid. Then Jesus went into the ship, and the wind was still.

When they landed, the people knew Jesus, and began to run about and spread the news that he was come. Every where he went people came with their sick to be healed. O what a hurry they were in! They came carrying the sick on beds, and crowded and pushed their way so he could see their sick, or touch him. So many as could even touch his garments were cured.

O what a lesson for us all! We are all sin-sick, our friends are sin-sick, and Jesus stands ready to cure us, if we only will let him. We don't need to walk miles, and crowd and push our way to him. We can kneel in our homes, knock at heaven's door with a prayer, and Jesus comes. Won't you open your heart and let him come in? Be like Jesus—pray often alone. Just a few little words will reach him as well as the longest, grandest prayer. The prayer Jesus loves best is this: Jesus, save me from sin.—Western Christian Advocate.

Whisky vs. Christianity.

What shall be done to cure the great evil of whisky drinking? I need not weary the many readers of the columns of this good paper, which has done so much, and is still doing much for the elevation of the people, by pointing out the great evils that have been done in the United States by the use of whisky, nor to one of those States, but can come as near home as Robertson county, Springfield, the county seat of said county. This little town is situated on the south-eastern division of the L. & N. R. R. 29 miles from Nashville, with a population of five or six hundred, and has four wholesale whisky houses, four saloons. The saloons are kept open every day including Sunday. Most especially is Sunday a day of joy and gladness for the whisky drinkers. Men and women are seen hankering around the dram shops. Drunken men and women are no strange sight to be seen on the streets, swearing, fighting, gambling, etc. Nearly every visit that I have made, to my disgust I have seen one or more quarts of whisky as an ornament for the mantel or bureau, and upon making a call at the house of the Baptist minister the sister passed around the bottle just before asking us in to dine, and said it would give us a good appetite.

I was called by the minister of the A. M. E. Church to assist him in a protracted effort, and the good brother preached exceedingly well, but it seemed to take no effect. He asked me if I did not smell the scent of whisky. I said "yes," for it seemed that a barrel had been opened in the church. Then I noticed two of the brethren, after kneeling in the attitude of prayer, failed, when the amen was said, to respond. The good brother's attention was called to them, and he asked them from their knees but they could not get up, for they were dead drunk. That meeting lasted two weeks and the result was that only one came forward for prayer. No doubt if the good prophet was [illegible] from the ancient tomb, he would want for sufficient tears with which to weep.

This is the field for temperance workers. God be thanked that the glorious old M. E. Church is an example in this place, for her members are clear. Come over and help us. D. COOK.

THE TRUE STORY OF JOHN SMYTH, THE SE-BAPTIST. By Henry Martyn Dexter, Boston: Lee and Shepard.

A collection of historical evidences on the subject of baptism, to answer the inquiry whether dipping was a new mode of baptism in England in 1641, together with criticism of alleged ancient records. The author claims to have examined seventy five per cent. of a formidable array of publications on these controversies.

"Job's Comforter, or Scientific Sympathy," by Joseph Parker, D. D., is No. 70 of the Standard Series. Price 10 cents. A droll satire, praised by Prof. Tyndall and Mr. Gladstone.

"Mrs. Mayburn's Twins," with her trials with them in the morning, noon, afternoon and evening of one day, by John Habberton, author of "Helen's Babies," has already passed a second edition. The New York Sun, in an editorial notice of it, says, "It is a most interesting, wholesome, and instructive picture of certain phases of married life." We commend it to the thoughtful attention of all young husbands. No better book has been published this year, than 'Mrs. Mayburn's Twins,' by John Habberton. All wives should own it, and all husbands should profit by it. It is published by T. B. Peterson & Bros., No. 306 Chestnut street, Philadelphia."

Sick and bilious headache, and all derangements of stomach and bowels, cured by Dr. Pierce's "Pellets"—or anti-bilious granules. 25 cents a vial. No cheap boxes to allow waste of virtues. By druggists.

The Hebrew Student is a new Chicago monthly devoted to Old Testament literature and interpretation. Subscription $1 per year. W. R. Harper, editor.

The Outlook, a reformatory and missionary monthly paper, issued at Alfred Centre, New York, is the newest Christian helper we are glad to welcome.

The Boston Musical Herald for April continues its article descriptive of chord instruments, has an interesting editorial on musical conductors, and three pieces of music with notes.

The American Antiquarian and Oriental Journal for January, has an illustrated article on ancient temple architecture, and others on ceremonial axes found in Florida mounds, Dakotan languages, Indian superstitions, and the mound builders. Chicago: Jameson & Morse, $3 per year.

A striking portrait of James Russell Lowell will be the frontispiece of the Century Magazine for May, which will also contain a masterly study, by Edmund Clarence Stedman, of the life and writings of the author of "The Biglow Papers." The same number of the magazine will offer also a recently written poem by Mr Lowell, entitled "Estrangement."

The numbers of The Living Age for March 31st and April 8th contain Sir Charles Lyell, Quarterly; Monkeys, and The Vistas of the Past in the Moon and the Earth, Contemporary; Miss Ferrier's Novels, and the Yellowstone Geysers, Nineteenth Century; How Gilbert Sherrard Fared in the Flood, and The Poetry of Dante Gabriel Rosetti, Fraser; Destruction of Egyptian Monuments, Blackwood; Jane Austin, Temple Bar; March in the Country, Saturday Review; On the Whale Fishery of the Basque Provinces of Spain, and American Ants, Nature; A Famous Quaker School, All the Year Round; with instalments of "The Freres" and "Robin," and the usual amount of poetry. Littell & Co., Boston, are the publishers.

A prominent manufacturing firm in Massachusetts recently subscribed for more than three hundred copies of St. Nicholas, to be sent the children of its employees. They were paid for from a fund which had been set aside for educational purposes. The May number of this magazine will have some special features in the way of illustrations which will surpass anything heretofore. There will be eleven full-page engravings, one of them on "Wolf-reared Children," by Charles L. Brace, Secretary of the Children's Aid Society. Nineteen other illustrations add their attractions to this one paper. Mrs. Clement will deal with Correggio, in her series on Art and Artists, giving an opportunity to reproduce some of the great master's choicest work.

The May Century is to have a brilliant list of contributors. Thomas Carlyle, James Russell Lowell, Edmund Clarence Stedman, W. D. Howells, Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, Archibald Forbes, Constance Fenimore Woolson, John G. Saxe, Frank R. Stockton, Edward Everett Hale, Andrew Lang, Richard Grant White, "Uncle Remus," and H. C. Bunner, are names which are known in many fields of literature, and all these and more are to be represented in this notable number. Elihu Vedder furnishes the second of his cover designs for special numbers, and the frontispiece portrait of James Russell Lowell is said to be an excellent likeness, as well as one of Mr. Kruell's best engravings.

A CONNECTICUT MILLIONAIRE GIVES $1,000,000 FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF THE NEGRO RACE.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 12.—Assemblyman Patterson to-day introduced a bill to incorporate the trustees of the John F. Slater fund. The bill names Rutherford B. Hayes, of Ohio; Morrison R. Waite, of the District of Columbia; Wm. E. Dodge, of Massachusetts; Danl. C. Gilmore, of Maryland; John A. Stuart, of New York; Alfred H. Colquitt, of Georgia; Morris K. Jessup, of New York; James P. Boyce, of Kentucky, and Wm. A. Slater, of Connecticut, as incorporators of the fund, to be called the John F. Slater fund. Rutherford B. Hayes is named as the first vice-president. The fund is to consist of one million dollars. Slater is a wealthy gentleman, of Norwich, Conn. In a letter to the board of trustees, Slater writes as follows: "The general object which I desire to have exclusively pursued is the uplifting of the lately emancipated population of the Southern States and their posterity, by conferring on them the blessing of a Christian education. The disabilities formerly suffered by this people and their singular patience and fidelity in the great crisis of the nation, establish a just claim on the sympathy and good will of humane and patriotic men. I cannot but feel the compassion that is due in view of their prevailing ignorance, and which exists through no fault of their own."

Slater purposely leaves the trustees the largest liberty in making such changes in the methods of applying the fund as may from time to time seem wise. He suggests that the education of teachers for the colored race may be the wisest purpose to which the fund can be put. If, after 33 years, three-fourths of the trustees shall, for any reason, agree that there is no further use for the fund in the form it is now instituted, he authorizes them to appropriate the capital to the establishments subsidiary to visiting institutions of higher education, so as to make them more freely accessible to poor colored students under the present institution of the fund. He specially wishes that neither the principal nor income be expended in land or buildings for any purpose other than that of a safe and productive investment for income.

Mr. Richard Crowley, of Salem, Mass., says: "I can, from personal experience, recommend Brown's Iron Bitters as being a permanent cure for indigestion, dyspepsia, sick stomach, painful urination, etc. It really strengthens the whole general system. Its effect is most wonderful.

Work on the Columbia, S. C., canal was begun with 60 convicts. The event was celebrated by an artillery salute and other demonstrations inspired by the magnitude of the enterprise. Cotton factories will be in operation here within the next year, and 11,000 horse power will be developed.

As he was ascending the pulpit step, one of the elders buttonholed him to whisper an additional caution: "The liquor dealer has just come into church, and he gives us a lift sometimes. I wish you would be particular not to allude to the whiskey business or the temperance question." The young minister, getting frightened to see the moral ground thus steadily narrowing before him, inquired: "Whom or what shall I preach against, then?" The elder's reply came with an air of triumph: "Preach against the Mormons; they haven't got a friend in town!"

It is probable that the young lady celebrated in those charming lines of Robert Burns, had tan, moth-spots and freckles, with other beauty blemishes. For such conditions, Dr. Benson's Skin Cure should be on every lady's toilet table.

A WONDERFUL [illegible] d

SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.

These Glasses are chemically treated in the process of manufacture, and possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analysed by American and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and can in some cases restore the sight if used in time, but in no case can the eye become impaired by their use for the following reasons:

1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye, completely doing away with that tiresome sensation that is usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours' use.

2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.

3. The chemicals keep the glasses cold, and the result is that the optic nerves are always cool, doing away with any feverish sensation to the eye.

4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, with no distressing or tiresome sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.

New Orleans Preachers on the Ritual.

The following resolutions were ordered to be printed in the SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE by the New Orleans Preachers meeting convened at Wesley Chapel, March 16th. For a conformity of ideas, and to work to an advantage in administrating the rites of the discipline, which some measure have been neglected. In the administration of the Lord's Supper,

Be it Resolved, That we impress these three things upon the minds of our people:

First—Fasting and prayer.

Second—Sermon on the Crucifixion of Christ.

Third—Meditation on the Death of Christ.

ON THE BURIAL OF THE DEAD—THE SERVICE AT CHURCH OR HOME.

First—A brief Exhortation touching the Life of the Deceased.

Second—Singing and Prayer.

Third—Reading the Ritual or any Appropriate Scripture.

Fourth—Invite all concerned to take a last look at the Corpse.

AT THE GRAVE.

First—Read that portion of the Discipline recommended.

Second—Conduct to suit occasion—This is left to the judgment of the Preacher.

Third—Benediction.

Seeing the great evil arising from the vigils kept over the dead called wakes

Resolved, That while we hold vigils over the dead ought to be kept, we discountenance the great excitements caused by these gatherings, making night hideous, and placing us in a light detrimental to us as preachers. R. L. BEAL, Secretary.

MISSISSIPPI.

L. A. Thompson, Belton: "Bro. S. Thomas is very acceptable to the churches. We have torn down the old church, about a mile from town, and rebuilt it in town. Our Sunday-schools are improving."

L. L. Shumpert, Columbus: "Our church is in good condition. We gave the elder $18 45. On Sunday night the church was full to overflowing. We have a most excellent choir. Our Sabbath-school is growing, Bro. E. Richard is Superintendent."

J. M. Nevils, Kosciusko: "Elder Barney held our quarterly conference. The trustees reported ninety dollars on hand to build a church with, raised within four months. The elder greatly encouraged the people."

The New York Christian Advocate reports the opening remarks of Bishop Hurst at the Wilmington Conference. For simple eloquence they are rarely equaled. It is not strange the Conference melted down in listening to them:

"Brethren, I come to the Wilmington Conference with emotions such as I cannot feel in visiting any other Conference, and will not attempt to describe. I was born within the bounds of the Conference; here both my parents died, and in this Conference I was left a lonely orphan. Brethren, I see here to-day the minister who, when I had no thought of becoming a Christian, as I was returning from a little debating society in the Academy in Cambridge, asked me if I did not wish to meet my parents in heaven. I told him I did. That man, brethren, who led me to the altar, I see here to-day. I well remember the first New Testament I ever owned. I see the minister here today who gave it to me, and in all my wanderings I have preserved that little Testament, and have it here with me in Middletown now."

SAMARITAN NERVINE.

Samaritan Nervine

Cures Epileptic Fits, Spasms, Convulsions, St. Vitus Dance, Virtigo, Hysterics, Insanity, Apoplexy, Paralysis, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all Nervous diseases. This infallible remedy will positively eradicate every species of Nervous Derangement, and drive them away from whence they came, never to return again. It utterly destroys the germs of disease by neutralizing the hereditary taint or poison in the system, and thoroughly eradicates the disease, and utterly destroys the cause.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Female Weakness, general Debility, Leucorrhoea or Whites, Painful Menstruation, Ulceration of the Uterus, Internal Heat, Gravel, Inflammation of the Bladder, Irritability of the Bladder. For Wakefulness at night, there is no better remedy. During the change of life no female should be without it. It quiets the Nervous System and gives rest, comfort and nature's sweet sleep.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Alcoholism, Drunkenness and the habit of Opium Eating. These degrading habits are by far the worst evils that have ever befallen suffering humanity. Thousands die annually from these noxious drugs. The drunkard drinks liquor not because he likes it, but for the pleasure of drinking and treating his friends, little thinking that he is on his road to ruin. Like the Opium Eater, he first uses the drug in small quantities as a harmless antidote. The soothing influence of the drug takes strong hold upon its victim, leading him on to his own destruction. The habits of Opium Eating and Liquor Drinking are precisely what eating is to alimentiveness, as over-eating first inflames the stomach, which redoubles its cravings until it paralyzes both the stomach and appetite. So every drink of liquor or dose of opium, instead of satisfying, only adds to its fierce fires, until it consumes the vital force and then itself. Like the gluttonous tape-worm, it cries: "Give, give, give!" but never enough until its own rapacity devours itself. Samaritan Nervine gives instant relief in all such cases. It produces sleep, quiets the nerves, builds up the nervous system, and restores body and mind to a healthy condition.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Nervous Dyspepsia, Palpitation of the Heart, Asthma, Bronchitis, Scrofula, Syphilis, diseases of the Kidneys and all diseases of the urinary organs. Nervous debility, caused by the indiscretions of youth, permanently cured by the use of this invaluable remedy. To you, young middle-aged and old men, who are covering your sufferings as with a mantle by silence, look up, you can be saved by timely efforts, and make ornaments to society, and jewels in the crown of your Maker, if you will. Do not keep this a secret longer, until it saps your vitals, and destroys both body and soul. If you are thus afflicted, take DR. RICHMOND'S Samaritan Nervine. It will restore your shattered nerves, arrest premature decay, impart tone and energy to the whole system

CLEOPATRA OR THE Queen of Sheba's Beauty WAS BUT SKIN DEEP.

The renowned Queen of Sheba, with all her royal pomp, magnificent apparel, and brilliant retinue, would never have appeared within the presence of the grandest of monarchs of the past, had she not also possessed that which is the crowning glory of the female person—a skin unchallenged for its Oriental softness and its almost transcendental purity. Cleopatra, holding emperors at bay, and ruling empires by her word, had quickly lost her charm and power by one attack of blotches, or of pimples, or of horrid tan and freckles.

WOMAN RULES THE WORLD

by her beauty, not less than by by her purity of character, loveliness of disposition and unselfish devotion. Indeed, in the estimation of perhaps too many men beauty in a body takes precedence over every other consideration. Beauty thus forms an important part of woman's "working capital," without which too many, (if not bankrupt in what relates to influence within the circle where they move) are powerless for great good. Hence we see not only the propriety but the duty of every lady preserving with zealous care that which to her is essential to success, and influence and usefulness in life. And, since "beauty is but skin deep," the utmost care and vigilance are required to guard it against the many ills that flesh is heir to. Among the great and annoying enemies of beauty, as well as of comfort, happiness and health, are those pestiferous and horrid skin diseases—tetters humors, eczema, (salt rheum) rough and scaly eruptions, ulcers, pimples, and all diseases of the hair and scalp. For the cure of these, Dr. C. W. Benson, of Baltimore, after years of patient study and investigation devoted to diseases of the skin, at last brought forth his celebrated SKIN CURE, which has already by its marvelous cures established itself as the great remedy for all diseases of the skin, whatever be their names or character. Its success has been immense and unparalleled. All druggists have it. It is elegantly put up, two bottles in one package. Internal and external treatment. Price $1 00.

OF EITHER SEX

EVERYONE PRAISES.

Sick headache, nervous headache, neuralgia, nervousness, paralysis, dyspepsia, sleeplessness and brain diseases, positively cured by Dr. C. W. Benson's Celery and Chamomile Pills. A man was sawing wood recently in his back yard. He severed two sticks as thick as your wrist, and then went into the house.

"Mary," said he to his wife, "my country needs me; there's no use of talking; we've just got to slaughter all these Injuns; no true patriot can be expected to hang around a wood-pile these days."

"John," said his wife, "if you fight Indians as well as you saw wood and support your family, it would take 118 like you to capture one squaw, and you would have to catch her when she had the ague and throw pepper in her eyes." John went back to the wood pile.

Well-Merited Success.

A gentleman once asked a distinguished dispensing druggist to explain the secret of the almost universal demand for Dr. Richmond's Samaritan Nervine. He said that it was in fact a genuine medicine—such a compound as every good physician would prescribe for the disease which it was advertised to cure. Of course it cost less than any druggist would charge for the same article supplied on a physician's prescription, and besides, there was a saving of the doctor's fee in addition. Moreover, by buying the drugs in such enormous quantities, and having a perfect apparatus for compounding the mixture, he was not only enabled to get better articles in the first place, but also to present the medicine in better form and at less price than the same preparation could be possibly obtained from any other source. Dr. Richmond has devoted all his energies to alleviation of human suffering. With this end in view, and with his whole heart in his great labor for the benefit of the afflicted, he has achieved marked and merited success. There can be no real success without true merit. That his success is real is evidenced by the fact his reputation as a man and physician does not deteriorate, and the fact that there is a steadily increasing demand for his Samaritan Nervine proves that it is no nostrum, but a reliable remedy. He has repeatedly informed the public that it is no patent medicine, and no patent has ever been asked for or obtained. Neither does he advertise it as a cure-all. There are hundreds of diseases that he acknowledges it will not cure. It may be urged that some of these diseases are so widely different that it seems absurd to prescribe the same remedy. They may differ in symptoms, yet in character be precisely similar; and then we must take into consideration the fact that remedies may possess various properties. Thus some medicines are both tonic and alterative; others may be tonic and laxative, the properties differing according to the quantity administered and the time and circumstances which demand its employment.

In the manufacture of any pharmaceutical preparation the purity and strength of the material used, and the requisite machinery to be employed, are among the chief essentials. The first is insured by purchasing the ingredients in large quantities, whereby the exercise of greater care in selecting the materials can be afforded, and the second can only be accomplished where the business is sufficiently extensive to warrant a large outlay of capital in procuring chemical apparatus. These facts apply with especial force to the manufacture of our medicines, their quality having been vastly improved since the demand has become so great as to require their manufacture in very large quantities.

These ideas are not mere speculative remarks to mislead the reader, or to imbue him with false views of the superiority of our medicines. While inspecting Dr. Richmond's establishment you would be surprised to see the admirable facilities, both chemical and mechanical, for the conduct of the business. Every thing is arranged in the most perfect order, and while to the general observer [illegible] the establishment.

About those deserts blown!
How many strange vicissitudes has seen,
How many histories known!

Perhaps the camels of the Ishmaelite
Trampled and passed it o'er,
When into Egypt from the patriarch's sight
His favorite son they bore.

Held close in her caress,
Whose pilgrimage of hope and love and faith

with a Tribune correspondent, he described the state of affairs and the outlook. Speaking of the work of his own church, Dr. Hartzell said: "We began the reorganization of the Methodist Episcopal Church after the war, having a membership of from 60,000 to 75,000 in the border slave States. Our organization, you will please remember, is an entirely different affair from the Methodist Church South, which has a membership of about 800,000. We began in the large centers and gradually extended our work back into the country. We now have a membership of more than 400,000, about equally divided between the races. We have twenty-one institutions of learning among the colored people, in which more than 3,000 young men and woman are being educated, and we have sixteen seminaries and colleges for white people, in which more than 2,000 young men and women are taught. We have built about 3,000 new churches in the South since the war, and all of our thirty-seven seminaries and colleges have been built since the war. The South has a population, according to the new census, of a little more than 18,000,000, and in that population, which is little more than one-third of the entire Nation, are found 70 per cent of the illiterate people of the country. Of these 1,000,000 are adult white people who cannot read and about 3,000,000 adult colored people who cannot read. In this region where these vast aggregations of illiteracy exist are chosen three-fourths of a majority of the Electoral College every four years, 82 per cent of a majority of the United States Senate and a proportionate representation in the House of Representatives. The concentration of illiteracy in a single section adds greatly to its danger."

"Is the South doing nothing to help itself?" asked the correspondent.

"Certainly; the public school systems of the South are improving, and it is fair to state that in every State the number of strong men who are coming forward in favor of public schools for all the people is increasing yearly. Still, the poverty of the South added to the still remaining prejudice against public schools, makes the work difficult. There is a strong minority in every Legislature of the South in favor of public schools, so that no measure actually hostile to the public school system can pass. In some places there are no marked evidences of progress. In all the cities and large towns of the South the public school systems are fair, and in some cases very good, and the facilities are as good for the colored people as for the white. The difficulties are found in the hill regions, where race antagonisms are more intense, where the poverty of the people is greater, and where the prejudices of the ignorant white people are more strongly predominant. For example, Mr. Denton, the State Superintendent of [illegible] in Arkansas, told me a [illegible] ago of several places in [illegible] State where the people had refused year after year to vote a local [illegible] for the schools. Within two [illegible] they have changed entirely, [illegible] are now supporting large and [illegible] schools in their midst. The [illegible] work done in the South by the churches of the North has had a large influence for good. The South is now expending in the [illegible] from $800,000 to $1,000,000 [illegible] and schools, principally [illegible].

"The Peabody Fund has also [illegible] in the work. It helps [illegible] and helps only [illegible] themselves [illegible] dollars a year [illegible] in establishing [illegible] public [illegible] the necessary [illegible] the problem is [illegible] which is developing [illegible] colored people, [illegible] are open to [illegible] where [illegible] 1880 [illegible] school [illegible] Confer- [illegible] mostly [illegible] purposes in the last fifteen years. Twenty-five or thirty per cent of the Southern white people are highly educated, and are delightful people to meet and associate with, but drop below that and you find as low a population as can be found anywhere, and the illiterate class among the white people is the more deplorable because it is the result of generations of prejudice.

"Now, the ignorance and illiteracy of the South are the outgrowth of slavery, and slavery was a crime of which the whole Nation shared the guilt. The nation freed the slaves, gave them the franchise and became responsible for them. Surely it is the Nation's duty to help fit them to discharge a freeman's duties intelligently. It is impossible for the South to do this work by itself. Take for example the City of Charleston. The valuation of the taxable property has decreased fifty per cent, or from $45,000,000 to $21,000,000, Although Charleston taxes herself $3,500,000 for her public schools, which is more than Boston taxes her people, still the public school facilities are inadequate, and that is true of the whole South. I think the proper thing for the National Government to do is to make a direct appropriation of money from the Treasury. The help is needed at once, and the demand is imperative. It is foolish to wait for the sale of public lands, and then to take the interest on the proceeds as proposed in one measure. That would postpone the work too long. It might be a wise provision for the future. The Government ought to appropriate $15,000,000 to $20,000,000, and distribute it on the basis of illiteracy. The money should be administered under the supervision of the Government to aid the public school systems already established, and no State should receive any benefit unless it has a well organized public school system of its own, and is willing to expend at least as much as the General Government proposes to give it. The general plan adopted by the Peabody Fund in the administration of its funds would be a very good model for the General Government to follow. A chief feature of this National aid I think ought to be the establishment of Normal Schools. One of the great needs all over the South is teachers. They are few in number, and the majority have not had any regular training. Modern methods of school organization and work are scarcely known in the South outside of the principal cities and towns. A good many of the State Boards are doing excellent work in holding Normal Institutes, and the tendency is in the right direction in all cities, but the work to be done is so immense that the local appliances are wholly inadequate."

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

Our Wesleyan Fathers.

BY D. WISE.

There is no modern Church whose biographical literature is so full of spiritual riches as ours. The lives of our Methodist founders show forth most graphically the spirit and practice of the gospel. They lived in times which tried men's souls, and and amidst persecutions which compelled them to be either heroes or apostates. 'Tis a pity that those precious biographies are not found in every Methodist household.

While perusing a volume soon to be published by our Book Agents, called "Heroic Methodists of the Olden Time," and intended for young people, I made note of the following incidents which, while possessing intrinsic interest, may incline some of your readers to become acquainted with the work in which they were originally recorded.

A PERSECUTING LANDLORD AND AN INTERCEDING QUAKER.

When Methodism was spreading with power in the town of Hareward, England, the lord of the manor sent word to all his tenants saying, "You must quit your farms or give up Methodism."

This was the language of a tyrant and some were so frightened that they began to quit attendance on the meetings. There was, however, an honest Quaker in the town whose heart was stirred up by the landlord's haughty conduct. Visiting his mansion he said to him, in his own quaint way:

"I always thought thou hadst been a reasonable man."

"Why, Joseph, have you any reason to think the contrary now?" [illegible] gentleman, with an air [illegible]

[illegible] will not give thy tenants the same liberty that the King gives his subjects. He gives us liberty of conscience, but thou wilt not give thy subjects that liberty. I advise thee to let them alone. Thou knowest they are honest, industrious men. They pay their rent. Thou hast no business with their consciences. Their consciences are God's. Let them go to heaven their own way."

The truth-telling, plain-speaking Quaker so shamed the persecuting land-owner that he never again meddled with his Methodist tenants.

GOOD ADVICE IN CURIOUS PHRASES.

Early Methodism in England produced some curious characters. Among them was a Northumberland miner, named William Crister. Methodism was the hand by which the blessed Christ lifted this man from a very low estate, placing his feet upon a rock and making him a burning and a shining light among the sons of the coal pits. He was noted not only for deep piety, but for the oddity of his expressions. Speaking one day to his married daughter and her children, he said to them:

"You must all blend. Yes, you must live and love like Christians, blend like eggs in a pudding; for though the eggs are distinct from each other before they are put into the basin, yet, when beat up by the hand, they all mix and flow together and become one—a complete, round whole, and fit for use."

Of course Crister meant by this queer simile that the family should live in harmony of feeling. His grandchildren understood this, and the homeliness of the illustration made it stick fast to their memories. They probably never saw either eggs or pudding afterward without thinking of it.

WILLIAM CRISTER'S CLASS MEETING SPEECHES.

A class-meeting is no place for any one to air his eccentricities. But Crister, being a born oddity, was eccentric in class as well as elsewhere. He had a habit of speaking aloud whenever a thought touched his feelings. Hence, after taking his seat, he would say:

"Praised be the Lord, I have got through another week, unhurt in body, soul and mind. I never had a bone broken in my life."

On one occasion the death of some fellow Christians being mentioned, he said: "Aye, I think I see them stretching out their necks and looking over the battlements of heaven to see whether or not we are coming—whether we have not lost our way. Bless the Lord we are on the same road." Shortly after a pause occurring, he abruptly remarked: "We should always be ready when the knock comes to the door."

The solemnity of his manner while saying this, having effected the class, he startled those nearest him by rapping the boards with his knuckles and asking himself in an undertone, "Are you ready?" Answering his own question, he replied, "Yes," and then added, as if speaking for his friends, "Come away, then."

Nothing could have excused such a performance as this, bordering as it did on disorder, but the simplicity and sincerity of the brother's character. He was simply thinking aloud. Hence his class-mates not only tolerated his quaint ways but were also spiritually profited by them. Nevertheless no one should try to imitate him.

A WESLEYAN PATRIARCH'S GLORIOUS DEATH.

When the Rev. Jonathan Macken, a Wesleyan preacher, was more than four score years of age he felt that his strength was failing and that he was very near the gates of the Celestial City. The thought of being so near to his Lord did not chill but cheered his heart, and he said to his friends:

"It is a blessing for Christ to be with us in life, but it is the top of blessings for us to be with Christ in heaven; but we must put off the rags of mortality before we can put on the robes of glory."

At another time he observed: "So far as any man trembles at death he wants love. Love casts out all its fears, and we do no honor to our heavenly Father when we are unwilling or afraid to go home." One day he exhorted his friends not to neglect sacred prayer, saying: "You must not fail to keep up true secret trade with heaven. A Christian can as well live without food, see without eyes or walk without feet, as live to God without secret prayer."

When his last hour had come he cried out: "I desire to be dissolved, that I may be with Christ."

A friend entered his chamber a little before he ascended, but his strength being nearly gone, he could only speak in broken accents the joy which shone in his eyes and beamed in all his features. Presently he raised one of his hands and, with a radiant smile upon his lips, cried: "Look, James; look!" His son gazed on his father and asked what he wished him to see, but no answer came. His father's soul, enraptured by some heavenly vision, was already casting his crown at the Master's feet.

"Of no distemper, of no blast he died,
But fell like autumn fruit that mellowed long;
Even wondered at, because he dropped no sooner.
Fate seemed to wind him up for seventy years,
Yet freely ran he on ten winters more;
Till like a clock worn out with eating time,
The wheels of weary life at last stood still."

Our Church biographies are full of such incidents as the above. Pastors could do no better thing in the way of books than to persuade their flocks to become familiar with them.

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

Okolona District. Mississippi Conference.

DEAR EDITOR: Having finished my first round on this district, perhaps a few notes from this part of the Master's vineyard may not be uninteresting to the many readers of the SOUTHWESTERN.

The work on this district began Saturday, February 11, at West Point, with grand indications for a glorious year's work. Rev. I. L. Pratt, the new pastor, had started off nicely. At our late annual conference this charge was made a station, and the members and friends are much pleased, and they say that they are determined to support their pastor. May God bless them in their efforts. Bro. L. F. White, on the circuit, had won the hearts of his people, and the members express themselves as being delighted to know that they had a pastor that could devote all his time upon the circuit.

Okolona was the next point, and the people were pleased to have their pastor return to them for the second year. Rev. B. L. Crump is a faithful pastor. We have one of the best Sabbath-schools in the district here. The very best young men and women of the place attend. The African M. E. Church, that was built within a stone's cast of ours a few years ago, to break the M. E. church up, has about broke itself up. It was very unfortunate for them to build so near our church. Perhaps they might have done better had they built in some other part of town. The same thing was done in West Point, and a tremendous plea was made for the members of the M. E. church to join the A. M. E. church. That it is conducted altogether by colored men, is the only reason that could be assigned for the change. But the members of the Methodist Episcopal church asked the questions, What can be gained by uniting with the A. M. E. church? Are they better prepared to spread Scripture holiness, and are they better equipped for educating the poor? Can they do more in aiding needy churches, and is the influence of the African church greater than that of the old mother? These most reasonable questions were not answered satisfactorily, hence the members of the M. E church are perfectly satisfied to remain where they are.

Bro. C. E. Gates, on the circuit, has been kindly received, and the prospects for a glorious year's work are favorable.

Our work at Houston, under the pastorate of Bro. B. L. Nevils, is progressing as well as could be expected, and at Buena Vista the pastor has made a good impression upon his people, and it is hoped that a good work for the Master will be done this year.

Old Father Miles Proctor, on the Union Grove Circuit, still leads his people on to victory.

Rev. R. Snell, on the Athens work, had been kindly received.

Bro. A. Boyd, on the Aberdeen Circuit, was at his post of duty. His report to the quarterly conference, and that of the official members, shows the work to be in a healthy condition.

Rev. W. McDonald, our new pastor at Aberdeen Station, the seat of our late annual conference, has been gladly received, and has won the hearts of the people. He has made some change as to the time of preaching, which works like a charm. In place of preaching at 3 o'clock p. m., the services are now as follows: preaching at 11 o'clock and at night, and class-meeting at 3 o'clock p. m. The large church is filled to overflowing. We have one of the best Sabbath-schools here in the State. Our Superintendent, Bro. F. G. Bumpass, knows how to conduct a Sabbath-school, and he is well thought of. He is ably assisted by a splendid corps of teachers.

Starkville was the next appointment, March 4–5. I found Bro. Calvert at his post of duty. He had been kindly received by his people. At this place we had a most lively quarterly conference—three combined—that of the station, the circuit, and the Pike Circuit, the reports all showing the work doing well.

Father Thomas Brown, the faithful pastor of the Whitfield Circuit, and his faithful brethren were on hand, although we had a great deal of rain. But we had a glorious time.

On account of high waters, I did not get to Greensboro. The conference was held by the pastor, Bro. Wm. Gatewood, who is doing a grand work. Preparations have already been made to build two new churches on the circuit. Eight dollars worth of Sabbath-school books had been put in the schools.

Rev. W. Jones has entered upon his third year at Crawford, with renewed earnestness. His administration has given the people of Crawford satisfaction.

At Columbus our church has been greatly revived. The new pastor, Rev. L. L. Shumpert, was kindly received by the people, and has not only won the hearts of the people, but is keeping them. They continue to greet him with large congregations. At the quarterly meeting was a time of an outpouring of the Holy Ghost, after which the pastor commenced a protracted meeting, which resulted in the conversion of over thirty precious souls and fifty five accessions to the church within two weeks. The old members of the church here say that there never was such a revival here before. Truly we can say that the M. E. Church in Columbus is alive. Columbus Mission—some have said, What does that mean? It means in this place progress. Columbus is a growing city, and it is soon to have two through fare lines of railroads. The present indications are that it will soon be a much larger place. The Methodist Episcopal Church must prepare to do her part of the great work, and for the vast numbers that are looking to her for the gospel and education. Bro. R. Hall, who has been a member of our church here, and a faithful and acceptable local preacher, has the work in charge. The mission consists of a small church near the corporation line, northeast part of town, known as Baily Town, and another preaching-place known as Wentson Town. It is hoped that much good may be done.

Columbus Circuit: Bro. H. H. Wilbourn, on account of so much rain and high waters, has not done very much upon the work.

Bro. A. W. Wright, at Tupelo, is doing a good work; has a splendid Sabbath-school, and is greatly beloved by the people. We expect a grand year for the work at Tupelo.

On the first of this month I found Rev. W. H. H. Gallion in the midst of a glorious revival at Corinth. Some thirty or more had been added to the church. On Sunday we had a glorious time; the church was not only spiritually alive, but it was financially also. The ministerial collection for the day amounted to $63 30, which for the hardness of these times is good. Our church at Corinth, is fast becoming one of the leading churches in the Conference. Bro. A. Williams, on the Circuit, has made a good beginning, and the prospect is really encouraging for the work there this year.

At Ripley I found what was once told at one of our annual conferences, of a certain old minister, by one of our distinguished visitors, who warned his brethern to go to their appointments praying, for he said "the devil is not dead yet," how deeply did I regret to find this true at Ripley. The devil had manifested himself in a way that would be astonishing to every minister of the itinerancy. But I am thankful to say that after many tears shed, and not a few earnest prayers to God by the new pastor, Bro. L. J. Terrill has gained a foot hold, and bids fare to do a good work; the members of the quarterly Conference express themselves as well pleased with him.

Bro. I. Mosely, at New Albany, is doing a good work, and is well spoken of. The members there have inaugurated a new plan to raise the preacher's salary. They have rented six acres of good land, and will plant it in cotton, and it is to be cultivated by the members and friends, and donated to the support of the ministry. In my opinion the plan is good. And the quarterly Conferenc has heartily approved the enterprise.

The people at Pontotoc, was perfectly delighted at the return of their pastor Bro. James Price, who is very earnest faithful and true. He is doing a good work. The Lord met us at Pontotoc. A large number communed as did at most every place upon the district. Upon the whole I can cheerfully say that the cause of Christ and that of Methodism in this part is doing well, and some real progress is being made. The Lord be praised and give us greater success.

Fraternally yours,
J. M. SHUMPERT.

Marriage-Making among the Greenlanders.

One of the Danish missionaries in Greenland describes in his journal the method of marriage-making among that people. Human nature is clearly the same the world over. The suitor came to the missionary and said: "I should like to have a wife." "Whom?" asked the missionary. The man names the woman. "Hast thou spoken to her?" Sometimes the man will answer, "Yes, but thou knowest womankind." More frequently the answer is "No." "Why not?" "It is difficult. Girls are prudish." "Thou must speak to her." The missionary summons the girl, and after a little conversation, says "I think it is time to have thee married." "I won't marry." "What a pity! I had a suitor for thee." "Whom?" The missionary names the man who has sought his aid. "He is good for nothing; won't have him." "But," replies the missionary, "he is a good provider; he throws his harpoon with skill; and he loves thee." Though listening to his praise with evident pleasure, the girl answers, "I won't have him." "Well, I won't force thee. I shall soon find a wife for such a clever fellow." The missionary remains silent, as though he understood her "No" to have ended the matter. At last, with a sigh, she whispers, "just as thou wilt have it." "No," replies the clergyman, "as thou wilt. I'll not persuade thee." Then, with a deep groan, comes "Yes," and it is settled.

A Pardon That Came too Late.

Last September Henry James, a man well known, was arrested on a charge of grand larceny. After the conventional trial, conventional because the facts sustaining the theft were well sustained, James was sentenced to the Penitentiary for five years. Mrs. James, wife of the convicted man, worked faithfully to secure a pardon for her husband. The petition presented was pathetic—five children, those signatures of humanity—signatures which appeal to every man. The poor woman was encouraged in her efforts. She was assured that in due time a pardon would be issued. Yesterday Mrs. James came to the city and called upon F. E. Bridges, her attorney.

"The pardon will no doubt be issued to day," said Mr. Bridges. "The Governor has promised executive clemency shall be extended."

Shortly afterward the Governor issued the pardon. Mrs. James was excited with joy. A telephone message was sent to the Penitentiary. The reply said:

"Henry James died at Lewisburg last December."

The poor woman became frantic. For months she had been hoping, praying, waiting. The children's inquries would be answered by words of hope. The poor woman, of course, did not believe that her husband was guilty.

"I have waited so long," she said. "My children, who dearly love their father, have waited. Night after night they would wonder if papa would be home by the next bed time. Their earnestness made me credulous. At last I began to look for the return of Henry. I did not know but that his pardon would be issued. Now what can I say to the little things? Can I say that while they were wondering how soon their father would be home, while with hope I gave them they were happy with expectancy, that he was dying under guard, a convict?"

The condition of the poor woman is to be pitied. She went home yesterday almost heart-broken.

[illegible] that he called "a thorn in the flesh, the messengers of Satan to buffet him." It appears that this thorn was given to Paul as a means of grace, but what it was we do not know. Few good men would choose the mission of a thorn, they would prefer that of the rose, and yet some of our best men, who are loved and respected by the universal Church are, by a strange and peculiar providence, put in positions where of necessity they must become a thorn.

We have no desire to meddle with family affairs. Ordinarily we have about all that we can attend to of our own. But lately as we have read some of our exchanges we have more than once been reminded of Paul's thorn. There is Rev. Dr. Haygood, a man very much respected by the great mass of Christian people of America. But it is not in his nature to sit quietly down and leave the world as he found it. He believes that there are reforms to be instituted and pressed upon the attention of the people, that there are old errors to be pointed out and combated, and he cannot be silenced with the cry "Peace, peace," when and where he sees positive wrong; he has no "soothing poultice where only the surgeon's sharp knife can give relief." He believes in improvement and progress, and is in dead earnest to make this world better. Now to men who live entirely in the past and seem to think that they ought to take the world as they find it and leave it as they found it, the [illegible] is a thorn. We know of some who are far away from the quiet and peaceful shades of Emory, but [illegible] thorn has reached them, and if we are allowed to judge from the tone and spirit of their communications to the public papers, we should [illegible] to be proving any thing [illegible] means of grace to these brethren [illegible] at the mouth badly [illegible] with their teeth, [illegible] white, and foodless, with [illegible] that shows what manner [illegible] they are of, and how ready they would dispose of Dr. Haygood if the power were given unto them. Mississippi Improvement.

President Arthur sent a special message to Congress on the 18th recommending early and favorable consideration of the recommendations of the Mississippi River Commission. These advise the appropriation of $20,000,000 for closing the existing gaps in the levees and improving the channel of the river. The President says the constitutionality of such appropriations cannot be questioned, and they cannot be regarded as extravagant in view of the immense interests involved. The conclusion is as follows:

The safe and convenient navigation of the Mississippi is a matter of concern to all sections of the country; to the Northwest, with its immense harvests needing transportation; to Alabama and to the inhabitants of the river valley, whose lives and property depend upon the proper construction of the safeguards which protect them from floods. It is of vital importance that the well-matured and comprehensive plan of improvements should be put into operation with as little delay as possible.

The cotton product of the region subject to devastating floods, is a source of wealth to the nation and of great importance in keeping the balance of trade in our favor.

It may not be inopportune to mention that this government has imposed and collected $70,000,000 by tax on cotton, in the production of which the population of the lower Mississippi is largely engaged, and it does not seem inequitable to return a portion of this tax to those who contributed it, particularly as such an action will also result in an important gain to the country at large, and especially so to the great and rich States of the Northwest and to the Mississippi valley.

This message was received with rejoicing all along the valley. Said the Times-Democrat, of this city:

This manly and statesmanlike document is the most important State paper that has been submitted by any President to Congress for many years, and the straightforward and courageous manner in which Mr. Arthur deals with the question which has been dallied with timorously so long both in and out of Congress must excite universal admiration and convince even his enemies that he has not only a strong and resolute mind of his own, but the courage of his convictions.

A Lost Opportunity

Congressman Darrall of this State, to judge from the following special to the St. Louis Republican, from Washington, is not exhibiting the tact and readiness to be expected from one who has served ten years as a Congressman. It is another evidence of the folly of sending other than the ablest men to represent constituencies with great interests at stake:

There is not a little criticism here among friends of the Mississippi river regarding the inexcusable neglect of a favorable opportunity yesterday, to have the bill appropriating over $8,000,000 for the Mississippi, now on the calendar in the House, made a special order. The House improvement committee was called for a motion to the suspension of the rules. The committee had instructed Chairman Thomas to ask the House to make the bills special orders. Mr. Thomas, who has been in ill health for some time, is absent from the city. He left Mr. Darrall, of Louisiana, in charge of the bill. Mr. Darrall was present in the House yesterday when the committee was called, but he neglected to make the motion to suspend the rules and fix a day for the consideration of the bill, and thus was lost the very opportunity which the friends of the Mississippi in the House have for weeks been [illegible]. Thus, too, was lost, [illegible], the only opportunity [illegible] will be presented this [illegible] for securing a hearing in the House for a separate bill [illegible] appropriation for the [illegible]. The least that can be [illegible] of this performance is that it [illegible] wretched arrangement. [illegible] excuse that is even respectable can be given for such [illegible] management.

[illegible] is always based on [illegible] cowardly and mean criminality. Charles Francis Adams, one of the most honorable men of Massachusetts, now in a painful [illegible], a condition that his intimate friends and relatives may [illegible] to screen from the [illegible], was recently waylaid by a [illegible] of scoundrels, whose meanness [illegible] cannot fitly [illegible] and enticed into a gambling [illegible] and there induced to [illegible] to the amount of $20,[illegible] that his friends [illegible] to avoid exposure [illegible] relatives of Mr. [illegible] the proper course and [illegible] the checks or buy [illegible] mental condition [illegible] disgrace to him or [illegible] these scoundrels [illegible] punishment [illegible] their crime. A [illegible] State prison [illegible]

The following resolutions, expressive of the sentiments of thousands in this section, were offered by Hon. Wm. G. Brown and adopted at the meeting held on Monday last:

Resolved, That the Board of Trustees of the New Orleans University, an institution established and maintained by the "Freedman's Aid Society" of the Methodist Episcopal Church for the higher education of children of the freedmen of the South, hail with sincere gratification the entrance in a similar field of Christian enterprise and effort of the noble philanthropist, John F. Slater, of Connecticut, by his munificent donation of a million of dollars for the express purpose of "uplifting the lately emancipated population of the Southern States and their posterity by conferring on them the blessings of Christian education.

Resolved, That in the name of thousands who will rise up to call him blessed we tender most cordial thanks to Mr. Slater for his great and timely benefaction to a needy and deserving people.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions, duly attested, be forwarded by the secretary to Mr. Slater.

The Editor of the SOUTHWESTERN has a daughter who is a missionary in Peking, China, who in her letters makes frequent reference to the eagerness of the Chinese to learn. In a recent communication she tells of a woman who came 400 miles, all the way on a wheelbarrow, to learn to read and study the Doctrine (as she called it, referring to the Bible). She has learned to read, and now finds her greatest delight in explaining the precepts of the Bible to any one who will listen to her. Will not this Chinese woman rise up in the judgment and condemn thousands in this Christian land who have the Bible in their own homes, and can read it, but still neglect it?

The Nashville Advocate, wishing to call its New York contemporary off from a cold track, in its assertion, 'The serious matter now is that 850,000 Southern Methodists show tendencies toward organic reunion with us,' says: "We, who have means of knowing whereof we affirm quite equal to the New York Methodist, take pleasure in assuring our contemporary that our Methodism is quite as compact and solid and content as his own, with fewer marked defections in its ministry or membership; and that on the fundamental questions that led to the distinct organic life of the Southern Church, our people, with singular unanimity, believe that they were right before, during and since the war; and by the blessing of the Lord they mean to stay right."

The Christian Recorder, alluding to our criticism of the disgraceful treatment of Bishop Cain, the Court decision, and the position of the Texas Advocate, says: "We have to thank the SOUTHWESTERN for its words in behalf of right and righteousness. As to the Texas Christian Advocate, we can scarcely bring ourselves to believe that Dr. Johns wrote the words we have seen taken from its columns."

Dr. Hartzell, according to the Zions Herald, awakened the liveliest interest in the Freedman's Aid Society at the late session of the New England Conference, in "submitting a practical proposition—that the preachers present promise to raise at least $10 each next year for the Freedman's Aid Society." To this request there were one hundred responses.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

G. W. Smith writes from Collinsburg that a children's school picnic is to be given, May 27.

F. Harvey, Shreveport: "I have just been able to visit all my churches. Elder Duncan was with us, and we had a fine conference."

Wm. Smith, Donaldsonville: "The church is in a prosperous condition, and crowded every night. We are having grand success; 38 converts and 33 mourners."

At Mt. Zion, Bro. Marshall is abundant in labors. Sabbath school and congregations are improving. Every interest of the Church has a cheering and hopeful aspect. Ten have been converted to God. Debts contracted last year are being paid; current expenses promptly met; and arrangements are being made to secure funds to complete the church and pay off long-standing debts.

At Sixth Street, Bro. Dyer is accomplishing a good work for his Master. Nearly seventy-five have been received on probation. On Sunday, April 16, over fifty were baptized. The church will not accommodate all the people who desire to worship there. The Sunday-school has more than doubled. The finances of the church are in a healthy condition.

W. S. Hawthorne, Houma: "The church is in a healthy condition; it is crowded at every service. We have great work before us. Strong drink continues to issue its mandates, leading men to prison, poverty, and disgrace. Brother Ford takes a deep interest in our Sunday school, superintended by Mr. C. Mason. Every thing to interest the parents and pupils is utilized. A teachers' meeting is held once a week to discuss the lessons for the succeeding Sabbath, and is a source of instruction."

TEXAS.

W. H. Mosby, Seguin: "Have received 32 in full membership; 9 on probation. The church is growing."

D. Adkins, San Felipe: "This circuit is in good spiritual condition. Protracted meetings at two appointments brought 13 accessions. I have land for another church, and expect to build at an other day."

Frank Gilmore, Anderson: "On account of bad weather and high water Elder Moore could not hold my conference, and he appointed Bro. Bookman to preside. I have two churches started, which I hope to finish this year."

A. M. Mason, Centreville: "I have visited all my preaching places, and I am glad to say I met a warm-hearted people at each place. My protracted meeting began the second Sunday in March, and continued a week. We had nineteen converts."

MISSISSIPPI.

H. H. Wilbona, Corinth: "We had a contest here, March 31st, 1882, for popular favor among the young ladies of the place, and Miss M. H. Rabb won the reward, by fifty-four majority of votes cast. Everything went smoothly and pleasant and we had a grand time."

Bro. W. B. Kendrick, of Atlanta, complains that we made him say that he had completed repairs on his churches, whereas he is just getting out the timber. He has completed the spiritual repairs and arrangements of his circuit, and this was what he referred to. There never was a better feeling among the people, and he has labored hard to effect this. He has made many pastoral visits, and has five lively Sabbath-schools.

ARKANSAS.

The Little Rock district conference will meet at Todd's Chapel, Saulsbury circuit, Aug. 2, instead of Pine Bluff, as published a few weeks since.

TENNESSEE.

C. L. Seward, Alexandria: "We are going to build a new church. Our old one has become dilapidated, and will not accommodate the congregation. Have sent out circulars appealing to friends to help us. We have a nice lot on a hill. Our membership is young, and we have a first-class Sabbath-school."

L. M. Moore, Mason, writes that a suit has been served on the trustees of the church for a debt of over $300, owed to the Masonic Lodge, owner of the building. It has been occupied for several years, and hundreds of dollars paid, yet they will lose house and money if the debt is not paid. The people are so poor they can hardly get bread to eat, and appeal to all friends to contribute something to their assistance.

A. Burdett, Cypress circuit, writes that presiding elder Jesse Price held the quarterly conference. His collection was $7, pastor's, $18 At Price Chapel, the Ladies' Mite Society gave an entertainment. Bro. Burdett delivered a lecture, and for the church $20 25 was cleared. At Mazzie Grove church $9 was raised. At St. Peter we have a church with 100 members. Henry Price, of Central Tennessee College, a good teacher, has a fine school there.

Letter From Nashville.

MESSRS. EDITORS—I trust this short sketch concerning the work in this part of the moral vinyard may find space in your valuable paper and be of interest to your readers, since it has been twelve months since you have heard from me. As the Nashville Circuit takes in a large portion of the city it will be well to state what has been done, what we are doing, and what we propose to do this conference year. We have had quite an interesting series of revival meetings, and many souls have been happily converted to Christ. We have a church organized in east Nashville with twenty five members. We have secured a bona fide deed for our church property in South Nashville and raised a lien of $300 that has been hanging over the property for ten years. The work at the Central Tennessee College is progressing nicely, this having been one of the most successful sessions of its history. Our collections have been fifty per cent. better than last year. We have twenty-five preachers and twenty exhorters on the circuit, and I have the hearty cooperation of them all. There is in active operation in connection with the work in South Nashville a Temperance Society called the John Seay Temperance Society. The State Temperance Convention is now in session in this city. The Nashville Circuit is represented in that Convention. From the College Hill Temperance Society, C. T. C, Dr. J. F. McKinley, Rev. C. E. Alexander, Rev. J. J. Holland, A. B., J. N. Frazier, P. B. Northington. From St Mary's: Dr. J. B. Denny, George Clemens and C. Pickett—the largest representation of any charge in the State. We are preparing to build our edifice on the site known as the St. Mary Camp Ground, for which Father Seay has given $25, and we will get $75 through the Presiding Elder. We propose to make this the best appointment in the Tennessee Conference. I am preparing to work for the paper more vigorously. You shall hear often. C. PICKETT.

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

From Kentucky.

PARIS, KY., April 22, 1882.

MR. EDITOR: In your issue of April 13 I find a communication from W. H. Ongley, giving a slight report of the work of the Lexington Annual Conference, which held its last session at Louisville, in this State, beginning March 29th. In the article mentioned occurs the following sentence: "The districts in Ohio and Indiana, Drs. Taylor and Hammond presiding elders, are particularly flourishing." Brother Ongley was present during the entire session, and I regret that he did not hear the reports from all the districts so as to give credit where credit is due. As a pastor in charge on the Lexington district I simply desire to have justice done to our district and the presiding elder, Rev. D. Jones, whose untiring zeal and devotedness to the work assigned him by the Church has brought this district to the front rank of the successful districts of the Conference. The Lexington district brought up more benevolent money to the conference than any other one of the districts in the conference; and in fact her missionary collection alone aggregated more than all the other four districts combined, her total of benevolent money being nearly $500. I write this simply in justice to the people of Kentucky, to the presiding elder, and to correct the hitherto brief history of the Lexington Annual Conference. I have no desire in this statement to pluck any of the justly-earned laurels from any other district in the conference, for they are truly earned, but to so present the facts as to not permit the faithful labors of pastors and people here to be ignored, and thereby an injustice be done a willing but sometimes easily discouraged people. I wish the SOUTHWESTERN abundant success, and hope its hitherto fearless course in the interest of human rights may become still more fearless in the cause of right.

Truly yours, for the cause,

A. A. PRICE.

China's Progress—Education at Foochow.—A recent letter from Rev. D. W. Chandler to Bishop Wiley contains the following: "We certainly have a fine hold geographically in China, and not a day too soon. One can feel the vibrations, as it were, of the emotions going on almost silently in the innermost depths of this ocean of human beings. The editor of the leading English paper in China says, 'We are nearer to the introduction of railroads into China to-day than we were to the introduction of telegraphs a year ago.' China is anxiously casting about for new methods, new doctrines, new teachers—though, as might be expected, as quietly and discreetly as possible. That conservatism in which she gloried so long still has its charms, but this flood of universal progress that is sweeping in on all sides lifts her bodily off from the heavy rock of her past history.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Second Quarter—Lesson V. April 30. The Tradition of Men—Mark 7, 1-23.

The place of this lesson is Capernaum. The time is shortly after the passover at Jerusalem, and near the close of Christ's ministry in Galilee. The conversation in the synagogue at Capernaum (John 6: 25—58) connects the last lesson with this. The pilgrims to the passover doubtless reported the miracle of the feeding of the five thousand and the popular excitement in Galilee; in consequence of which a deputation of the Pharisaic party went up from Jerusalem to contract, if possible, the influence of Jesus. The strict surveillance which his enemies maintained over every movement was such that even eating in quiet was impossible. The disregard of Jewish tradition by the disciples was quickly noted by these heresy-hunters, who made their omission of ceremonial cleansing before eating an occasion of fault finding. The Rabbis taught: "He who eats bread with unwashen hands is as bad as if he went in to a harlot." They "diligently" cleansed the hands before eating, and especially after returning from the market, where they might have accidentally come in contact with a Gentile. They also "baptized" their drinking cups, and their brazen vessels, and even their couches, as the word "tables" should be rendered. The Pharisees asked of Jesus the reason for his disciples' neglect of these customs; their question, however, meant an attack on him as in their previous charge of Sabbath-breaking. Jesus saw through their motive, and presented a counter charge. They charged the disciples with disregarding the traditions of men; he charged them with disobeying the commandments of God. Isaiah had accurately described those of like character, offering lip service, but disloyal at heart. Such service Jesus declared "vain," empty, profitless; it deceived neither God nor man. "Laying aside" God's words they substituted frivolous ceremony, resting on human tradition; nay, they even dared to "reject" divine commandments for their own ways. The rebuke was spoken directly to the Pharisaic party; when they retired in discomfiture, Jesus called the people near, and bade them diligently hearken while he explained the true law of purity. He told them that defilement was not from without as the Pharisees taught, but from within; that it was not a physical touch, but moral action alone which could make our impurities. A little later, Jesus having entered a house, the disciples—Peter as usual being the spokesman (Matt 15: 15)—asked an explanation of the "parable," for such it was to them. With a gentle rebuke for their dullness he gave the desired explanation. For Mosaic law distinguished between "clean" and "unclean" meats; Jesus tells them that this distinction was ceremonial, not moral; that no food could really "defile" one, nature taking care to reject the useless and effete matter; but that the source of real defilement is within. The heart, he says, is the seat of moral life. From that fountain, if corrupt, streams of corruption will flow. "Evil thoughts" will generate a brood of viperous progeny.

The paper of Alfred Russel Wallace on "Monkeys," is most interesting. B. W. Lovett discourses on "The Development of the Senses;" and Professor W. Le Conte Stevens on the history of "The Stereoscope." "Measurements of Men," by Francis Galton, is a first class article of great instructiveness. Rev. E. W. Brown offers some acute and bold reflections on "Liberty of Thought;" and Miss Nina Morais answers Miss Hardaker "On the Woman Question. Mr. Charles L. Brace's article on "Wolf-reared Children," in the May St. Nicholas, will tell the story of the street waifs of the metropolis from the time they first find refuge in the Newsboy's Lodging-houses till they are provided with homes among the farmers of the Western States, where, in many cases, they are growing up to become thriving farmers themselves, ready to provide homes for the next generation of newsboys. Mr. Brace, as secretary of the Children's Aid Society, has had opportunities to thoroughly master his subject, and it is said that his paper, aided by the twenty pictures furnished, will be one of the most striking that St. Nicholas has ever had. In the same number Mr. James C. Beard will have some comical pictures of the baby elephant.

In the North American Review for May, Carl Schurz, treating of "Party Schisms and Future Problems," presents many well-considered observations which cannot fail to interest in the highest degree that large and growing class of citizens who refuse to be influenced by obsolete party cries. "Days with Longfellow", by Samuel Ward, contains personal reminiscences of the beloved poet just deceased, extending over a period of forty-five years. Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, in an article entitled "What does Revelation Reveal?" seeks to prove that the objections brought against the Bible by modern unbelievers are based upon a misconception of the true intent and scope of the sacred volume. Lieutenant-Commander Gorringe writes of "The Navy", with abundant knowledge of its needs, and with a degree of frankness almost, if not quite, unprecedented in the naval service. W. H. Mallock, the well-known English essayist, in the first of a series of "Conversations with a Solitary" very ingeniously contrives to put the advocates of democracy and modern progress on the defensive. Finally, Gail Hamilton contributes a paper, "The Spent Bullet", in which science, the pulpit and the law are with exquisite wit taken to task for the part they respectively played in the Guiteau-Garfield tragedy.

A WONDERFUL and SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.

These Glasses are chemically treated in the process of manufacture, and possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analyzed by American and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and can in some cases restore the sight if used in time, but in no case can the eye become impaired by their use for the following reasons:

1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye, completely doing away with that tiresome sensation that is usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours' use.

2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.

3. The chemicals keep the glasses cold, and the result is that the optic nerves are always cool, doing away with any feverish sensation to the eye.

4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, with no distressing or tiresome sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.

The MEDICATED GLASSES are all stamped on the frame H. HOUSAH, Medicated. NONE GENUINE UNLESS STAMPED.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

Rev. F. Harvey writes that the Lord is with him and his people. At his protracted meeting he received seven on probation and had six converted to God.

Rev. M. C. B. Mason, Superintendent of the Sunday-school at Houma, La., writes of a growing interest in all departments of the Church work. Eight souls are earnestly seeking salvation.

Rev. Frank Walker, Monroe: "Reaching this place on the 12th of March, I was cordially received by a most excellent people. At the first quarterly conference we had a grand time. 78 partook of the Lord's supper; 24 persons have been received on probation and 5 precious souls have been happily converted since our last conference, and many more are at the anxious seat. We are working on our parsonage, and hope to finish and furnish it nicely. We have also organized a missionary society auxiliary to the General Society, and expect to organize a Freedman's Aid Society to help raise funds for that Society. Pray for us. We have not forgotten the SOUTHWESTERN."

SAMARITAN NERVINE.

Samaritan Nervine

Cures Epileptic Fits, Spasms, Convulsions, St. Vitus Dance, Vertigo, Hysterics, Insanity, Apoplexy, Paralysis, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all Nervous diseases. This infallible remedy will positively eradicate every species of Nervous Derangement, and drive them away from whence they came, never to return again. It utterly destroys the germs of disease by neutralizing the hereditary taint or poison in the system, and thoroughly eradicates the disease, and utterly destroys the cause.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Female Weakness, general Debility, Leucorrhoea or Whites, Painful Menstruation, Ulceration of the Uterus, Internal Heat, Gravel, Inflammation of the Bladder, Irritability of the Bladder. For Wakefulness at night, there is no better remedy. During the change of life no female should be without it. It quiets the Nervous System and gives rest, comfort and nature's sweet sleep.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Alcoholism, Drunkenness and the habit of Opium Eating. These degrading habits are by far the worst evils that have ever befallen suffering humanity. Thousands die annually from these noxious drugs. The drunkard drinks liquor not because he likes it, but for the pleasure of drinking and treating his friends, little thinking that he is on his road to ruin. Like the Opium Eater, he first uses the drug in small quantities as a harmless antidote. The soothing influence of the drug takes strong hold upon its victim, leading him on to his own destruction. The habits of Opium Eating and Liquor Drinking are precisely what eating is to alimentiveness, as over-eating first inflames the stomach, which redoubles its cravings until it paralyzes both the stomach and appetite. So every drink of liquor or dose of opium, instead of satisfying, only adds to its fierce fires, until it consumes the vital force and then itself. Like the gluttonous tape-worm, it cries: "Give, give, give!" but never enough until its own rapacity devours itself. Samaritan Nervine gives instant relief in all such cases. It produces sleep, quiets the nerves, builds up the nervous system, and restores body and mind to a healthy condition.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Nervous Dyspepsia, Palpitation of the Heart, Asthma, Bronchitis, Scrofula, Syphilis, diseases of the Kidneys and all diseases of the urinary organs. Nervous debility, caused by the indiscretions of youth, permanently cured by the use of this invaluable remedy. To you, young, middle-aged and old men, who are covering your sufferings as with a mantle by silence, look up, you can be saved by timely efforts, and make ornaments to society, and jewels in the crown of your Maker, if you will. Do not keep this a secret longer, until it saps your vitals, and destroys both body and soul. If you are thus afflicted, take Dr. RICHMOND'S Samaritan Nervine. It will restore your shattered nerves, arrest premature decay, impart tone and energy to the whole system.

(From Andrews' American Queen.)

CLEOPATRA OR THE Queen of Sheba's Beauty WAS BUT SKIN DEEP.

The renowned Queen of Sheba, with all her royal pomp, magnificent apparel, and brilliant retinue, would never have appeared within the presence of the grandest of monarchs of the past, had she not also possessed that which is the crowning glory of the female person—a skin unchallenged for its Oriental softness and its almost transcendental purity. Cleopatra, holding emperors at bay, and ruling empires by her word, had quickly lost her charm and power by one attack of blotches, or of pimples, or of horrid tan and freckles.

WOMAN RULES THE WORLD

by her beauty, not less than by by her purity of character, loveliness of disposition and unselfish devotion. Indeed, in the estimation of perhaps too many men beauty in a body takes precedence over every other consideration. Beauty thus forms an important part of woman's "working capital," without which too many, (if not bankrupt in what relates to influence within the circle where they move) are powerless for great good. Hence we see not only the propriety but the duty of every lady preserving with zealous care that which to her is essential to success, and influence and usefulness in life. And, since "beauty is but skin deep," the utmost care and vigilance are required to guard it against the many ills that flesh is heir to. Among the great and annoying enemies of beauty, as well as of comfort, happiness and health, are those pestiferous and horrid skin diseases—tetters humors, eczema, (salt rheum) rough and scaly eruptions, ulcers, pimples, and all diseases of the hair and scalp. For the cure of these, Dr. C. W. Benson, of Baltimore, after years of patient study and investigation devoted to diseases of the skin, at last brought forth his celebrated SKIN CURE, which has already by its marvelous cures established itself as the great remedy for all diseases of the skin, whatever be their names or character. Its success has been immense and unparalleled. All druggists have it. It is elegantly put up, two bottles in one package. Internal and external treatment. Price $1 00.

EVERYONE PRAISES.

Sick headache, nervous headache, neuralgia, nervousness, paralysis, dyspepsia, sleeplessness and brain diseases, positively cured by Dr. C. W. Benson's Celery and Chamomile Pills. The reason labor is a punishment is that man hates it. The large majority prefer to get the profits of other's labor, and are not going to work their own allotments of ground if they can find another way to live. The happy ideal state of this world is not a piece of ground to work on, but to own a piece of ground and to have somebody else do the work.

A revival is needed when there is a worldly spirit in the Church. It is manifest that the Church is sunk down into a low and back slidden state when you see Christians conform to the world in dress, equipage, parties, seeking worldly amusements. It shows that they are far from God, and that there is great need of a revival of religion. —Finney.

The reason why the men of the world think so little of Christ is, they do not look at Him. ATHANASIA.

BY REV. THERON BROWN.

There is one end. In tears we reap
The harvest sin hath sown for all;
The darkness and the funeral-sleep
Alike on every creature fall.

From He who laid salvation's plan,
The only Power who death could scorn,
Himself became the Son of man,
And He must die—for He was born;

Must He—but vainly ruin trod
In dust and blood earth's heavenly fire.
That moment hailed the Son of God
That saw the Son of man expire.

With One almighty in the strife
Could death victorious long contend?
God cannot suffer loss; and life,
Without beginning knows no end.

Mr. President, Ladies, and Gentlemen: [illegible] the world moves, and we move with it. It moves regularly, [illegible] forward. [illegible] having accepted the [illegible] theory of astronomy, [illegible] to renounce it; [illegible] the world moves; [illegible] forward revolution [illegible] not only give birth to [illegible] and bless us with [illegible] of the enduring [illegible] reveals new light [illegible] [illegible] relations [illegible] [illegible] reputed descendants of Ishmael and Esau, first began their commercial transactions by land, in the days of the patriarch Jacob, and when the Phoenicians began to launch out their oared barks upon the crested waves of the Mediterranean Sea; before Solomon began to reign in Israel, or Homer sang his Grecian songs; from those earliest days to this very present moment, legitimate commerce has ever been one of the most efficient means of inducing prosperity, allaying the petty jealousies of rival states, and of spreading the advancing light of a superior civilization. And this is just what your committee desire. They want to see such commercial relations established between the United States and the continent of Africa as will increase our wealth, develop African commerce to such an extent as to exert an ameliorating influence not only upon the coast, but penetrating into the interior, will influence against their contemptible brawls and savage wars, and open the gates for our superior civilization. Such relations would prove a blessing to Africa and a benefit to both. But aside from any other consideration is a valuable one, and deserves the studious attention of all who are interested in the extension of our commerce. The latest reports to our Department of State, in Washington, show that the imports from Africa to Great Britain, France, and the United States during the fiscal year of 1880 amounted to $150,354,000. The exports from these countries to Africa were valued at $124,840,000, a surplus of imports from Africa to the value of $25,514,000 out of a total trade of $275,194,000 value, between Africa and these three great powers alone, without reckoning the commercial account with all other countries. $275,194,000! And in this [illegible] pile Africa gets $25,514,000 more out of Great Britain, France, and the United States than is gotten from her. But out of this very valuable trade while Great Britain and France control $267,475,000 of it, the United States trades with the whole continent only to the extent of $7,724,000, or less than one dollar for every fifteen dollars that France controls, and just a trifle more than one dollar for every twenty-three dollars commanded by the British merchants. Now we are here this evening to unite our voices together in saying to the Congress of the United States that such a fact should not remain thus without some strenuous efforts for a better showing in this valuable trade. This commerce is profitable to Great Britain, to France, and to other countries in Europe, and can be made quite as profitable to the United States. But let us see and wherein we can best further our interest in its development, which we may do, and at the same time help to reclaim and bless a continent which our nation cursed and wrecked. Beginning at the northern portion of the continent, and taking King Cotton as the standard of the relative proportion of trade controlled by Great Britain, France, and the United States, we will determine the trade of each. Beginning with Egypt, we find that she received cotton manufactured goods to the amount of $9,300,000, all of which, excepting the value of 500 yards of goods, was bought from Great Britain and France. Here, then, is nearly $9,300,000 for cotton goods, from which the United States [illegible] nothing. Algeria spends $1,000,000 with Great Britain and France for cotton goods, but not a single dollar with the United States. Morocco buys [illegible]000 of cotton goods, not one [illegible] of which is bought from us, and Tripoli spend about [illegible] for cotton fabrics, but [illegible] to the value of one cent of [illegible]. Here, then, is a clear [illegible] for the north coast. There [illegible] no part at all in the cotton [illegible]. Then coming around [illegible]

HOW THIS TRADE IS DISTRIBUTED,

THE EAST COAST,

[illegible] of Sopola, Mo- [illegible] east of the [illegible] Madagascar, [illegible] we find [illegible] of Africa [illegible] it is the only [illegible] where we [illegible] with the [illegible] British colony of Mauritius. The exports of France to the native states are so insignificant as not to be worthy of special mention. Here, for once, we find the United States master of the situation. In fact, we almost monopolize the cotton goods trade of Madagascar and Zanzibar. Why, the whole trade of Great Britain and France with Madagascar, including the value of all articles exported, amounted to only $200,000, while the cotton trade alone with the United States was $400,000 worth. Likewise in Zanzibar; there we control the market. The total trade of 1879 amounted to $3,000,000. Of this amount the United States shared to the extent of $544,000, of which $447,000 was for cotton goods. Fully one half of the cotton goods to this market is supplied by our merchants. Such is the pre-eminent commercial station that we occupy on the eastern coast of Africa.

Leaving this portion, we come down to what is known as

which is made up of the British colonies of Cape Colony and Natal. Here, although we command a fair trade, amounting to $2,000,000 in other wares, we have no share whatever in the cotton goods trade. The whole of the cotton trade, valued at $3,680,000, is almost all in British possession. Though we find not here such a showing for our cotton fabrics as would be desirable, nevertheless we command a respectable position in the supply of other articles of trade. But we now come to the great comprising Senegambia, Sierra Leone, the Gold Coast, Liberia, Dahomey, Calabar, and Lower Guinea. This is the portion that suffered most at the hands of the American nation, this the region wrecked and ruined by the American slave trade of former days; this the land from whose rich and fertile soil were dragged, in manacles and chains, into the charnel-house of bondage, the millions of the dusky race whose unrequited labors made this nation rich and great. To the continent of Africa, and especially to this west coast, the American nation owes a debt which she can never fully pay; a debt made up of sweat and tears, of blood and bruise; and more of ill than tongue can tell. And from this nation should come the greater contribution for its reclamation and substantial elevation. And in doing this we need not only be actuated by motives of philanthropy; but if governed simply by the desire of gain, we should lose no time in commencing to develop this commerce. This would be a great contribution to its elevation, and would prove of incalculable value to us. But at present, while our proportion of trade with the other ports is so very small, it is here upon this very west coast, where we owe so much, and where such profitable commercial transactions are offered us, that we appear to even worse advantage. The commerce of Great Britain with the west coast amounts to $20,200,000, and that of France to $15,214,000, a total trade of $35,-000,000 for Great Britain and France, while the United States trades with the west coast only to the amount of $300,000, just a little more than one quarter of a million, Great Britain and France here realizing a trade of $116 for every dollar we realize. Is it a wonder, then, that under these circumstances we, especially those of us who are Afro-Americans, should aim to interest our government to seek a division of such an inviting commercial harvest? Nay, but our most strenuous efforts should be exerted for such a happy consummation. And then we have on that west coast our foster republic, the Negro Republic of Liberia, than which no better opening upon the face of the earth offers us more advantages for the development of a profitable trade. In support of this position, Consul General Smyth, at Monrovia, Liberia, in his last report to the Secretary of State concerning American trade with Liberia and the Soudan says: "From correspondence by letter and personal interviews with resident merchants and native traders, I have learned that the native traders are anxious for increased trade with America, in view of the advantages in prices, the credit system, and quality of goods. [illegible] There are at least [illegible] between Cape Palmas and the [illegible] where the English [illegible] the majority of which [illegible] English and French [illegible]

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

The Veto.

PRESIDENT ARTHUR SHOULD BE SUSTAINED.

It is with much pleasure we see the manly position that the President has assumed on the Chinese bill, sending it back to the Senate with his objections; and with equal pleasure we see the Senate bend its judgment to the well-taken objections of the President, and decline to pass the bill over his veto.

How long will it be before American statesmen will be true to the fundamental doctrines of the great and good men who laid the foundation of this Republic? And how long will they allow race prejudices to becloud their better judgment?

The present is the hour for the statesmen of the South to lead their own people fully out of the false position that the capital invested in slaves drew them into on the race question, and to stand out the champions of the ancient doctrines of Washington and Jefferson, and reap in this struggle for the right a crop of sentiment that will prove a coat of plate-armour of more than Damascus toughness and temper in the political struggles of the future.

The golden opportunity to wed China to this Republic, with silken bands of the most kindly tie, must not be allowed to pass. An Empire that has bridged 4,000 years with but little change, through its reverence for the aged and learned—for of all the nations it best illustrates the promise annexed to the fifth Commandment "Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee."

Again, China subordinates her military department to her civil, and draws all her chief mandarins from the civil ranks, the men of law, science, and letters, and thus avoids the revolutionary spirit which soldiers are ever foster to find a field for display and glory. Hence Assyria, Egypt, Babylon, Persia, Greece and Rome, arose and fell around her, but China stands still in her stately majesty, holding within her lines one-third the human race. Such an ally in Asia is worth having, if it does cost a few western supporters. China will send her better citizens to us by and by, when the men of letters and wealth feel safe in coming. Nay, even now her poor, her men of labor, are well instructed in the letters of their land, all, or nearly all, can read and write. And who will dare say these sons of Shem have no rights, no business here—they have as good right as our fathers had to enter this wilderness, or as some of us have at this day—and as to business, they have business of the first magnitude, even that of securing our Christian civilization, for this is the day that Christ claims the nations for himself, and if we will not go to them with the gospel, God will send them to us for its saving truths; and the rough men who police the sand lots, had better take heed, or it may not be well with them in the end.

I suppose it will be remembered that Baldwin, a Southern writer, claimed in 1852—that this country is the subject of grand prophetic notice in the word of God, and that we are to regard this land as God's "Holy Mountain" or Israel restored, and I am sorry to find that America Judaism has fallen into that strange rut, and is drifting along under that opinion. Now if that be so, let me quote a passage from Isaiah pertinent to this whole question, that I want Southern statesmen especially to ponder in the light of the opinion of Baldwin.

"The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them. And the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together; and the lion shall eat straw like the ox—and the suckling child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice's den. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." (Chapter 11.)

Such a collection of paradoxes and actual impossibilities, was never presented before or since to human eye. If taken literally, this is but a grand figure illustrating races of men, wrought into a wonderful mosaic work, of harmony and beauty, and if God should make this land his Holy Mountain, we must accept the attendant conditions of this elevation and receive all races and families of men.

Bending to this exposition may cost pride of opinion with some, as it costs me the sacrifice of long cherished opinion—but when convinced by the drift of Providential events, I surrendered and accepted the situation, though I had given the prime of life to the work of hedging in by the theory of African colonization against the coming trouble of the past generation, and before 1862 had fully passed away, I felt that God meant other things for the African race in America, and although humbled at having a well formed policy reversed by the logic of events, I accepted the above prophetic picture as the destiny of America—but unlike Baldwin, I claim that all lands will finally share a like glorious privilege.

But there is another matter of an economical nature that gives them a right to domicile amongst us. We of the South need them to aid and teach us in tea, silk, and rice culture; we should add these three to cotton culture, and then as the tropical commodities and production have always commanded the wealth of the world, our people will reap in return an improved condition, whilst the whole nation will be made still more independent of the outside world by these additions to her products.

We should not forget that the Chinaman's native zone is our zone, and what he can plant and grow successfully at home, he can plant and cultivate successfully here. China lies between 18 and 56 degrees of North Latitude, and covers 70 degrees of Longitude. Our lines of latitude go as far south as 25 degrees N. L., whilst the southern line of Georgia almost touches the latitude of your city 30 degrees, which if extended into the eastern hemisphere, would pass through the ancient pyramids of Egypt, and when still prolonged into China, throws about four-fifths of that vast empire north of 30 degrees, north latitude; so the Southern States are the fields for Chinese appropriate labor. Let our men of wealth in the South turn their attention to the sources of wealth I have named—tea, silk and rice, lowland and upland, the latter being a desirable addition to our bread stuffs.

But there is another point I wish to name: San Francisco and California are not absolutely essential to the proper accommodation of the Chinaman; if these localities will persist in being un-American and proscriptive, let us have a Southern Pacific railway south of the severest frost line if possible, terminating in Mexico on the west side of the continent, and let Messrs. Vanderbilt, Gould and Grant, and men of our eastern cities see to this point, and thus protect the wounded sensibilities of our fastidious friends in California who decline being our factors for the commerce of Asia, with her seven or eight hundred million population, California must not be so afflicted.

Atlanta, Ga., Apr. 6, 1882.

It may be remarked once more that the world moves. The recent session of the Baltimore Presbytery—the Baltimore Presbytery, mark you! not the Boston—was held in a colored Presbyterian church, and a colored minister, Rev. W. M. Hargrove, was elected moderator. Probably every one asks indignantly, Why not? We are sure we have no reply to make to that question. We have only to ask further—If a colored minister can preside as moderator over a Presbyterian Council in the conservative city of Baltimore, why cannot a colored man preside over the Baltimore or any other conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church? Always premising that the man is chosen bishop not on account of his complexion, but on account of his fitness, his complexion not being allowed to work a prejudice against him. It is said that the Baltimore Presbytery has never had a better moderator than Rev. W. M. Hargrove. Shall other churches take our crown?—Baltimore Methodist.

The house in which Jesse James was killed was inspected by 2,000 persons at ten cents each. Many pretty relics were sold at extravagant prices, and the household goods will be auctioned off. Do You Know North India?

BY THE REV. C. P. HARD, (FROM SOUTH INDIA).

The North India Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church has caused a record than which none is brighter. Its continuous success has made the duty of congratulating it a habit. These consecrated men, seeking to spread scriptural holiness over that distant land, have done grand service. On the foundation prudently laid by Dr. Butler an imperishable structure has risen, a church of the living God. Dr. Waugh's scholarship has adorned the Conference ranks for nearly a quarter of a century. E. W. Parker, whose true helpmeet assisted in laying the cornerstone of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, has long been an ideal missionary. Presiding Elder J. H. Messmore is unweariedly versatile and attentive to providential indications. D. W. Thomas and wife have generously given and wisely planned and the Theological School, at Bareilly, will be their monument. Dr. T. J. Scott has taught and written admirably, and "Village Life in India" should be read by all. Dr. Humphrey, returning to the work in which Mrs. H's "Six Years in India" has interested many, sees at the last session one of his converts, Zahur-al Haqq, made our first native Presiding Elder in "the land of the Veda." Consulting Dr. Butler's excellent volume, bearing this name, the reader will praise God for the marvelous origin and advance of this mission. Drs. Johnson, Wilson, Gray and Dease have caused healing to come to many bodies and souls. Among those who have ably performed various duties, until their health or that of their loved ones was injured in the heat of the East and of their zeal for the cause, are James Baume, H. Jackson, R. Pierce, L. L. Hauser, J. T. Gracey, F. M. Wheeler, S. S. Weatherby, F. A. Spencer, F. B. Cherington, E. Cunningham, J. H. Gill, A. D. McHenry. The thoughtful and persevering Hoskins has beheld native masses won to Christ. J. T. McMahon, rare linguist, has long illustrated self support. T. Craven, brave leader of a Sunday-School army 13 000 strong, judiciously prophesied to be 30,000 by 1890, has during twelve years, won, at the Mission Press, an experience for a grand India Book Concern future. As he lands at home let us open hand and pocket, and hasten his return with $100,000, to plant at Allahabad the Central Publishing House, authorized by the Central Committee from the two Conferences. Oh what a mission of light for 252,000,000 souls is the opportunity to the church, or to an individual, presented in this enterprise! Of course our beloved Missionary Secretaries, though burdened with their vast responsibilities, would be glad to receive at the Mission Rooms any sums to be made over to Mr. Craven, who is desired by the India Conferences to gather up this endowment for the great project which had its inception under Bishop Merrill's appreciated advice when he was inspecting our India Church life and labors. So writes B. H. Badley, in the Central Christian Advocate, and says, "Methodism here must be kept a unit. Our two Conferences will soon be three, and all these must be held together," hence the need of this Central Committee. We would be wise from the beginning, and hence propose this Central Publishing House. It will be our "805 Broadway," and with the blessing of God will largely help in the evangelization of India. The Conference adopted a paper on the strictures passed upon Mr. Taylor's work in India by Dr. Rigg at the Ecumenical Council. We thank God with all our hearts that the great evangelist came to India, and are assured that the churches he planted will continue to be centers of holy influence. Of the members of the Conference six are engaged in vernacular work—a fact that should be born in mind by all who discuss this "Pauline method." We are glad to say that harmony prevails among the brethren of the South and our selves. The work is one: they labor in one way, we in another; all are succeeding." The writer is Secretary of the Conference, the principal of the successful Centennial School, at Lucknow; his facile pen has enriched many papers and reviews, but he goes down to history as the first Secretary of the India S. S. Union, and pioneer in making India Missionary Directories. H. Mansell, having the spirit of John the beloved, and whose visit now for a few months will be a blessing to the American churches, reports in the Pittsburg Christian Advocate: —"We have over 4,000 native Christians—6,017 old and young. On my circuit 120 adults and 50 children have been baptized. The South India Conference has done well in 1881. They have done some noble giving this year. They have given three times as much as the average in the home Conferences. South India deserves your prayers. They embrace all India outside of our Conference. So Methodism has laid its hand on all India and Burmah, and claims all these 252,000,000 for Christ." Presiding Elder P. M. Buck, has guided orphans and churches with unfailing patience, and wisely J. E. Scott's bright and dashing sentences have flashed upon the pages of our Methodist Quarterly Review. Editor J. Mudge has traced lines of light for almost a decade of diligent and appreciated management of the Lucknow Witness; hereafter, at Calcutta, Dr. Thoburn's Indian Witness. Those who wish a bright weekly, with latest news from the front, would favor themselves by sending a draft on London for probably, about three dollars, it being well to throw in one more, or a thousand, for Miss Layton's Girls' School, now being remembered by the American friends, who mean to give a suitable building to this company representing India's greatest need, Christian womanhood. In Zions Herald, the late editor of the Witness affirms the intention of the North Conference to stand in a brotherly attitude of defence for the younger South Conference when ever misunderstood or assailed. In the ranks of missionaries having more recently brought highly cultured powers to the Master's service yonder are G. H. McGrew, made glad by the visit of his father and his wife's mother and sister, illustrating the fact that missionary life is not, in these times, a burial; N. G. Cheney, who will doubtless soon plead here for the Naini Tal High School, a handful of corn in the top of the mountains; H. F. Kastendieck, Principal there, son of a German Presiding Elder in Rochester, secured by Rev. Wm. Taylor, an example of the exchanges between the India conferences, adapting men to the demands as they may arise; the transfer of this scholarly man suggesting the mission of a Central Committee to unify the work; C. L. Bare, of the Boys' Orphanage; J. C. Lawson, of the Lucknow English Church; and F. L. Neeld, of the Memorial School at Cawnpore, to be congratulated on the arrival of his assistant from New Jersey, Miss Avery—no longer Miss Avery.

Those, and perhaps others, are, with heroic W. J. Gladwin transferred to the South Conference, imperishable names in the list of India's benefactors, who follow the crowned victors, J. R. Downey, C. W. Judd and J. D. Brown. Also the church owes a debt of gratitude, beyond words to express, to our North India ladies, a consecrated and hopeful band, whose great success as skillful missionaries are acknowledged by every observer. The native ministers, already numbering their veterans in service, are an able body of men; and the native Christian women, as teachers and Bible readers, are doing the "greater works than these," in the name of the Lord Jesus.

Friend, if now you know something more of that North India brotherhood, will you not pray more and pay more for their great mission?

Men approve decision of character though it be against them, and despise a time-server and trimmer. A remarkable illustration of this was seen in the Massachusetts House of Representatives not long since. After three days' debate the vote was taken on the Prohibitory Law. It stood 110 to 110. The Speaker had the casting vote. He had been acting with the prohibitory wing of his party, but "he hesitated, reddened, and struggled with contending emotions for nearly five minutes, and then said: 'The vote stands 110 in the affirmative and 110 in the negative. The bill is rejected.'" He is hated by the prohibitionists, and ridiculed by the license men, and the papers call it a case of political suicide. Decision on principle always commands respect, even from opponents; vacillation excites pity or contempt.—N. Y. Advocate.

"I Believe in the Holy Ghost."

These words, expressing our faith, are uttered by thousands of lips every Sabbath. The Church believes in the Holy Ghost. Doubtless, there are some now, as in the Apostles' time, who in their own personal experience do not know Him. He is, however, acknowledged to be. He has personality. He is not a mere influence, expiration, outbreathing atmosphere of God, but a being. Some have made efforts to reduce him to the immaterial influence of Deity. They change him into a mere sigh, a breath, a something, nothing, such as every soul in its workings exhibits. It is necessary that we let go the delusion, too popular, that the Holy Ghost is an outgoing of God, such as that influence or power that pervades, possesses, upholds, and animates all things. The Holy Spirit has personality even in us, much more in the Godhead. Every where Christ speaks of the Spirit not as an influence but as a person. As a person he is sent, comes, speaks, teaches, shows things to the mind, and abides with holiness. He requires the ordinance of baptism to be administered in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost. No such language can be applied to a mere influence in any form. Christ when he came came forth from the Father. He came and dwelt among us for a little season. Then he left the world and returned to the Father. The Holy Spirit comes to abide with the believer forever. "I will pray the Father" said Jesus "for you, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever." "Ye know him, for he dwelleth with you and shall be in you."

We believe in His personal presence to answer prayer. As we fall on our knees in our closets, in the class, in the social meeting, in the public congregation, where all ought to fall on their knees, we shall, if truly saying "I believe in the Holy Ghost," realize that He comes to us in answer to our prayers as a researcher of those who humbly seek Him. He comes and he brings all things to our remembrance. He comes and he guides us into all truth. "He" comes, but he "shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear that shall he speak, and he will show us things to come." In the world he acts as a convicting and persuading power to lead men to Jesus. In the believer he acts as a transforming power, as an indwelling and personal presence, so the believer beholds as in an open face the glory of God and is changed into the same image from glory to glory.

He comes, and if brother is arrayed against brother, and sister against sister, with tongues of slander and hearts of hate, and the Church all tossed in a black abyss of confusion and commotion, He changes the slanderous tongue, He abates the hard-heartedness, He casts out all criminal desires, He makes the dancing, theatre-going, card-playing, and whisky-drinking church member cease from his sins, the dishonest from his deceit, the covetous from his stinginess, the slanderous one from his backbiting. He harmonizes, centralizes, and crystallizes all around the blissful centre of Christian love and holiness. We are living in a grand and awful time. We live in the dispensation of the Holy Ghost. This is His time. He convicts the sinner, comforts the mourner, stirs up the [illegible] in Zion, produces agitation in dying churches, sets the truth of [illegible] in bold and battle array against [illegible], lifts up the standard of holiness and believers to the higher [illegible] of grace. He is the inspirer of every good word and work.

Let us repeat this creed: "I believe in the Holy Ghost," often. Let us do it humbly, prayerfully, and yet confidently. We need His presence to keep ourselves, to stay infidelity, corruption, and hell, to suggest, create, and direct all reforms, to purify and sanctify our emotions and affections, and thus render us "strong in the Lord and in the power of his might;" strong [illegible], strong to act, and strong to endure.

"I believe in the Holy Ghost."

Among the Churches.

[illegible] is always better than [illegible]. The power of the Christian [illegible] influence was for [illegible] held more in [illegible] of his ac[illegible] precept. His [illegible] perfect, will [illegible] by a [illegible] the world [illegible] example. [illegible] of holiness in the life we live than in the words our lips may utter. Nothing is more repelling than a gloomy face, a sour, grumbling, petulant and fretting spirit, which sometimes characterizes some professed Christians, and nothing more sadly misrepresents the religion of the Lord Jesus. While, on the other hand, nothing is more lovely and attractive than a smiling face and cheerful, pleasant, forbearing and forgiving spirit. That is Christ-like. We believe in that kind of religion.

The Methodist Episcopal Church in Franklin, with Bro. Williams as pastor, is enjoying an unsurpassed degree of prosperity in every department of its work. Since Conference the congregations have steadily increased, as have also the attendance on the Sabbath school. Over thirty have joined the Church on probation, and of this number upwards of twenty-five have been converted to God. The religious impression is still deep and solemn, and it is expected that many more will come out on the Lord's side. Bro. Williams always has the sunlight of a cheerful and happy face, and is greatly esteemed by all who know him.

Some churches, as well as men, seem to be spectre-haunted. They, for some cause, are kept in a sort of chronic and unhealthy state of nervous excitement. Not so with the Methodist Episcopal Church at La Teche or Bro. Lyon the pastor. Never did a people have more confidence in their pastor, and seldom have we seen a preacher more delighted with his people. Bro. Lyon is an earnest, enterprising and intelligent worker in the vineyard of the Lord. Plans are perfected and the money is in hand to pay for painting, seating and otherwise putting the church in order. A good choir has been organized to whom he gives special lessons in music each week. The Sabbath-school has more than doubled and the congregation largely increased, and men and women are forsaking their sins and turning to the Lord. The La Teche Seminary, with W. D. Godman, D. D., as Principal, is having a term of marked prosperity. Two hundred and six names are enrolled. All the common English branches are carefully taught, and classes are formed in Latin, Greek, Chemistry, Algebra and Geometry. A normal class organized for the benefit of those who wish to prepare for teaching. A theological class is also formed for those who are preparing for the work of the ministry.

Perhaps it is not wise in us to compare localities, and yet we feel justified in making this remark: To us there are few places more lovely than the Orphans' Home and the La Teche Seminary. May the benediction of God rest upon it.

Jeff. Davis and the Historical Society.

In the French Opera House, New Orleans, on Tuesday evening, 25th ult., was assembled a large and typically Southern audience. Tickets of admission were sold at one dollar each, and the house was well filled. The proceedings were in aid of the Southern Historical Society. Ex-Governor Nicholls presided, and made the opening speech. He was followed by Jefferson Davis, Rabbi Gutheim, Gen. George Johnston, and Rev. B. M. Palmer. It sounded a little strange, seventeen years after the close of the civil war, to hear that large audience rapturously applauding Mr. Davis, when he said:

As for me—I speak only for myself—our cause was so just, so sacred, that had I known all that has come to pass, had I known all that was to be inflicted upon me, all that my country was to suffer, all that our posterity was to endure, I would do it over and over again.

Poor Horace Greeley signed that man's bail-bond as a tender of the olive branch. What would he have felt could he have heard these words of bitterness and unrepentant disloyalty? The white-haired chief of the Confederacy has but a few days to remain upon the earth, and then will pass away a remarkable factor in American politics. The financial condition of the Historical Society required a stalwart appeal, and Mr. Davis complied with its request to speak on this occasion, and he told his friends he had tried, but it had been very hard for him to repress the utterance of words not discreet. Poor Jeff. Davis!

It fell to the lot of Rabbi Gutheim to utter the profoundly philosophic as well as patriotic sentiment of the evening. He said:

The Southern Historical Society is anxious to set up a monument in the collection and preservation of all authentic documents, both official and unofficial, that bear on the [illegible] of that tremendous [illegible] by which "a house [illegible]," in order [illegible] materials to the [illegible] who may ad[illegible] to the work of writing [illegible] history "in which nothing is extenuated and naught set down in malice. It is a monument which bears evidence to the strength of the Union. As a great result, the war has obliterated Mason and Dixon's line from the map of the republic. Let us hope and trust that henceforward no imaginary geographical line will ever again be drawn to indicate a division of political sentiment; let us hope and trust that henceforward the only contention between the States will be which shall excel the other in loyalty to the constitution, attachment to the Union, and zeal for establishing the fundamental rights of liberty.

Negro Army Officers.

The sentence of the court-martial in the case of Lieutenant Flipper has been set aside for informality. But since this is, according to our neighbor, the New-Orleans Christian Advocate's dictum, "the white man's country," and because the army has such an aversion to Negro officers and equals, we may yet look for something else to be trumped up to engineer him out of the army. Whittaker, because he could not study and fight for his character at the same time, was found deficient in his studies, and consequently expelled. It is a disgrace to the nation that with one-seventh of its population of negro blood; although in the late unpleasantness "the colored troops fought so nobly;" not a single colored boy is being educated in our Military Academy at West Point or at the Naval Academy at Annapolis. All because the descendants of many of those whose fathers died to destroy this nation, while the Negroes were fighting to save it, will not tolerate the sons of those valiant Negro soldiers.

Who will be the next Negro boy to offer himself up as a sacrifice at West Point? We will watch his treatment with much interest.

Last Saturday there was consummated in the House of Representatives a long-deferred act of justice. Gen. Chalmers was deprived of the privileges of a Congressman, which the people of his district never intended he should enjoy, and J. R. Lynch, successively elected and successively denied a seat during the past five years, was admitted and qualified. Never was a clearer case of shameful fraud and legal pretexts presented for consideration, yet Democratic antipathy to Negroes, and party necessities, combined to so long defer the result now attained. It is noteworthy that the Democratic caucus resolved not to filibuster in behalf of Gen. Chalmers, for the reason that Northern members feared their action would not be approved by their constituencies, and it is therefore surprising that this case of exceptional merits should not have caused some independent voting and denunciation of the Mississippi plan by courageous Democrats. Instead of this, Chalmers was declared not elected and Lynch was seated by a strict party vote. Mr. Lynch made a strong and manly speech reviewing the methods of election in vogue in Mississippi. He asserted with deep regret that in the official person of the contestee in this case (Gen. Chalmers) the country was presented with a living monument to rifled ballot-boxes and stifled public justice; and that the Republican party would continue to wage unceasing war on such methods. Higher than any party advantage, or the claims of Mr. Lynch, in the public estimation, should be the triumph of the right and justice involved in this contest.

We have received the Methodist Quarterly Review for April and read its pages with satisfaction. The portrait of Rev. Dr. Wm. B. Pope, theological tutor at the Disbury Wesleyan School and late President of the Wesleyan Conference, will be looked upon with pleasure. Aside from the editoial work there are five well prepared articles. Rev. A. J. Hanson, A. M., of Sacramento, Cal., writes upon "Utah and the Mormon Problem." The second article, "Our Methodist Local Preachers," by Rev. Dr. Wheeler, a Local Preacher in the Methodist Episcopal Church and editor of the New York Methodist, is an article full of suggestions which, if heeded, will greatly increase the efficiency of our local preachers. The third article, by Prof. H. M. Harmon, D. D., concludes an interesting discussion of Weber's System of Theology of the old Synagogue of Palestine. "The Wines of the Bible," by Rev. L. C. Field, is a clear and scholarly discussion of this question. "Petersburg, Va., and its Negro Population," by Rev. J. E. Edwards, is neither a Northern nor Southern view of the Negro question. The real strength of this number is to be found in the editorial department, and while we commend the Quarterly in general, we call special attention to Dr. Whedon's review of Pope's system of theology. The Review should be in the house of every intelligent Methodist.

The phrase "altar against altar," so frequently used by the press of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, is to us like Dr. Whedon's "local currency, good within its own section alone, and current there only for a fast-vanishing period." We look upon it as a mere "provincialism," a phrase designed for the Southern ear. The Methodist Episcopal Church does not believe in putting any limitations on work, nor in "parceling out territory among denominations." But if our brethren of the Methodist Episcopal Church South are honest, if to them it is "altar against altar," let them show their faith by their works, and retire at once from all territory north of Mason and Dixon's line. We have been frequently told that the M. E. Church South has always been, and is now exactly right, and the Methodist Episcopal Church has been, and still is exactly wrong. Nevertheless if our dear brethren do regard this as "altar against altar," and if with them these altars are raised in retaliation, let them amend their ways.

We had heard it before. The illustration was a stereotyped one in the heat of the conflict, during the period of gradual acquiescence in the results of the late war, but coming from the lips of a Christian scholar it appears less excusable. Rev. Dr. B. M. Palmer, at the Southern Historical Society meeting was pleased to say: "The Vandals and Goths overthrew Rome, but Roman civilization tamed and subdued the barbarians." The application is unmistakable. In the present case he evidently intended his hearers to regard the men of the North as like unto the Vandals and the South as the seat of the superior civilization. At the outbreak of the war the leaders of the South were wrong in their mathematics, and greatly underrated the opposing forces. We suggest to Dr. Palmer that until nine-tenths of the literature, arts and sciences and a vast majority of the Christian agencies, forming the life of civilization, cease to be found outside of the Southern States, a little modesty of assertion would be wise.

The New York Times hits the nail on the head. Referring to Scarret's plan for the organic union of the two great Methodisms in this country, it says that it "simply amounts to a proposal to unite two Churches for the purpose of dividing them into three."

Thanks to John F. Slater.

He died of pneumonia, hastened by exposure at the funeral of the poet Longfellow, which he insisted upon attending. His fame was world-wide, and he is by some estimated as the greatest philosopher this country ever produced.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

Rev. Charles Monroe is rejoicing in the hope of being in a new church 27x37. His people at Comite receive him with open hands and hearts.

Rev. Stephen Duncan, Presiding Elder of Shreveport District, writes that on Friday night April 21, a fearful storm swept over Shreveport and blew down the St. James Methodist Episcopal Church, one of the best churches we had upon the District. Though cast down the church and its congregation are not discouraged, but are rallying and are resolved to rebuild. No man can lead them on better than Bro. Duncan.

Rev. T. Larkin, Waxia Circuit, "Our church and people are entirely surrounded by the flood. The whole place is under water, higher than ever was known. Great distress prevails among our people. Nearly all their horses, hogs and cattle have perished; and their growing crops are all lost. The water covers the tops of many houses. The church was doing nicely. A protracted meeting of one week resulted in 13 conversions. The water came so very rapidly we had to close, and now the people are scattered everywhere, some in Bellevue, Washington, Opelousas, or other places of refuge. I am here a refugee at Opelousas, with Bro. Luster. Pray for our deliverance."

TEXAS.

Bro. G. Bragner of Denison, writes about poverty and hard times, but his people are trying to build a church.

At Waelder, Texas, Bro. Lee Reed reports his work as follows: "I have two appointments and two good Sunday-schools. My protracted meeting resulted in 23 additions to the church and 16 conversions to God."

Rev. A. C. Culbreath, Huntsville, Texas, reports his second quarterly meetings as a season of special refreshing from the Lord. God's gospel sermons were preached by Bros. Loggins, Smith, and Rev. W. B. Pullam, P. E. The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered to 107. Collection for P. E. $18.

Rev. A. Foster, of Port Sullivan, Texas, writes: "I have just closed a protracted meeting that resulted in the conversion and addition to the church of eighteen persons, besides the good that has been done in quickening the church, and producing a general seriousness with sinners who frequently call upon people to pray for them, that they may be saved from the pains of the second death."

MISSISSIPPI.

Rev. L. L. Shumpert, Columbus, Miss., is having great religious prosperity. As some of the results of a protracted meeting 63 were received on probation, 54 converted to God, and 41 baptized.

Jesse N. Winbush, Abbeville, Lafayette Co., Miss.; reports a prosperous Sunday-school with 40 scholars enrolled. E. J. Turner, a noble worker as superintendent, and William Moss, Bettie Garden, and Mary Mathews as teachers, with $3 in the treasury.

ARKANSAS.

A. J. Phillips, Jacksonport: "I was appointed to Fayetteville at conference, but for the good of the work the presiding elder changed the appointment and left me here. I returned home sick, but recovered, and am now at work. For two or three weeks the town was overflowed with water, so we could not have church at all. Our town was injured considerably by the overflow, and before I left fire broke out. Such destruction as this was brought very hard times on the people, especially on the laborers. How to stay and succeed I could not see, but I carried the matter to God. I received word that the presiding elder would meet me, but one week before he came I was able to get out and hold a prayer meeting. Every evening we prayed for a revival. The Lord began to stir the people up. The elder arrived and found the harvest ripe. We have had fourteen converts and twenty-one accessions. Many of the white people are attending our revival. Bro. Britten, pastor of the South Methodist Church, attends, and takes part in our meetings. His presiding elder was with us one Sunday."

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

From Waco District.

MR. EDITOR—Our Annual Conference adjourned on the 4th of December, 1881. I commenced my work in the same month, as the Waco District is very large and the appointments far apart; yet there is travel enough in this District to make nearly two, as our churches in the Northern portion of my District are from 30 to 40 and 60 miles apart. This is the way my work lies in North Texas, but we anticipate that the time is not distant when our District will not cover so much ground, and that our Church will occupy all of the vacant space now between them. Then we could have a North Texas Annual Conference. The third Saturday and Sunday in December found me at Bremond. Bro. J. A. Hall was at his post and the brethren notified and on hand. Business was attended to with great interest. They were glad to meet their new pastor and promise to give him $225 for this year. Saturday evening the love feast was given and fifty witnesses spoke for Jesus; at 3 p. m. the Lord's Supper was administered and the power of the Holy Ghost was felt among the people. From this place the 7th and 8th of January found me at Calvert. Rev. H. Swann is pastor at that point. He is up to time, having his brethren well notified and all on hand. The business was attended to with much interest. The pastor's salary was fixed at $450. The people are proud of their pastor. At 3 p. m. Sunday the Lord's Supper was given, but the inclemency of the weather prevented the people from turning out, but we had a good time. The influence of our Church at Calvert is widely felt. The report shows an increase; up to this time 13 have been converted and the good work is still going on. The 14th and 15th of January found me at Waco. Rev. B. F. Smith is the pastor. The brethren were well notified, up to time and all on hand. Business was attended to with great interest, and the report from pastor and leader was very encouraging in planning for improvement. Saturday evening at 7 o'clock love feast, 180 witnesses spoke for Jesus. Sunday at 3 p. m. the Lord's Supper was administered to a large number but not as large as usual, owing to bad weather. At this place St. James is not a whit behind our best charges in the West Texas Conference. With her membership not as large as several other points in the Conference they promise their pastor $500 this year; they are determined not to be outdone. January 21 and 22 found me at Spring Hill, known as East Waco. Rev. A. Taylor is the pastor. The brethren were well notified, but owing to so much bad weather were prevented from attending in full force. Business was promptly attended to, and the report of the pastor was encouraging. It rained all night Saturday and Sunday. The Lord's Supper was administered to a small number. The pastor's salary was fixed at $205. January 25 and 26 found me at Port Sullivan. Bro. A. Foster is pastor. Bro. Foster was at his post and the brethren were well notified. Business was attended to promptly. The weather was very cold, with rains. The 11 and 3 o'clock services were very well attended, considering the weather. The pastor's report was very encouraging, there being 18 conversions. We look for a grand harvest at this point. February 4th and 5th I was to have been on the Marlin Circuit, but bad weather prevented me. My next appointment was at Marlin Station on the 11th and 12th, but bad weather hindered me from attending. The 18th and 19th found me at Groesbeck Mission. Rev. A. Jackson is the pastor. We had a grand time, the business was promptly attended to. At 9:30 a. m. we partook of the Love feast and the presence of the Lord was with us. At 11 o'clock preaching, and at 3 the Lord's Supper was administered to 203. Here the Lord is pouring out his Spirit upon the Church. The brethren are preparing to build, and have 3,000 feet of lumber on the ground. The high water prevented the work from moving forward. A few days after the quarter some wicked person burned the church at Cedar. It was a new church, built about eight years age. The 25th and 26th I was to have been at Spring Hill Mission, Rev. A. Brack pastor, but on account of sickness was prevented from meeting my appointment. I got Rev. G. Wilson to fill my place. The 18th and 19th found me at Dallas. Rev. P. Gates is the pastor. He had his brethren well notified and on hand, the report of the pastor and leaders was encouraging. They had raised money enough to pay off some of their indebtedness to the amount of $100; the pastor's salary was fixed at $450. Four were converted and we received 13 additions. They are looking forward to a grand harvest at this place. My next point is 67 miles from Dallas. I left Dallas on the 30th and stopped at McKinney looking after the work at this point, and from thence to Denison. Rev. G. Bragner is the paster at this point; the brethren were well notified, the business was attended to with interest, and the report of the pastor shows a grand increase of 15. The pastor's salary is fixed at $100. On Sunday the Lord's Supper was administered to 25 communicants. We have only 29 members here, and, having no church, rent a house to worship in. We trust they will soon have a house to worship in. Here is a good chance for some good, generous-hearted person to help these poor people. I wonder who will lead out in this line of march first. I prepared a subscription paper and went around with it and was able to raise $63 A good many promised to help when they saw the building started. My next appointment is 43 miles, which is Pilot Point. Rev. A. Lockhart is pastor. The brethren were on hand and well informed; the business was dispatched promptly; the pastor's report shows a decrease of 15 members who moved to the Indian Nation, at which place we have no church, but they propose building; they have 5,800 feet of lumber on the ground, all paid for, and have contracted with workmen to build.

Every preacher on the District has gone to work in real earnest, and we are looking forward for a grand harvest at the annual session.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

SECOND QUARTER—LESSON vi. May 7, 1882. SUFFERERS BROUGHT TO CHRIST. MARK vii. 24—37.

The Pharisees had attempted to destroy Christ's influence with the people by proving that he disregarded their sacred traditions which were thought too holy to be written. But he boldly denied any divine authority to their traditions, called them mere commandments of men, and showed their glaring antagonism to the word of God, thus proving not only their human origin, but also their injurious character. They had also been held up as false teachers, leading the people astray, and insisting on insignificant ablutions, and of ignoring real purity of character. Jesus' statement was so plain and so in accord with common sense, that his accusers appeared before the people as rotten masses of corruption, though clad in the garments of religion. They had been so thoroughly beaten that they feared to encounter him further lest they should be more deeply humiliated. They withdrew, yet they could not refrain from showing their anger. They found themselves incapable of successfully encountering him in a battle of words, and so they resolved that they would use the power of the sanhedrim against him. When Jesus was told by his disciples that they were offended, he probably knew that they were determined to bring him to trial for heresy. He was well aware that a fair trial was impossible. His work was not done. Not in Galilee, but in Jerusalem was he to suffer. So, to avoid their malice, he withdraws beyond their reach. He went into the borders of Tyre and Sidon, and sought retreat and shelter in the hospitality of some home, but he was the light of the world, a city set on a hill that could not be hid. His light, shining from deeds of mercy and words of love, had penetrated this darkness. Jews from this vicinity had passed through Galilee in going to the feast at Jerusalem, and had brought back descriptions of his wonderful works. A Syrophenician — — — besought him that he would cast forth the devil out of her daughter. This woman, though not a Jewess, had heard the news, and started to find the great Healer. Her daughter was afflicted and a mother's heart bled. She made her child's sufferings her own, so that Matthew reports her as praying "have mercy on me." This woman though a Greek would receive him whom his own countrymen at Nazareth had rejected. The disciples came and interceded for the woman, yet not for her but against her. They prayed not for the restoration of her daughter, but that Jesus would send her away as she was disgracing them before the people by crying after them. To the Jews all Gentiles were dogs. She was willing to be called a dog, and beg a dog's privilege of a crumb. A crumb, but a crumb from the Lord's table, how much there is in it! A crumb from the infinite store is all all that men need. Her faith prevailed. The woman hastened away to greet her restored daughter. She found her child weakened by the struggles of the demon, but no longer a raging maniac. She was quietly lying on her couch to rest. Jesus journeyed northward toward Lebanon; then along the foot of that mountain around the head of the Jordan, down its eastern bank. Here a multitude greeted him, and he healed and fed them. Failing to find privacy in the vicinity of Tyre, he journeyed east, but with no better success. The crowds met him everywhere. No more could the sun in the heavens be hid in a clear day.

From Our Mission Rooms.

Rev. Henry Hoffman, who has been engaged in the mission work inaugurated by Rev. Wm. Taylor in Chili, arrived with his family in New York, April 14, by the steamer City of Para from Aspinwall. Mr. Hoffman was obliged to return home on account of his wife's health. He has labored for about four years among the German settlers in Llanguihue, the southwest province of Chili, which borders upon Patagonia. Puerto Montt is the seaport and capital of the province. The early attempt to preach the Gospel in Valdivia, farther north on the coast, was quite unsuccessful, the missionary being frequently insulted and violently assailed in the streets. Bro. Hoffman has been at least four times, at different places, in serious peril of his life. He has met with opposition from both Lutherans and Catholics. About the Lake Llanguihue, which became the principal scene of his labors, he found a large number of German settlers. A hopeful opening was first found among Catholic families, and the means of approach was found in teaching the children, who are to a great extent destitute of elementary education. The Catholic priests seem not to favor it. From some persons Mr. Hoffman found kind treatment, and a moderate supply for his necessities, though he has endured much hardship. As a result of his continued spiritual labors a goodly number of happy conversions have occurred. A society of thirty-seven members has been formed in Llanguihue, and one of their number has developed such gifts and graces for the work as to be left in charge of the flock as licensed preacher. Mr. Hoffman was himself ordained elder by Bishop Harris, at Concepcion, where he went to meet the Bishop in the month of December. His conference connection was with the East Maine Conference.

On the journey northward, as the stoppages of the steamer permitted, Mr. Hoffman visited the other missionaries on the west coast. He reports about thirty-eight male and female missionaries, sent out through Mr. Taylor, at work in this stretch of country, including Aspinwall. Quite a number of these persons are engaged in teaching, and some find a fair support. Much of the evangelical work which is done is not distinctively Methodistic. The stations occupied in Peru were, as is well known, abandoned during the war, and most of the missionaries are now at work in Chili.

Effort will be made this season to remove a portion of the debt. The church is distant about a mile from the old mission premises. This latter property is now again considered safe, and retains its pecuniary value. Dr. Humphrey is feeling great interest in the native work, as well as in the English, for which he is this year engaged. Mrs. Humphrey can devote [illegible] time to the work among [illegible] women. They have an excellent native brother and wife associated with them, both of whom were educated in medicine by Dr. Humphrey. There seems to be demand for a native church building in [illegible] in that portion of the town where the new English church is situated. since the excellent one we now have there is quite overcrowded with hearers. This church was put up entirely without aid from the Missionary Society. We are doing a grand work in Gefle. At Upsala, the university town, a church building is about to go up. The labors of the pastor have been blessed with many conversions, and the influence of the meeting has been deeply felt among the students of the university. At other places on the district, as Sandriken and Sundsvall, marked progress is shown.

The students at the Theological School, of whom there are seven, have exerted themselves very energetically in preaching. The Church paper Sveuska Sandebudet is evidently obtaining a more extended circulation in the country.

We have received the January number of the Original English Chatterbox from the American publishers, Messrs. Estes & Lauriat, Boston, Mass. This is the children's magazine, par excellence; containing 32 pages, and 16 full-page illustrations each month. It has more than a million readers in England and America. For one dollar sent by a new subscriber, directly to the publishers, they will send, postpaid, Chatterbox for one year and a beautiful steel engraving of a little girl puzzling over her first sum, and entitled "Ought and Carry One." The engraving is 18x24 inches.

Wide Awake for May has a poem on the first page. Following Mrs. Cook's poem, "What A Shame!" is a capital story of a young midshipman's adventure, entitled "Lost In Pompeii," and the boys have several other good things among them: "The Carib Captain's Story," by the Mexican traveler, Fred. A. Ober, and "The Klaskipaws" by Eliot Glover. They also will enjoy the two serials, "Their Club and Ours," and "From The Hudson to the Neva." Other good stories are a "Vexed Question" by Mrs. Eckerson, "Polly's Nest Egg," by Mary Densil, and "Candle Ends," a story of Old Boston by Mrs. Louise T. Craigin. Mr. Arthur Gilman has another "Short Story from the Dictionary," this time telling how dictionaries are made. The sixteen pages of Chautauqua Readings are of high excellence, and finely illustrated. $2 50 a year. D. Lothrop & Co., Boston.

St. Nicholas for May is a phenomenal issue in regard to both the quality and the number of its illustrations. There are, in all, sixty-eight pictures, eleven of them full-page engravings. The most fully illustrated article is that by Mr. C. L. Brace, Secretary of the Children's Aid Society, New York, on "Well-reared Children," the waifs and strays of humanity, drifting about without friends or home in a great metropolis, and how this excellent Society takes them from the evil influences in which they are growing up, and sends them out to good homes on Western farms. And there are many more stories, sketches, verses, and pictures (a page full devoted to the baby elephant), which combine to make a number brimming over with entertainment for thousands of its readers.

A True Blessing.

It would indeed be a blessing to poor weak, nervous debilitated, suffering humanity, if druggists would stop selling the many vile purgative pills and cathartic compounds advertised for the cure of liver complaint. Although they afford temporary relief, at the same time they weaken the digestive organs and compel a continued and increased use of the same. Sufferers from dyspepsia and liver complaint do not need a cathartic, but should use some true medicinal tonic that will strengthen the digestive organs, and heal the diseased tissues of the stomach, liver and bowels. Such a remedy is Brown's Iron Bitters, and it never fails to effect a permanent cure. If you continue to live in poor health, and are determined to die before your time, you have only yourself to blame.—Courier.

"There is no greater mistake," said Dr. Bushnell, "than to suppose that Christians can impress the world by agreeing with it. No; it is not conformity that we want; it is not being able to beat the world in its own way but it is to stand apart and above it, and to produce the impression of a holy and separate life. This only can give us a true Christian power."

Alexander Stephens announces that if the people of Georgia wish it, he will make the race for Governor next fall.

The Georgia State convention of colored men at Macon adopted a platform in sympathy with any movement to overthrow the Bourbon Democracy and that will offer better inducements than the Republican party. The resolutions demand the repeal or modification of the penitentiary system of the State and larger appropriations for educational purposes, and declare that a poll tax ought not to be made a prerequisite to voting.

Two resolutions practically indorsing Gov. Crittende's action in the Jesse James affair, were introduced in the lower house of the Missouri Legislature, one by Democrats, the other by Republicans. Both were ruled out of order by the Speaker, and an appeal from the decision of the chair was taken. The Democrats voted solidly, 80 in number, to sustain the chair, while the Republicans and the Greenbackers, 42 in number, voted against the chair.

Dear Brothers, look well to the appointments. G. W. Barney, P. E.

From Distinguished Ed. Jennings, M.D. (Surgeon City Hospital, Halifax, N. S.)

Colden's Liebig's Liquid Extract of Beef and Tonic Invigorator is a very agreeable article of diet. In Diphtheria, Malarial Typhoid Fever, and every depressing disease, its use will be found invaluable. (Remember the name, Colden's—take no other.) Of druggists generally.

DEATHS.

Bro. Randal Brown was born in the family of Benj. Brown, near Franklin, Williamson county, Tenn., June 5, 1819, and died from the third stroke of paralysis, in Hot Springs Arkansas, April 21, 1882, where he had gone for the benefit of his health. He was married to Miss Sallie Johnson, who survives him. They had only two children, one of whom is now living. He had no particular trade but was worked as a farm hand on the premises of his owners. When the emancipation came he went to doing general work; afterward he commenced buying wood and selling it; then he purchased carts and hauled upon the streets. He was much respected by all who knew him. In 1868 he was elected Judge of the County Court of Davison county, which position he held for two years; as the law was so changed as to limit the term to two years. Having some claims against the general Government he went to Washington City to attend to them. Here he was given employment, first in the Post-office and then in the Treasury Department. He was forced by sickness to resign his position, and he returned to this city. While acting as body-servant in the late war he was converted. In 1865 he was baptized by Rev. Daniel Brown, and joined the M. E. Church. When our Church was torn to pieces by dissensions Bro. Brown proved loyal to God and Methodism, and remained with the old Church. Ever since he has shown respect for all but loved his own Church to the last. He was never too poor to assist the cause of the Lord, nor too busy to serve the Lord. He was elected Trustee of Clark Chapel shortly after his conversion, and remained a devoted member thereafter. The Church is now in possession of a silver communion set presented by him, on which his name has been engraved. However, the engraving on that set will fade from public view before the pleasant memories of that man fade from the hearts and minds of the community and Church. But he is gone. The State loses an influential citizen, the Church a faithful, zealous and Christian member, while the mother loses an affectionate husband and the daughter a loving father. He was a member of the Knights of Wise Men who will follow him to the grave. His place will not be easy to fill.

His remains will be brought to the city to-morrow, and his funeral sermon will be preached by the writer, assisted by Revs. Wm. Butler, J. Braden, D. D., M. Merry and C. Pickett. As we carry his remains to their last resting-place we shall be able to say of him; "thou shalt come to thy grave in a full age, like a shock of corn cometh in his season." And as we lower his body we almost seem to hear the angels sing:

"Servant of God, well done!
Thy glorious warfare's past;
The battle's fought, the race is won,
And thou art crowned at last.
With saints enthroned on high,
Thou dost thy Lord proclaim,
And still to God salvation cry—
Salvation to the Lamb."

Sister Sarah Meardy departed this life Feb. 25, 1882. She was a member of the M. E. Church for 12 years, and died in full triumph of faith. She left six children and a host of friends to mourn her loss.

The Rev. Dr. Hartzell, of New-Orleans, was guilty of a bit of repartee the other day that was decidedly clever. He was discussing the union of the Northern and Southern branches of the Methodist Church with a brother clergyman belonging to the latter branch, who insisted that the Methodist Church South was the original of that denomination in America. "Well," replied Mr. Hartzell, "I belong to the Methodist Church of God, and if you want to call yours the Methodist Church South of God, I have no objection."—N. O. Times-Democrat.

EARS FOR THE MILLION!
Foo Choo's Balsam of Shark's Oil
Positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness Known.

This Oil is abstracted from peculiar species of small White Shark, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as Carcharodon Rondeletii. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist Priest about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal that for over 300 years no Deafness has existed among the Chinese People. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1 per bottle.

HEAR WHAT THE DEAF SAY!
It has performed a miracle in my case.
I have no unearthly noises in my head and hear much better.
I have been greatly benefited.
My deafness helped a great deal—think another bottle will cure me.

"Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, as the writer can personally testify, both from experience and observation. Write at once to Haylock & Jenney, 7 Day street New York, enclosing $1, and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. A WONDERFUL And SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.

These Glasses are chemically treated in the process of manufacture, and possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analysed by American and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and can in some cases restore the sight if used in time, but in no case can the eye become impaired by their use for the following reasons:

1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye, completely doing away with that tiresome sensation that is usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours' use.
2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.
3. The chemicals keep the glasses cold, and the result is that the optic nerves are always cool, doing away with any feverish sensation to the eye.
4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, with no distressing or tiresome sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.

ESPOSIZIONE MUSICALE IN MILANO
Sotto il Patrocinio di S. M. la Regina,
Palazzo Del R. Conservatorio
AT THE GREAT ITALIAN MUSICAL EXPOSITION

Recently closed at Milan, was probably the MOST EXTRAORDINARY COLLECTION OF MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS, old and new, ever brought together; fully illustrating the great progress which has been made and present high excellence in this department of manufacture. After exhaustive examinations and comparisons, extending through a period of several months, more than 250 Awards were made of medals and diplomas, in recognition of degrees of excellence attained in the various departments of musical art and manufacture. For REED INSTRUMENTS, including Organs and Harmoniums of all countries, European and American,

THE GRAND SILVER MEDAL,
being the only highest award in this department, was conferred upon the

MASON & HAMLIN ORGANS.

Their manufacturers value this extraordinary distinction the more highly because of the importance of the occasion, especially as an INTERNATIONAL MUSICAL INDUSTRIAL COMPETITION IN A COUNTRY PRE-EMINENTLY MUSICAL. The Mason & Hamlin Organs were honored by especial exhibition before the Royal Court by CARLO DUCCI of Rome, and warm commendation from their Majesties the King and Queen. At all the great WORLD'S INDUSTRIAL EXPOSITIONS for fourteen years these Organs have received the HIGHEST HONORS, being the only American Organs which have received such at any.

IMPROVEMENTS. During the year just closed this Company have introduced improvements of greater value than in any similar period since the introduction of the American Organ by them, twenty years since.

ELEGANT STYLES are now received from their factories daily, surpassing in capacity and excellence anything which has before been produced, and certainly worthy to be ranked with the very finest musical instruments in the world. They are in cases of solid black walnut, mahogany, ash, ebonized, &c., at net cash prices, $240, $330, $360, $390, $480, $570, $840, and upwards.

EASY PAYMENTS. These organs are sold for cash or easy payments, or will be rented until rent pays for an organ.

A NEW ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE, just issued, fully describing and illustrating MORE THAN ONE HUNDRED STYLES OF ORGANS, with net price lists and circulars, will be sent free to any one desiring them. Certainly no one should buy or rent any organ without having seen these circulars, which contain much useful information about organs.

THE BEST REMEDY FOR
Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.

Diseases of the pulmonary organs are so prevalent and fatal, that a safe and reliable remedy for them is invaluable to every community. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is such a remedy, and no other so eminently merits the confidence of the public. It is a scientific combination of the principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs, chemically united, so as to insure the greatest possible efficiency and uniformity of results, which enable physicians as well as invalids to use it with confidence. It is the most reliable remedy for diseases of the throat and lungs that science has produced. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt and certain relief, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it without difficulty. In the treatment of ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Clergyman's Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, and Catarrh, the effects of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household, for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy so efficacious, soothing, and helpful.

The marvellous cures which AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has effected all over the world are a sufficient guaranty that it will continue to produce the best results. An impartial trial will convince the most skeptical of its wonderful curative powers, as well as of its superiority over all other preparations for pulmonary complaints.

Eminent physicians in all parts of the country, knowing its composition, recommend AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL to invalids, and prescribe it in their practice. The test of half a century has proved its absolute certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.

Little by Little.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

A rumor found its way to the Teche country, and his former charge, that Rev. Addison Moore, appointed to our church at Conshatta this year, had been drowned, but from the fact that we have received from him this week a list of twelve new subscribers for the SOUTHWESTERN there must be a mistake about it. We are thankful to learn that our brother is still among the living.

Wm. Smith, Donaldsonville: "The church is getting along splendidly; with a crowded house every night. Sunday night 350 were in attendance; and among 59 converts was one white gentleman. One crossed the river, and we buried her on Sunday. Have received over 100 in the church since my pastorate."

MISSISSIPPI.

Wm. Payne, Batesville: "We are carrying on a protracted meeting. At present we are having a very good time. There were five converted and nine accessions to the church."

Wm. Gatewood, Walthall: "On this work have founded two new Sunday-schools. Greensboro work has no church of its own."

TEXAS.

I. B. Scott, Houston: "Our Sabbath school, Thomas Freeman, superintendent, celebrated Easter Sunday in a manner in every way befitting the occasion. The service as arranged by Dr. Vincent, was used. Prof. O. A. C. Todd had charge of the musical department. The church was elegantly decorated with flowers, evergreens, etc. The Daughters of Conference, a benevolent society, presented the church a beautiful baptismal bowl, and the Sabbath school presented a nicely bound Bible for pulpit use. Two little girls delivered these presents to the pastor with very neat little speeches. The officers and teachers labored hard to make the occasion a success, and from deserved compliments received feel amply rewarded for efforts put forth in preparing the children. The parsonage had another night attack a short time since, when kind friends brought in a matting for the floor, various eatables and other articles for the household use. Love feast on 30th, well attended. We are moving on nicely. Pray for Trinity Charge."

"Golden Medical Discovery" is warranted to cleanse the blood from all impurities, from whatever cause arising. For Scrofula, Sores of all kinds, Skin and Blood Diseases, its effects are marvelous. Thousands of Testimonials from all parts. Send stamp for pamphlet on Skin Diseases. Address World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

Soft Gingerbread.—One cup of molasses, one cup of boiling water, a tablespoonful of butter, one teaspoonful each of soda and ginger, and a pint of flour. Bake in a shallow tin.

FARMERS' WIVES.

It is an evident fact that farmers' wives are afflicted with many diseases which are the result of overwork. They are constantly on one ceaseless routine of toil from daylight at morning until late at night. No change, no relaxation, no rest! Farmers should note this fact, and be forewarned before it is too late. It is astonishing what an amount of labor the wives of farmers perform. Many of them get up and have ...

SAMARITAN

NERVINE.

Samaritan Nervine

Cures Epileptic Fits, Spasms, Convulsions, St. Vitus Dance, Virtigo, Hysterics, Insanity, Apoplexy, Paralysis, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all Nervous diseases. This infallible remedy will positively eradicate every species of Nervous Derangement, and drive them away from whence they came, never to return again. It utterly destroys the germs of disease by neutralizing the hereditary taint or poison in the system, and thoroughly eradicates the disease, and utterly destroys the cause.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Female Weakness, general Debility, Lucorrhoea or Whites, Painful Menstruation, Ulceration of the Uterus, Internal Heat, Gravel, Inflammation of the Bladder, Irritability of the Bladder. For Wakefulness at night, there is no better remedy. During the change of life no female should be without it. It quiets the Nervous System and gives rest, comfort and nature's sweet sleep.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Alcoholism, Drunkenness and the habit of Opium Eating. These degrading habits are by far the worst evils that have ever befallen suffering humanity. Thousands die annually from these noxious drugs. The drunkard drinks liquor not because he likes it, but for the pleasure of drinking and treating his friends, little thinking that he is on his road to ruin. Like the Opium Eater, he first uses the drug in small quantities as a harmless antidote. The soothing influence of the drug takes strong hold upon its victim, leading him on to his own destruction. The habits of Opium Eating and Liquor Drinking are precisely what eating is to alimentiveness, as over-eating first inflames the stomach, which redoubles its cravings until it paralyzes both the stomach and appetite. So every drink of liquor or dose of opium, instead of satisfying, only adds to its fierce fires, until it consumes the vital force and then itself. Like the gluttonous tape-worm, it cries: "Give, give, give!" but never enough until its own rapacity devours itself. Samaritan Nervine gives instant relief in all such cases. It produces sleep, quiets the nerves, builds up the nervous system, and restores body and mind to a healthy condition.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Nervous Dyspepsia, Palpitation of the Heart, Asthma, Bronchitis, Scrofula, Syphilis, diseases of the Kidneys and all diseases of the urinary organs. Nervous debility, caused by the indiscretions of youth, permanently cured by the use of this invaluable remedy. To you, young, middle-aged and old men, who are covering your sufferings as with a mantle by silence, look up, you can be saved by timely efforts, and make ornaments to society, and jewels in the crown of your Maker, if you will. Do not keep this a secret longer, until it saps your vitals, and destroys both body and soul. If you are thus afflicted, take DR. RICHMOND'S Samaritan Nervine. It will restore your shattered nerves, arrest premature decay, impart tone and energy to the whole system.

CLEOPATRA

OR THE

Queen of Sheba's Beauty

WAS BUT SKIN DEEP.

The renowned Queen of Sheba, with all her royal pomp, magnificent apparel, and brilliant retinue, would never have appeared within the presence of the grandest of monarchs of the past, had she not also possessed that which is the crowning glory of the female person—a skin unchallenged for its Oriental softness and its almost transcendental purity. Cleopatra, holding emperors at bay, and rolling empires by her word, had quickly lost her charm and power by one attack of blotches, or of pimples, or of horrid tan and freckles.

WOMAN RULES THE WORLD

by her beauty, not less than by by her purity of character, loveliness of disposition and unselfish devotion. Indeed, in the estimation of perhaps too many men beauty in a body takes precedence over every other consideration. Beauty thus forms an important part of woman's "working capital," without which too many, (if not bankrupt in what relates to influence within the circle where they move) are powerless for great good. Hence we see not only the propriety but the duty of every lady preserving with zealous care that which to her is essential to success, and influence and usefulness in life. And, since "beauty is but skin deep," the utmost care and vigilance are required to guard it against the many ills that flesh is heir to. Among the great and annoying enemies of beauty, as well as of comfort, happiness and health, are those pestiferous and horrid skin diseases—tetters, humors, eczema, (salt rheum) rough and scaly eruptions, ulcers, pimples, and all diseases of the hair and scalp. For the cure of these, Dr. C. W. Benson, of Baltimore, after years of patient study and investigation devoted to diseases of the skin, at last brought forth his celebrated SKIN CURE, which has already by its marvelous cures established itself as the great remedy for all diseases of the skin, whatever be their names or character. Its success has been immense and unparalleled. All druggists have it. It is elegantly put up, two bottles in one package. Internal and external treatment. Price $1 00.

EVERYONE PRAISES.

They contain no opium, quinine, or other harmful drug. Sold by all druggists. Price 50 cents per box, $1 for two, $2 50 for six, postage free.—Dr. Benson, Baltimore, Md. C. N. "Twenty-one years ago I was dying with the Consumption. There was no escaping that terrible death—at least so all the doctors told me—when a friend advised me to send to 1032 Race St., Philadelphia, and get Cannabis Indica, which finally and fully cured me." O. S. BISLEY, DeKalb, St. Lawrence Co., N. Y.

"Send another $12 box of Cannabis Indica for a friend. Your medicine has cured me of Consumption. I am as sound and as well as ever I was."
SALLIE D. BENTON, Keysville, Crawford Co., Mo.

Small annoyances in life are vanishing through scientific discovery. In his Skin Cure, Dr. C. W. Benson of Baltimore, Md., has created a perfect remedy for tetter, eruptions and scurf on the face or scalp. Every person using it will have a clear countenance.

Liver, Kidney and Bright's Disease.

A medicine that destroys the germ or cause of Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Kidney and Liver Complaints, and has power to root them out of the system, is above all price. The Democrats in the House of Representatives voted almost solidly in favor of admitting the Mormon polygamist Cannon to a seat. A PICTURE.

BY C. H. CRANDALL.

How can I paint a face which is so fair
That none may know its grace unless they see it;
Yet should you dream of any face so rare
It seemed all goodness, that would surely be it.

No bright-eyed girl, although she once was such,
Is she I sing. Time her girl-beauty stole;
And since has drawn, with soft, artistic touch,
The wrinkles that reveal her gentle soul.

Kind charity—that almost seems to cheat
Her hate of sin by loving still the sinner—
Beams from her eyes, gray eyes, that, soft and sweet,
Scarce hint the depths of tenderness within her.

She always sees some good in every one;
And so each feels for her esteem a debtor;
Her passing sheds a radiance like the sun,
And yet she does not know she makes us better.

Sweet, sympathetic face! In smiles or tears,
I cannot see such good in any other;
Nor better tell the tie that her endears
Than just to write her name; and that is, "Mother."

And so with silver cord that naught can sever,
And set in my unworthy frame of rhyme—
Praying that God will keep it bright forever—
I hang her picture on the walls of Time.

"This trade, which is now being carried on, and of which we possess very little reliable data, is also wholly under the protection of foreigners, there being but few American [illegible] on the west coast.

I am decidedly of opinion that a line of steamers to the west coast would be a great benefit to our [illegible], and in a short time secure for our manufacturing and agricultural interests a permanent source of wealth, and contribute largely toward the civilization of Africa. American houses here would in a short time monopolize the trade. Competition of European houses against them would do very little, inasmuch as European traders must get their principal articles of trade from America through European markets."

Continuing, he says:

"It is impossible to give even an approximate estimate of the extent of the trade which would be commanded by American houses; but I may state in general terms that [illegible] through Liberia, in consequence of the peculiar connection of [illegible] Republic with the [illegible] the almost exclusive [illegible] in a region of [illegible] along five hun[illegible] with an infinite [illegible] by millions [illegible] has been [illegible] than one [illegible] only a few [illegible] while a fine [illegible]

[illegible] articles of trade which we furnish: these are rum and tobacco. How humiliating and how shocking the thought that we control only this unfortunate trade; especially so, when by working for it we could clothe the unnumbered millions of the dusky sons of the Dark Continent with cotton goods of the best fabric, at prices cheaper than any other nation. It should make our nation blush to learn that it is known in the greater portion of Liberia as the land whence rum and tobacco come. But some may be entered, that we cannot in consequence of the distance, compete with Great Britain and France in the division of the West African trade. We answer their objection by asking, How is it we have monopolized the markets of Madagascar and Zanzibar on the east coast, which is the farthest part of Africa from us? If it is possible for us to monopolize this more distant trade, distance cannot be urged against our trade with the west coast. But if distance be taken as an element in estimating the probability of monopolizing a trade, why is it that Great Britain monopolizes the Central American and British Honduras markets, which are right here at our door, and we share but an insignificant portion of their trade? For remember that while Great Britain, from cotton goods alone realized $2,161,000 from Central America in 1880, the United States received only $77,736; and while she got $209,000 from her cotton exported to British Honduras, the United States realized only $66,793 In the West Indies, our cotton trade appears in quite as unfavorable an aspect. Great Britain exported cotton fabrics to the British West Indies to the value of $3,400,000, and to the West Indies not British $6,102,000, a total of $9,504,000. France sold there to the sum of $1,221,000. The United States realized for cotton goods exported $956,000, less than a million, while Great Britain, over three thousand miles across the sea, realized over nine millions and a half. Right, then, under our eyes, Great Britain sells over thirteen yards of cotton goods while we sell one; and she realizes ten dollars for every one we get. Such facts should certainly convince us that the commerce of the far-off land of the Ethiopians, especially that under the government of Liberia, is not too far for us to divide a large and profitable share of it. The United States, producing four-fifths of the cotton crop of the world, should not only clothe Africa, but clothe the world; and instead of working only one-sixth the number of spindles, and one-seventh the number of operatives, should work spindles and operatives to compare with the position which she occupies in her production of the raw material.

COTTON IS KING

in the world's commerce; and since we produce four-fifths of the whole of it, we should reign in clothing the nations. Even right here in our own city, and throughout this Southern country, a country affording water power sufficient to give momentum to millions of wheels in a thousand machineries, with all the raw material in our ginhouses, and with available cheap labor in plenty, we should have thousands of cotton spindles in operation. The busy hum of a thousand spinning-wheels should be heard from one end of this land to the other. The profit to be derived between the raw and manufactured materials should be to our credit. And it can be realized if capitalists will value their own interest and establish cotton manufactories next to the cotton patches. We can see, then, that with all these advantages in our favor, there are millions of dollars for us in the African trade if we will gather them in. What, then, is in the premises? It is clearly to plan for the capture of a large share of the valuable commerce of the west coast of Africa, where, in Liberia alone, we can find a ready and profitable market for "our agricultural implements, schoolbooks, shoes, cotton goods, notions, brass [illegible], flour, and provisions, in exchange for their coffee, spices, [illegible], ginger, cacao, palm oil, palm [illegible], camwood, lime juice, rubber, 'coal oil,' and the precious metals. This is the trade which [illegible] certainly indicate that we should not neglect to develop. [illegible] considerations that influence [illegible] economists, merchants, and men of the world. But, aside from these, there are higher and more binding moral obligations impelling us to the development of this trade. It would not merely be an act of philanthropy to develop this valuable African commerce, and thereby, with the white canvased ships of peaceful commerce, and with the mighty locomotive power of scores of merchant marines, help to force our superior civilization upon those distant shores. Nay, it would not be all philanthropy; but rather it would be a little installment paid upon the incalculable debt America owes to Africa. But, speaking more directly. We have the republic of Liberia, which was planted by the African Colonization Society, under the fostering care of our government. With her peculiar relations to us, we should not delay to lend such aid as will prove of benefit to both. For the information of those who have never studied the true relation of this infant republic to this country, I will diverge for a moment to say that Liberia, extending a distance of 500 miles with an average width of fifty miles along the west coast of Africa, was first formed in December, 1821, as a colony of the African Colonization Society for free Negroes from the United States. This was the first fruit of the efforts of this grand society, which had been organized only four years before with Henry Clay as its first president. Each family was given thirty acres of land and the means for its cultivation. The Negroes who went over, with their proverbial industrial qualities, commenced working, laboring faithfully amid untold privations, diseases, and even deaths, and succeeded nicely. They built the city of Monrovia, which they named in honor of President Monroe, and other towns and cities of importance. They then established schools, built churches, and edited newspapers in greater proportion than in many parts of Great Britain and the United States; and in 1847 they had made such advances that upon the proclamation of their independence as a republic, after the model of our own, they were immediately recognized by this country, Great Britain, and all the European powers, upon which Great Britain furnished the young republic with a corvette of war with four guns. Since then she has constantly advanced, and is now gathering many of the neighboring tribes under her rule, many of whom are accepting our Christian civilization.

This is the country where the Negro race is displaying its ability for self-government, and where its millions of native inhabitants, under the influence of the few thousands of Africo-Americans, are fast learning the arts and customs of civilization, thereby incurring new necessities which we can well supply. Now, what we want for the fulfillment of our complex commercial and moral duty here is the establishment of

with the west coast. Without this our commerce with this portion of Africa must be meager and insignificant. A company has recently been organized in New York for the purpose of establishing steam communication with the west coast, Without this our commerce with this portion of Africa must of necessity be meagre and insignificant. A company has recently organized in New York for the purpose of establishing steam communication with the West coast, but as yet nothing more has been done. The opening of this trade cannot be expected to succeed without the fostering care and encouragement of our government, for commerce succeeds in no country where it is not fostered by the government. Look at the commercial preeminence held by Venice for a thousand years; by Germany, Spain and Italy for several centuries. They held their commercial greatness as long as the strong arms and long purses of their governments gave strength and firmness to their commercial enterprises, but as soon as those were withheld they lost their commercial prestige. And to-day Great Britain owes her commercial greatness to constant government aid. "For 200 years England expended vast sums of money to aid her commerce on the sea; and she not only subsidized lines to every country, but went to war with almost every country in Europe to wrest from them their commerce." We need go to no war to obtain an enlargement of our commerce with West Africa; all we need do is to establish steam mail communication with that coast and commercial activity is assured. We paid $150,000 000 in the war of 1812 to float the American flag unmolested upon every sea; and our fleet ought to be in every port. But this instance is not the only one in which we have lost splendid opportunities by our short-sighted penuriousness. As far back as forty years ago an American citizen established a steamship line to South America. He applied for aid for his line, but his application was drowned by the vociferous cry of subsidy, and no aid was allowed. Discouraged with our treatment, he goes to England, makes the facts known, shows the value of the scheme, and he was encouraged with English aid. In consequence of this, to-day, England runs a line of 200 steamships to South America, while we are still crying for more and better means of transit to South America. It is too humiliating to own, that although we invented the use of steam navigation, we are far behind either Great Britain or France and other inferior powers in its application; while they are being made richer yearly by its constant application. It is said that the strength of Rome was in her legion. The strength of Carthage was in her ships; the one balancing the other; and, were it not for the extravagances, debaucheries and inefficiency engendered by an excessive prosperity, the ships of Carthage would have overbalanced the power of the Roman legions. Among other reasons there are three special ones why Great Britain overshadows us in our commerce upon the seas. The first is, that they have British branch houses in every market in the world, while we trust to commission houses generally. The second is, they engage a vast capital in foreign trade. The third and most important one is, that they have a steam marine that covers every sea, which is not true of us. Apply these three items to our advantage and, with other facilities, we will successfully compete with any and all the great commercial powers of the world. The main question with us is the steam marine. Give us steam connection to the West coast of Africa and new life will be infused in our African commerce; the sun of our civilization will arise and shine there with brilliant splendor, and the millions of that benighted continent will awaken to the call of a brighter morning, grasp the opportunities offered, and join in the happy work of hastening the glorious reunion and millenium when all the nations shall be one; when "they shall beat their swords into plow-shares and their spears into pruning-hooks; when nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more;" but when they shall sit every man under his vine and his fig-tree, and none shall make them afraid."

National Education.

BY A. C. GEORGE, D. D.

The school population of the United States, exclusive of the Territories and of the District of Columbia, was, in 1880, according to the government reports 15,170,963. The enrollment in public schools amounted to 9,706,842, and of those enrolled a large portion attended school but a small portion of the year. This statement shows at once the public peril and the public duty. The illiterate voters already hold the balance of power in the Republic, and our only safety is in the fact that this ignorance is divided between the two great national parties. These uninstructed youth coming every day to manhood and entitled to the franchise, threaten the very foundations of representative government.

The average annual expenditure per scholar for education is quite different in different portions of the country. In the State of Illinois, it is $10 70; in Arkansas, $3 35. In Connecticut it is $11 76; in Alabama, $2 09. In Massachusetts it is $16 86; in Georgia, the empire State of the South, $1 99. These specimen facts show where the principal part of the work of enlightenment is to be done. It is not the impoverished condition of those sections in which such limited sums are raised for public schools which explains their shameful deficiencies in educational provision for the rising generation. The root of the trouble is hostility to free schools, a conviction that the mass of the people do not need to be educated, and an unwillingness of property holders to be taxed for educational purposes. The figures demonstrate the truth of this statement. Alabama, for instance, with an assessed valuation in 1880 of $120,000,000, expended for public education only $375,465, while Nebraska, with only $90,499,618, made a school expenditure of $1 137 995. The assessed valuation of Georgia in 1880 was $229 000 000, and the amount expended for the education of her children was $471,029; while West Virginia, which has a good free school system, with taxable property amounting only to $128,559,927, paid $716, 863 for the culture of her youths. These are not exceptional cases. There are in every part of the country abundant resources for educational purposes. There is not a State in the Union which might not establish, without imposing any burdensome taxation on the people a magnificent system of free schools. But in some sections the public sentiment is not consonant with such legislation. Hostility is born of prejudice, ignorance begets ignorance, and avarice robs itself rather than provide for the poor. The narrowness and meanness and cruelty are mainly local; but not so with the evil effects. The illiterate voter is a national calamity. He curses the whole land. He darkens all our future. He is the blind Samson who is likely at any moment to pull down upon our heads the temple of our liberties. The nation, therefore is bound by the law of self-preservation to take this matter of popular education in hand. Not that it can interfere with the business in detail, or usurp the functions of the State governments. But the Republic is obliged for its own safety, on the same principle that it guards the purity of Federal elections, to become the patron of free public schools and to encourage the education of its own citizens.

In New York State 3 28 per cent of the inhabitants cannot read; in South Carolina 32.32 per cent cannot. In Pennsylvania 3.41 per cent cannot read; in Mississippi 27.89 per cent cannot. This shows where the stimulant is needed. The objections to Senator Logan's bill are that he proposes to set apart a fund derived from only one source, and so liable to fluctuate (especially as thousands of good citizens are intent on the limitation and destruction of what they justly condemn as a ruinous and infamous traffic), and to distribute this fund on the basis of population which would give large sums to States which have no necessity of an educational endowment from any source, and where taxes for school purposes are cheerfully paid. A national educational fund must be regarded as a beneficent fund, to be sent where it is most required. It must be like money appropriated to the coast survey or for the dikes of the Mississippi, to be locally expended, but for the national welfare. The basis, therefore must be illiteracy and not population. The idea is not to give the money to whom it belongs, but to those who need it. This is what the public safety demands. Of 11,000,000 voters, 1,400,000 cannot read and write. That is a peril which cannot very well be exaggerated. It is the duty of the nation to see that the supply of that class of voters ceases. Virginia expends $1.06 per capital of her school population for schools, and more than 28 per cent of her people are unable to read and write. Iowa expends $8 74 per capita, and less than 3 per cent of her people are illiterates.

This shows that Virginia, and not Iowa, is in need of a national stimulant for the promotion of education. We cannot abide this ignorance, because the States which have it are abundantly able to provide free schools. Their indisposition to do this work must be considered. What they deserve is not the question, but what is absolutely essential to the preservation of the Republic. It is not the design to supersede the efforts of the State governments, but rather to stimulate those efforts. To do this it would seem to be necessary to make appropriations on the basis of illiteracy, and then pay over the money when the local government had raised an equal amount or some required sum, or the Federal expenditure might be for teachers, where the States had provided schoolhouses and all other necessary appliances. It should also be stipulated that the schools be taught a certain number of days in the year.

The country is, no doubt, ready to sustain the government in a liberal appropriation of money to secure the great ends of education, and especially to help those who are disposed to help themselves in this matter.—N. Christian Advocate.

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

From La Teche.

DEAR EDITOR—Doubtless you would like to hear from the high water, the village and Church. The water, which has caused so much loss to planters, and such indescribable destitution to the laboring class in this section, has commenced to recede; the land on the east side of Bayou Teche is still covered with water, dwellings and cabins have been washed away, men and beasts have been compelled to make excursions to the high lands. The water is said to be higher than within the recollection of the oldest inhabitant. La Teche is growing with the rapidity of a Western town. It is growing in knowledge and in religious activity. This village is favored above many others, it is beautifully situated, and has educational facilities. We have here two seminaries, one of which is for the education of whites, established through the benevolence of Mr. John Baldwin, Sr., whose charity to the Church is unlimited. The other, La Teche Seminary, is under the wise management of Dr. Rust, the Church's distinguished humanitarian. The Freedman's Aid Society is doing more to mould Christian manhood and character than most organizations in the South.

For the first time in the history of the village a lecture was given, by the Rev. Ernest Lyon, at La Teche Chapel, on the evening of the 13th inst. At the appointed hour a large and appreciative audience were in their seats. After song, prayer and a formal introduction, the lecture, "Recollections of the Past," was delivered in an entertaining manner. It was an intellectual treat. The ladies of the congregation arranged for the gastronomic feast which was afterward heartily enjoyed.

Yours truly,
GEO. W. WELLS.

From Pearl River.

DEAR EDITOR—I have just finished the first round on my work. I desire to say that my churches are all prospering. On the 6th I left home for Springfield, fifty-five miles. At the depot, waiting for me, I met Bro. George, and I was able to hold quarterly conference at 6 p. m. The church had been white-washed inside and out. The weather had been very bad and prevented a great many, who lived five and ten miles back in the woods from being with us. The white people attended the church in crowds. Some of them contributed liberally. Mr. Ed. Spiuk contributed to purchase books for our Sunday-school library, and also stove-pipe for the church. We protracted our meeting, and several mourners came to the altar. A missionary society was organized, with Rev. Israel Rogers as President and Bro. George, Secretary; Sister Carter, Treasurer.

On the third Sunday I was at Mandeville, and there had a good time. My people are sorry they cannot have Presiding Elder Dale with them, as they are under the impression, as well as myself, that he can do a great deal of good here.

On the morning of the 6th my sister-in-law was married to Mr. T. N. Porter, the post-master at Pearl River, in Carrollton. They arrived at home at 1:55 p. m., and at 5:30 p. m. Mr. Porter's brother, twelve miles distant, sent for relatives to appear at his death-bed. Mr. P. Porter died at 6 p. m., leaving a wife and three children, the youngest only nine months old. May God bless them. J. W. LEWIS.

A Revival at Wiley.

MR. EDITOR—We are having a glorious meeting at the Wiley University, Marshall. Eight or ten have been converted, and the altar is filled with seekers. One marked feature of this revival is the testimony of the converts, clear and bright. This is the best and most sweeping revival this school has ever enjoyed. What an influence this meeting must have on this country, for soon the year will end and seventy-five young men and women will return to their homes, the most of them saved and many of them filled with the grace of God.

Wiley is having a grand year, everything moving forward in the best of order. Too much can not be said of Bros. Davis and Webb and Sister Coe, teachers. They take Jesus right along with them into the school-room and everywhere else.

We have but little of interest to write you of other parts of the District, No general revival up to the present. Our prayer is, O, Lord, revive Thy work. Pray for us.

Yours, W. L. MOLLOY.

The Third Re-Union.

PHILADELPHIA, PENN., April 4th, 1882.

At the recent re-union of the United States Christian Commission, held last summer at Chautauqua Lake, N. Y., it was unanimously resolved to hold the 3d Re-union at Lake Bluff, near Chicago, Ill., Wednesday and Thursday, July 5th and 6th, 1882, and invitation having been extended to hold the next meeting at this point, especially as many of the delegates reside in the vicinity. In compliance with this resolution I hereby issue this call, and do most cordially invite all delegates who can possibly be present, to meet at that time and place. A most hearty invitation is also extended to the members of the late Sanitary Commission, and all Chaplains of the Late War to meet with us as they did last year. In sending forth this announcement I embrace again the opportunity of extending fraternal greetings to all who were associated with us in that most benevolent work. Happily the cause of our being united together has long since passed away; still it cannot but give pleasure to meet once again those who were banded together in heaven-blessed efforts to aid the suffering and wounded of our common country, during those years of sad and eventful memory.

The incidents and sound of war no longer greet the eye and ear—peace spreads her gentle wing over hill and valley, river and plain, but there remains much to be done for the suffering and toiling millions of our race, and it cannot be that a gathering of the brave, earnest men who helped in the great cause of humanity and freedom then, can now be held without producing good to themselves and to people with whom they are brought into contact.

The Secretary, Rev. John O. Foster, of Sandwich Ill., will announce particulars as to the mode of reaching the place of meeting, and also the names of distinguished men who may be expected to attend.

Yours in Christian Bonds,
GEORGE H. STUART,
Pres. U. S. Christian Commission.

Pastoral Visiting.

Pastoral visiting never fails of doing good. A pastor who endeavors to make his visits tell on the spiritual life of his people by personal conversation, finds that visiting is one of the most effective forms of Christian work. A minister who never learns the feelings and state of the people by personal conversation is very apt to preach over the heads of his congregation; and if he does not follow up his sermons by personal application, he leaves his work incomplete No doubt what we have said will be endorsed by most ministers, and all would willingly discharge their duty more fully if they could; but they are prevented by the imposition of many duties which should not be laid upon them.—Christian Guardian.

During a heavy thunder-shower at Mechanic Falls, Me., a boy was sitting at the foot of a balm of gilead tree which was struck by lightning. The tree was splintered, but the boy was apparently uninjured. Soon after the accident he was seized with nausea, and on a physician removing the little fellow's clothes there was found upon his stomach and chest an imprint resembling the trunk of the tree, its branches and buds as perfect as could be drawn by the hands of a skilled artist.

The anti-Chinese convention in San Francisco, adopted a plan of action which includes a scheme to divide the Pacific coast into districts, which shall be notified to remove the Chinese within a specified time. Failing such action, the district is to be proclaimed dangerous, and peaceably disposed citizens are to be warned to abandon it, and if the Chinese are still harbored in the district the league is to remove them by force, using as little as may be necessary until the country is rid of them. The convention then elected an executive committee and adjourned sine die.

West Central Africa is to receive four missionaries from Oberlin.

The Cincinnati Gazette says that in that city eighty-one per cent. of all the crime of last year came from the liquor saloons.

Twenty persons were killed at Clifton, Arizona, and on the road from Clifton to Gila river. Col. Forsythe's command was to start from Stein's pass in pursuit, and Mexican Gen. To Our Agents and Friends.

It is probable that the inundation of so large a portion of the Mississippi valley will cause our receipts to fall a little short of our estimates for the present year. If our friends and agents in the high lands will exert themselves they may add to their subscription lists and make up this deficiency. Keep the cause of the SOUTHWESTERN before the people. We are in receipt of letters telling us that pastors in certain places are so absorbed in other work as to neglect their Church paper. The paper was never more popular or effective for good than it is now, and these suggestions will suffice to enlist the hearty endeavors of our friends in an earnest canvass.

Christian Purity.

Human depravity and Christian purity are two great and prominent thoughts in the Bible. Human depravity as presented in the Bible is an awful thought, one that most people are unwilling to receive. They do not like to allow the whole extent of the soul's disease. They shut their eyes to the real facts in the case. It is nevertheless a fact, that human nature is awfully depraved, and must experience one of the mightiest of all changes before it can be fit for the society of heaven. Mere outside work in the form of patching, painting, cleansing, is not needed. There must be the bringing in of something altogether new—a new principle—a new nature—a new and a clean heart; this, and this alone, will meet the necessities of the case. A new heart is the need of the sinner. With any thing less than this he can never see heaven. He may be a member of the most orthodox Church, sing psalms, and say prayers, but if he spends his eternity with the "white-robed throng," he must some time between the cradle and the grave experience something of that wonderful change called Regeneration; he must have a new heart. But a pure heart is the great need and longing of every Christian. By a pure heart we mean one that is cleansed from all sin, one that is morally clean, unmixed, untarnished, and free from all pollution. It is freedom "from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit." The word of God abounds with admonitions to attain unto this grace, and for it Christians in all ages have sighed. It was the chief excellency in the lives of Abel and Enoch. To Abraham it was said, "I am the Almighty God; walk before me, and be thou perfect." Daniel cried after it, and rejoiced over it. The prophets preached it. All the Old Testament Scriptures are animated by this one call: "Ye shall be holy, for I, the Lord your God, am holy." None the less, nay, far more, do the writers of the New Testament present and press this duty. It begins with the Sermon on the Mount, and ends with the last appeal of the Revelation. From its Alpha to its Omega, from its beginning to its end, the Bible glows with this delightful theme. The Scriptures not only command us to be pure, but they frequently represent such a character as actually existing. "Noah was a perfect man in his generation." "Job was a perfect and upright man, one that feared God and eschewed evil." Of Zachariah and Elisabeth it is said: "They were both righteous before God, walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless." "That is, no fault or deficiency could be found in them." "I am pure," says St. Paul, "from the blood of all men." "I serve God with a pure conscience." "Let us, therefore, as many as be perfect, be thus minded." These are scriptures that need no special explanation.

How shall I attain unto this state is many a seeker's and believer's cry. How can I be emptied of all carnality and "filled with all the fullness of God." To this question there be but one answer: Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ for this grace and you shall have it. He can and will deliver from all the works of the flesh. He can and will fill every avenue of the soul with the grace of purity. He gave himself as much to purify his people as to pardon them—as much to free them from all pollution as from all guilt. He can accomplish their purification as truly as their justification. "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." This forgiveness or pardon is full and complete, and has no degrees. There may be degrees in guilt and condemnation, but forgiveness and pardon admit of no degrees. By pardon Christ takes away all the guilt of our sins and gives peace with God. By cleansing, he takes away the depravity of our nature, and makes us partakers of the divine nature. This pardon relates to all sin, it is free and full. This cleansing will be as perfect as complete, having nothing in the heart opposed to pure love. In this matter of heart purity, duty and privilege are bound together. Duty is privilege, and privilege is duty. [illegible] Let us come boldly to the throne of grace, that we may obtain grace to help and keep it time of need.

Fraternity, not Organic Union.

In one of the stories told, we believe, by Mark Twain, he gives his experience in prospecting, and says that having taken specimens of ore of various kinds to the assayer, who invariably pronounced them to be of the richest and most valuable kind, by and by it occurred to him to test the confidence of the scientist by requesting his opinion on the value of certain fragments taken from no richer source than a New-Hampshire grindstone. The assayer, as usual, promptly and confidently pronounced them to contain indications of remarkable richness. At last, the prospector came to the conclusion that the necessary fee would help the scientist in locating a valuable mine in a brickyard.

Something of this sort seems to possess the minds of certain writers with reference to organic union between the two great Methodisms of this country. They are prospectors and assayers at one and the same time, and to them every act of fraternity contains rich indications of a strong desire for organic union.

Drs. George and Scarrett, men of large brain and warm heart, are particularly impressed in this direction. The Methodist, an able paper, but balancing between the two great Methodisms of this country, seems to be the official organ for "organic union." To advocate this measure may sound a little like a "progression," but to us organic union is a dream, a myth. We do believe in fraternity, not merely with one Church, but with all Churches, and do agree side by side to follow the Master and to save all the souls we can; "to elevate and refine society by preaching a living up to the gospel that perfectly adapts itself to all climates, latitudes, governments, conditions, and colors of men." And Churches, like individuals and families, when they each learn to attend to their own legitimate work will have real practical Christian fraternity.

The terms "Northern civilization" and "Southern civilization," so frequently used by certain writers, indicate a narrowness and littleness no way becoming Christian statesmen and philanthropists. They are indications of a desire to keep up and perpetuate sectional strife and hatred. Such men are the bane of the Church and nation. We do believe in an American and Christian civilization. The Methodist Church is in this country not to "Northernize" or "Southernize" society, but to help in the one great work of Americanizing and Christianizing all people. Let us be at rest, and attend to our work; we can afford to wait a little.

Day of Rest.

The Sabbath movement inaugurated by our city clergy is already beginning to bear the blossoms of its precious fruits of promise. The clergy, the laity, and the general public are gradually being brought to interest themselves in the discussion of the great religious, moral, physical, and economical advantages offered by the strict observance of the Sabbath as a day of rest and worship. As a consequence of this general awakening, public opinion is crystallizing itself in a shape to secure legislative recognition and a Sunday law. Last Sunday a very large number of the clerks and other assistants employed in various retail stores and shops in this city assembled to take some steps to promote the passage of a Sunday law by the State Legislature. They effected a permanent organization, with Mr. T. O. King as president, J. L. West, vice-president, W. J. Clifford, secretary, and M. Donnolly, treasurer. Three forms of petition were drawn; the first to be signed by the clerks and other help in retail stores; the second to be signed by retail merchants and storekeepers; and the third by the general public. They have appointed committees to canvass all the wards of the city, and they propose to work with a will and vim to secure signatures to these three petitions, praying the Legislature to pass a Sunday law. This is but the beginning; other interests will follow suit and add force to this movement which promises such rich blessings to the masses. Such movements should receive the immediate and unqualified support and co-operation of all our members and readers. Our brethren also should bear in mind that by resolution of our last conference they are pledged to circulate and secure signatures to petitions praying our State Legislature for a Sunday law. Now is the time to go right to work at it without delay. Let everybody work for the rescue of our one sacred day of rest—preachers, members, saints and sinners, Jews and Gentiles. Our State must get rid of its wholesale and retail Sabbath desecration and pollution. God bless the Sabbath movement.

Editorial Correspondence.

Off again on a flying trip. Accompanied by Mrs. A., taking first-class accommodations on the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, so popular for speed and comfort, we found ourselves a second time occupying adjoining seats to the great head of the "Lost Cause," Jefferson Davis. The old gentleman, though aged and feeble, was apparently in better health and spirits than when we met him the first time, last winter. Being providentially thrown in his company for a second time, and the occasion presenting itself, we did not fail to improve the opportunity of forming the acquaintance of one who has been such a remarkable factor in American politics and history.

SHAKING HANDS WITH JEFF DAVIS.

Upon our introduction, he gave us such a warm shake of the hand as to almost make us forget that it was the hand of Jeff. Davis we clasped. But upon sober reflection, what far different emotions overcame us as we pressed the hand of him whose whole life had been devoted to the great task of forging stronger links of cruel chains to keep a race in bondage, from those that overcame us just two years ago, when we welcomed to New Orleans and shook the hand of Gen. U. S. Grant, whose conquering sword had severed every slavish chain in this country. It was to us a strange and happy experience to be seated in a first class coach on a railroad, upon terms of equal manhood beside this man whose life and blood were so freely offered upon the altar of slavery and proscription, and who but a few nights previously had again emphasized the confession of his faith in the righteousness of his cause, by saying, that had he known all that was to be inflicted upon him, all that his country was to suffer, all that posterity was to endure, he would do what he had done, over and over again. After a few interchanges of courtesies, the following dialogue took place:

A. "Mr. Davis, I read with much interest your speech delivered before the Southern Historical Society. What results do you expect from this meeting upon the future efforts of the society?"

D. "I think it will do good, and I expect abundant results from it. A great deal has already been done; much valuable material has been gathered, and much more will be gathered. You see, many of the most prominent participants in the great conflict, those who know more about it than any others, are fast passing off from the stage of life; therefore it is very necessary that all available information that can possibly be gathered should be gathered as speedily as possible."

A. "How does the Society propose to utilize their information?"

D. "Their purpose is simply to collect material for the future historian. For no one who was an interested participant in such a conflict can write an impartial history of it."

A. "Yes, sir; I noticed in your speech that you publicly gave expression to this same opinion."

D. "Yes, sir; it is so. No one who participated in the late conflict is prepared to write its history impartially."

A. "The periods just previous to and during the war were wonderful times, and resulted in wonderful changes."

D. "Yes, sir; and it seems that men might see the course of events and manage to avert such things."

A. "That's true; it seems so; but, rough hew them as we may, there's a Providence that shapes the destinies of nations as well as individuals; and which makes the wrath of men to praise him."

D. "Yes, sir; not a sparrow falls to the ground without his notice."

After a few more words of minor interest and another cordial shake of the hand we parted.

On this train we also met with a

VERY SAD SPECTACLE

of our unfortunate humanity, teaching us what frail and insignificant creatures we are; how easily our reason may be dethroned, and our minds become unbalanced. The person thus affected was a lady of wealth and refinement, whose family connections rank among some of the best in Louisiana. The recent death of her husband had affected her so very deeply as to have left her greatly distressed and with her mind much impaired.

Fleeting through the piney woods and over beautiful sheets of water at the rate of about thirty miles an hour, we arrived at Pass Christian in time to take on the beach to Rev. M. Dale's fine new residence before night. Here we were entertained by Mr. Dale and his devoted and interesting family. Stopping here over night in comfortable quarters in this very pleasant home by the sea, the next morning we were off again for this city. Coming to Mississippi City, Rev. P. E. Bardwell, whose company we enjoyed to Biloxi, boarded the train. He reports glorious openings at every point on his work. He expects to be able to do a great deal during the next sixty days for a more extensive circulation of the SOUTHWESTERN on this coast. He promises to go to work right at it. Consequently we may expect a pretty good swelling of our lists on this work. After a very pleasant ride, we arrived here at 11:30 a. m. Taking a stroll through the city, hunting for Rev. J. Harper, pastor of our church here, we stopped in at the Emerson Institute, under the management of the American Missionary Association. Here we made the acquaintance of the president, Rev. O. D. Crawford, whom we found to be a very kind and agreeable Christian gentleman, busily engaged in planning for the success of his work. The main building and chapel of this institute are to be rebuilt. They have been totally destroyed twice during the last five years. Each time it was supposed to have been the work of some negro-hating incendiary. We learn that much prejudice still exists here against the education of the colored people, and that not a single colored teacher is employed in the public schools of the city. But the white teachers who teach the colored schools are reported in many cases to be of inferior capacity or moral standing. There is not a single Negro State, county, or city official or employee in the city, and not a Negro representative in the whole State Legislature.

The anti-amalgamation act is in full force in this State. Any intermarriage between the races, being punishable with fine and imprisonment at hard labor in State's prison. Who will deny but what Alabama needs a little reconstructive reformation? Our Church work here, unfortunately is not what it ought to be. In fact, outside of a very narrow limit of the town, no one seems to even know of its existence. Bro Harper, the preacher in charge, is now being blessed with such a glorious revival as will result greatly to the advantage of the work however. Some ten or twelve have been converted. Twenty odd are at the altar every night. We preached a sermon for his people, at which time the church was crowded, and a deep spiritual fervor seemed to overshadow every one. We had a blessed time. More anon. A.

Mobile, Ala., May 5.

It is easy to understand why some Southern men are exceedingly sensitive about the narration of facts upon which public opinion is moulded. There have been dark days and dark deeds in the land. While it is honorable to regret them, a plea of general denial will not answer the demands of justice. As we read the letter of Rev. R. G. Porter, of Verona, Miss., to the Methodist, of New York, with its amazing assertions (which he is willing to make oath in support of) we are reminded of two incidents of Mississippi history. It is in testimony that two stewards of the Methodist Church South sang, hung on the neck, and prayed with Chisolm; they told him that all he nee'ed was religion, and they shouldered their guns a few days afterward and assisted to riddle his body with shot. In Yazoo City the messenger emerged from the room of the Democratic Executive Committee and fired the shot intended by the killing of Dixon to deprive the independent voters of a leader. A prominent leader of the Church South complacently wrote from Yazoo expressing his belief that politics had nothing to do with it. The New York World, national Democratic organ, rebuked the conduct of its zealous party friends as more befitting Zulus than law-abiding American citizens. Chisolm and Dixon were Mississippians. These facts will illustrate that Rev. Porter's assertions are not especially surprising when he declares that "any man of any political party is just as safe and just as free in the expression of his political views in Mississippi as he is in New York;" and attributes warlike measures in time of peace to "political missionaries" from the North. Let the truth, and the truth only, without malice, go on record; but over the graves of martyrs in the cause of political and religious freedom it is a righteous, holy duty to rebuke the unblushing aspersions of their slanderers. The counting out and the shooting out of opposing political majorities are not obsolete methods of the white liners; but they only use as much of one as is necessary to supplement the other method in the maintenance of their political supremacy with rifles and affidavits for alternate weapons.

Congressman Charles Hooker, of Mississippi, has our thanks for a copy of his speech on the Chinese bill.

We take the following from Dr. Buckley's account of his recent visit to the Northern Conference, held at Malone N. Y.:

I called on the Hon. William A. Wheeler, ex-Member of Congress and ex-Vice President of the United States. He has been a resident of Malone for many years, and is respected, honored, and beloved by men of all parties. The citizens told me that his life is devoted to benevolent work of every kind, as guardian of orphans, as counselor and friend of the poor and of those in trouble. It is seldom that I have heard a public man so heartily commended by all classes as Mr. Wheeler was by the people there. It was done not merely in a way that exhibited the pride that persons feel in a noted fellow-citizen, but a friendly interest very much resembling affection. Afterward I rode out with my host and saw the town, and some of the outlying hop yards, and a maple-sugar orchard. Chaplain M'Cabe dined with Mr. Wheeler, and never mentioned the subject of money to him, but after dinner, as he was departing, he received from his host, not a Methodist, the following letter:

MALONE, N. Y., April 17.

Dear Chaplain: Please get out of this region while I have something left. To reconcile you in some measure to going, I enclose my check to your order for $1,000. Put the money in your frontier work in multiplying the fountains of Christian citizenship, and may God's blessing go with you, as mine does. When you get the country well "underbrushed," we will send out some Presbyterians and put on the finishing touches.

Most cordially yours,
WILLIAM A. WHEELER.

Well may the Dr. claim that Chaplain M'Cabe is a "Magician, and throws a spell over the people."

Last Saturday night, while Lord Fredrick Cavendish, newly appointed Chief Secretary for Ireland and Under-Secretary Burke were resting in Phœnix Park, Dublin, they were set upon by unknown men and stabbed to death after a severe struggle. Coming, as this event does, just after the release of Parnell and other Irish leaders from custody, and the launching out of a new policy of conciliation by Primere Gladstone, the consequent results threaten to be disastrous to the Irish cause. Messrs. Parnell, Dillon and Davitt have issued a manifesto to the people of Ireland appealing to them to give prompt expression of their detestation of the atrocious deed. The American branches of the Land League unite with their brethren abroad in its condemnation. The excitement in England is intense, but we trust that moderation and the liberal policy of Gladstone may yet prevail to the honor of all Great Britain.

Because of the great overflow and the destruction of so much property, we are often told times are hard, business dull, and money hard to get, and that "we must retrench." Of course you must. No harm in that. But where and in what way? In expensive luxuries, of course in things you can spare and your family will be none the worse for the absence. You can give up your whisky, tobacco, ribbons, flounces, costly dinners and tea parties, and be all the better for it. But the SOUTHWESTERN, your family religious news paper, that brings all the world to your home once a week, that gives you so many precious religious thoughts, and so quickens your intellectual and religious life, you cannot spare. You might about as well lose a good part of your brains at once as to do that. Times are hard we know, but do not stop the SOUTHWESTERN. It will harm you and your family.

We are often told that the strength of the church lies in the purity and unity of her members, and in the orthodoxy of her doctrines. Doubtless there is some truth in this statement, and yet somehow the conviction is forced upon us that much of the strength of the Church has been largely in her women. They have so lived and worshiped, and have so exemplified and illustrated the beauties of holiness as to command the admiration of the world. It is woman who have trained for the Church her noblest men. Many a man has found that the last link which bound him intellectually to the faith of the Gospel was the remembrance of his mother's piety and prayers, or the daily manifestation of Christian love and purity by his wife. Some of the most efficient class leaders in our Southern work are women.

It is not worth while for the Daily States and other papers to cite the unseating of Gen. Chalmers as a blow at States' rights or as a partisan steal of a Congressman. The Vicksburg Herald, prominent citizens of Mississippi, and leaders of his party in Washington have admitted that General Chalmers did not receive a majority of the ballots cast, which fact alone is sufficient justification of the seating of John R. Lynch, for whom that majority was cast. The Constitution expressly provides that each house of Congress shall be the judge of the election and qualification of its own members, so that any legislation by a State, or decision of a State Court in the premises, is both impertinent and extra-judicial. It seems to be admitted, however, by all parties that Mississippi has the right to legalize any system of fraud it chooses in the regulation of its own local affairs.

Rev. James Porter, D. D., is a strong and vigorous writer, and as such needs no commendation of ours. The book before us, "Christianity Demonstrated by Experience," we have read with the greatest satisfaction, because it presents the various forms of personal religious experience illustrating the divine power of the gospel satisfactorily. Christianity is not a system of mere negations addressed to the intellect, but of positive truths that are susceptible of experimental proof. On the straight line of experience God conducts all of his people to a blissful assurance of the great thoughts presented in the Bible. No matter how depraved, any person who will test them by complying with the conditions will find all doubt removed. If Dr. Porter is voluminous, he is certainly interesting, and this work is "pre-eminently a book for the times," free from all religious crankism, and filled with such a presentation of gospel salvation as will be of great benefit to all who may read it and will accept of its teachings. We most heartily commend this book, and wish everybody would get it. It is one of the best volumes for our ministers and people to read. The publishers, Phillips & Hunt, have got it out in good style, and it is for sale by them at 805 Broadway, N. Y., and at this office, 106 Camp street, New Orleans, La. We will send it by mail, postage included, for $1 50.

Bishop Warren, in a letter from the Kansas Conference to the New York Advocate says: "The Negroes of the recent exodus are almost a unit for prohibition. Perhaps for this end they were sent into the State." Of their thrift and prosperity he says: "The translated colored people are doing exceedingly well. One of our presiding elders, who has traveled among them a year, said: Where there are 200 or 300 hundred together, a majority own homes. You cannot find the same number of white people who came so poor who have done so well. I visited a settlement of them in Topeka, and found neat cottage houses, well painted—some of brick, others of stone—and hardly a single inhabitant shared the feeling of the man who said he never could see the use of two rooms for one family."

The General Conference of the M. E. Church South met at Nashville, Tenn., Wednesday, May 4 The venerable Bishop Paine called the Conference to order and requested Bishop Kavanaugh to conduct the opening service. Dr. T. O. Summers was unanimously elected Secretary, and Dr. A. R. Young delivered the welcome address. The address of the Bishop is a valuable Church paper and will be read with special interest. The large number of lay delegates absent at the opening of the Conference, we trust, was no indication of a lack of interest on their part.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Bishop Warren has appointed Rev. E. O. McIntire of Delaware, Ohio, pastor of the M. E. church at Sherman, Texas.

—Prof. B. F. Cooker, D. D., of Michigan university, is in rather poorer health than usual. He is planning a trip to the far West this summer.

—Florence Nightingale, at sixty-one years of age, looks young and handsome, and is as actively as ever devoted to giving practical relief to the sick and poor.

—During his short stay in Mobile, last week, our Assistant was kindly entertained by Frank Tucker, Esq., son of the late Congressman Richard A. Tucker of North Carolina.

—Rev. Joseph R. Berry, of Detroit, has been transferred to ministerial work in Arizona, and stationed at Tuscon, where there is a fine church, a good parsonage, and an excellent congregation. Northwestern.

—We are pained to announce the decease of Prof. E. L. Patterson, of East Tennessee Wesleyan University, at the residence of his brother, at Johnson City, on the 20th inst.—Methodist Advocate.

—Bishop Peck has appointed Rev. J. G. Vaughn, as pastor of Ames. Mr. Vaughn is a graduate of Drew and is now finishing his studies at Syracuse University from which he will graduate in June.

—Congressman E. John Ellis was the only Democrat who voted to seat John R. Lynch. This distinction should commend him to his constitutents, and to every lover of justice. Such manliness and candor, in rebuke of the slaves of party caucus, becomes a courageous and gallant Louisianian.

—Hon. Horace Maynard died at Knoxville, Tenn, on the 3rd, of heart disease. He was a member of Congress before the war and was a strong Unionist during the war. President Hayes appointed him Minister to Turkey, and Postmaster General. He came near being elected U. S. Senator. He was an influential Southern Republican.

—Hon. Wm. M. Davis, of Monrovia, ex-attorney general of Liberia, recently married Miss. E. J. E. Seton, a native of the Grebo tribe, educated in the schools of the Episcopal mission at Cape Palmas. This is the first marriage of a prominent and influential Americo-Liberian with one of the Aborigines, and the influence, it is said, has been salutary in those communities. African Repository.

—T. O. Summers, D. D., L. L. D., died at his residence on the Vanderbilt University grounds, Saturday, May 6. Dr. Summers was a native of England, was born Oct. 11, 1812. He came to this country in 1830 and became a preacher in the M. E. Church. He was one of the nine ministers that constituted the original Texas Conference. In 1850 the General Conference of the M. E. Church South elected him editor of their books and tracts and Sunday School Visitor. In 1856 he was elected editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate, which position he occupied until 1878. Dr. Summers was a kind-hearted, thorough Christian gentleman. While the Church cannot voice her grief at the death of so great and good a man, she has learned that while the workmen die the work goes on.

—Grace M. E. Church,—Rev. W. C. Webb, late of New Orleans, who at the late session of our Conference was transferred to this charge, came on promptly and entered upon his duties as pastor. He and family were welcomed to the parsonage, which had been previously put in excellent condition by the official members; whilst unusually large congregations have greeted him in the church, from Sabbath to Sabbath, listening with delight to his earnest, evangelical discourses. A public reception was given to Bro. Webb in the church on last Tuesday evening. The house was well filled and the exercises quite interesting. Addresses were made by Drs. Kynett, Rittenhouse and Crook, and by Revs. Inskip and Morrow, and by Bro's. James Long and Thomas May Pierce, the latter making the address of welcome, to which Bro. Webb responded in appropriate terms. The outlook seems to be quite encouraging, and it is hoped that during his term the herculean task of paying off their large church debt, so well begun and so successfully carried forward by Dr. Rittenhouse, will be completed.—Philadelphia Methodist April 20.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

C. W. Kershaw, Kent's Store, reports his work as growing nicely. Bro. W. P. Forest preached on the 23d, and administered sacrament to 74. Ten were received on probation.

A. J. Pickett, Pleasant Hill: "Have organized our Sunday-school as a missionary society, and expect to have a good time with the little folks."

W. L. Amos, Superintendent of the Sunday-school at Boonville, La., writes: "Our Sunday-school was never more prosperous. Sabbath April 2 was a good day. Exercises consisted of recitations from the Bible, by Lewis Thomas, A. Baham, Rosa Amos, Adaline English, and many others. J. E. L. Hoskins, of Franklin, made an excellent address. The collection in the Sunday-school was $8 20."

T. J. Johnson, Mansfield: "Elder Duncan held our quarter and preached for us. Have labored in protracted meetings for two weeks; 5 backsliders were reclaimed, and 8 converts confessed their hope in Christ. Bro. Spears preached for us Sunday night. The church is a mile from town, and we are thinking of buying a lot and moving in."

MISSISSIPPI.

J. Trice, Pontotoc: "The presiding elder visited us, and there was great joy among the people. His sermon was highly appreciated."

TENNESSEE.

J. L. Massey, Linden: "Rev. A. Burdett held our quarterly conference. The weather was rainy, but we had a grand time. Bro. Burdett, preached with much power. The trustees are trying to get a church lot in town. There is not a colored church in the place. Our membership is small. We also want a day school. Our Sunday-school is doing well. Bro. J. A. Price, the Superintendent, is a wide awake worker."

From Our Mission Rooms.

THE MORAVIANS—A GRAND MISSIONARY CHURCH.—Dr. A. C. Thompson has been recently delivering a highly interesting course of lectures at Wesleyan Hall, Boston, on the Moravians and their mission work. They were missionary, and sought to touch the far-off places of the earth from the beginning. When the whole community numbered only 600 souls they opened the mission to the West Indies (1732). They have sent out in all about 2400 missionaries. Sixteen missions are now in operation. They occupy 100 stations, have 160 ordained ministers, 179 female assistants from Europe and America, and 1000 native assistants, with 16,500 pupils in day-schools and 13,000 in Sunday-schools. Their mission membership is 69,000, according to their authority. What is to be specially remarked is that they spend about $250,000 annually in foreign missions! Our own Church last year but $322,636 for the same object. But the Moravians are not a wealthy folk. What if we, with our 700,000 members, were as zealous as they! How soon would the world be evangelized!

ITALY MISSION—ANOTHER CONVERTED ECCLESIASTIC.—The Rev. Frederick Cruciani abjured Catholicism in the Methodist Church in Rome on Sunday evening, April 2. It seems probable that he will be a great help to Methodism. Count Campello will hardly render service as a minister in our Church, though we may hope to see a good work done through his new paper, Il Labaro, the first number of which was issued March 15. The paper will not, however, advocate any denominational interest. A mere particular devotion to our cause is expected from Signor Cruciani, a man of marked ability. Dr. Bruon and his family have been ill, but are improving. Bishop Harris and family were in Rome and in good health at our last accounts.

REV. H. MANSELL and wife, of the North India Mission, arrived in Rome early in April where they were to pass several days. They are expected in New York early in June. They hope to be able to do something for India and the heathen world while in America, and [illegible] strong to India.

LIBERIA MISSION.—Miss Sharp reports that a good revival work has occurred in the Monrovia church. A camp-meeting [illegible] which [illegible] persons [illegible] into the Church [illegible] among [illegible] who had [illegible] in strength [illegible] Monrovia [illegible] higher ground, spiritually, than at [illegible] of the Kroos were to be taken into the Church [illegible] Mrs. Pitman [illegible] of a church there. Rev. C. A. Pitman and Rev. D. Ware (St. Paul's district) are both working hard on their districts with the purpose to advance the [illegible] spirituality and the general interests of the Church. Special [illegible] held at Monrovia since November [illegible] Liberian government has [illegible] an advanced attitude in the [illegible] of the Sabbath. The President [illegible] to enforce the laws [illegible] the natives to send [illegible] This, if [illegible] Rev. Joel Osgood [illegible] White Plains, has been seriously ill [illegible]

Once before they gave them so many hours to pay the claim under threat of bombarding it. The claim was paid, but the Liberians are poorer now. Besides, they strained every nerve to pay the Germans $5,000 lately. I'll put up the American flag on the old Seminary! The United States Essex has been looked for several days, but not heard from yet—not daylight, but the steamer is in."

SALT LAKE SEMINARY, Rev. T. Hilton, A. M., Principal, to be developed into the University of Utah for which a Board of Trustees now exists, is soon to receive new accommodations. The Womans' Home Missionary Society is about to put up a new building for boarding house and dormitories, at an expense of $5,000 and already the Methodist Episcopal Church edifice in Salt Lake city, which is well-known to be of spacious size, with room to spare, is undergoing some alterations which will furnish excellent accommodations for the scholastic purposes of the Seminary by appropriating the lower story and a portion of the upper story to this purpose. The current educational year of the Seminary began March 5. The Grammar school of the institution is under the direction of Prof. T. W. Lincoln; and the intermediate and primary departments under charge of Miss Ida E. Bardwell, and Miss Mary Wheelock, respectively. The Seminary has struggled for years against many difficulties. The present outlook for it is promising, but it needs much pecuniary aid as well as the general sympathy and prayers of the Church.

REV. DR. WHEELER, whose arrival at [illegible] February 7th, has been reported [illegible] returned to make preparations for a final move into the new territory. He arrived at Kiukiang, where his family were left, March 74, having been absent four months on the journey. He reports himself "in good health and spirits." A fuller report will ere long appear.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

SECOND QUARTER, LESSON vii. May 14, 1882. THE LEAVEN OF THE PHARISEES. MARK viii, 1—22.

The last lesson left Jesus in Decapolis on the east of Jordan. He passed over to the west side where he encountered the Pharisees but soon returned, and on the way he conversed with his disciples, warning them of the false teachings of the Pharisees. The location of the miracle of feeding four thousand is supposed to have been near the southwest part of the lake. The multitude had followed him, not expecting to stay long, and therefore taking no provisions. These had [illegible] But Christ did not let them suffer. He commanded them to sit down, and they were filled by eating, and seven baskets remained. The crowd was likely to attract the attention of the authorities, and Jesus immediately took ship and passed into the jurisdiction of Antipas. Notes from Marshall.

MARSHALL, TEX., May 4, 1882.

BRO. CUSHMAN: I have not written any thing about my work this year, for the simple reason I had nothing of interest to write. This has been the most peculiar year I have ever experienced in this work. We had rain for eight or ten weeks, and the streams were higher than for many years, making it impossible to reach a large part of the work. For the reasons above stated, and others which might be stated, I held but few quarterly meetings during the first round. Some of the preachers did not go to their work for two months, and one has not come yet.

Our first district conference met, March 30th, at Jefferson. All the pastors, with few exceptions, were present and ready for work. The heavy clouds that had hung over us and the district until that time (moral clouds) began to break, and every one then left for home with the impression that God was still with his people and he would give us the victory during the year. Much good work was done during the conference. Some old chronic cases were disposed of which have hung fire for years. The conference proved a blessing to Jefferson. The meeting has been going on ever since. They have had twenty-five or thirty conversions, and about fifty-five accessions to the church. The fire has reached Marshall and Wiley University. Many have been converted at both places. Nearly all the young men and women at Wiley, not Christians before, have been converted and have united with the Church. After this long drouth, it is quite refreshing to the soul to be in the midst of these glorious revivals.

We are hoping and praying that the good work will reach every appointment in the District.

All the pastors are now at their work with few exceptions, doing all they can to build up the church and save souls. Bro. Parker of the Centenary church, Marshall, has built a very neat and comfortable church, and expects to preach in it next Sunday. Other churches are slowly going up in other parts of the District.

We want our friends to know that we are still at work, if they do not hear from us often.

W. L. MOLLOY.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

The Louisiana Journal of Education for May has a paper on coercive discipline, a communication by Mrs. S. B. Elder, on the fig, and a comprehensive summary of educational intelligence.

Our Little Ones (Boston: Russell Publishing Co.,) for May has a story for cry-babies, and many others for good ones. The illustrations are striking, and excellent.

The numbers of The Living Age for April 15th and 22d contain Amye Robsart, and On the Names of the Greeks, Nineteenth Century; Italy as it is, Fortnightly; Russia and the Revolution, Queen Elizabeth at Hatfield, and Property [illegible] Inequality of Sentences, [illegible]; Connaught: a Sketch, Cornhill; The "Burden of Sovereignty" and Midnight Tea, Spectator; with the conclusion of "The Freres," and instalments of "Lady Jane," "Robin" and "At his Wits' End," and the usual amount of poetry. A new volume began with the number for April 8th. Littell & Co., Boston, are the publishers.

The Missionary Review for May and June has interesting articles on the gain of giving, and Borneo missions and British annexation. A circular issued by the publishers shows that the Review paid expenses last year, and had $250 82 beside, of which $139 was sent to foreign missions. Terms 1 50 per year. Princeton, N. J.,

Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine for April, (New York, Leonard Scott Publishing Co.,) commences a story "The Ladies Lindores." Other articles are Biluchistan, our Latest Acquisition; Fenianism, its Force and its Feebleness, the Borders and their Ballads, the Bandsman's Story, the Syrian Subjects of the Porte, the Earl and the Doctor, the Scotch Liberationists.

The emigration to the Northwest through Chicago and St. Paul, is immense. It is said that in St. Paul, last week, as many as one thousand were at the Union depot awaiting transportation, without a single couch in the depot for them. The roads leading to St. Paul are all taxed to their utmost capacity.

Two infernal machines were discovered in the mail-bags at New-York, addressed to W. H. Vanderbilt and to Cyrus W. Field. They were clumsily constructed of gun-cotton and sulphuric acid, and one of them ignited in the mail-bags.

The prosecution on the part of the government of the managers of election for the Acton precinct, Richland county, South Carolina, on account of violations of the law, has resulted in their conviction on one of the counts. The count charged that they had obstructed the supervisors in their work. This conviction will be hailed as an omen for good by all law-abiding citizens of the country. It is hopeful that a federal law can be administered at all in South Carolina, for it has been the general opinion that no jury that could be empaneled there would bring in a verdict of guilty, when the offense charged was a violation of the election laws. There has evidently been some progress made in the direction of law enforcement in the South, which, it is to be hoped, will not suffer arrest. The penalty to which these managers have made themselves liable is imprisonment for not more than two years, or a fine of not more than three thousand dollars, or both fine and imprisonment. Should the court award all the law allows, mercy will not suffer any outrage and justice will no more than be satisfied. Honest elections are intimately associated with the stability of our institutions, and dishonesty in their conduct, anywhere and everywhere, should receive severe chastisement.—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

The ladies who sometime since were unable to go out, having taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, are quite recovered, and have gone on their way rejoicing.

Some months ago Governor Churchill, of Arkansas, who was State Treasurer for six years, was charged with being a defaulter. He became very indignant, and demanded an investigation. A legislative committee accommodated him, and, after examining the books, report the charges true to the extent of $125,000. The stealings were very ingeniously concealed, but expert accountants discovered them. The Attorney-General will now proceed to recover the money from the Governor and his bondsmen, through the courts.

Skinny Men.

Wells' Health Renewer. Absolute cure for nervous debility and weakness of the generative functions. $1. at druggists. La. Depot, I. L. Lyons, New Orleans, La.

If it has already paid, as by the terms of the settlement, all the "direct" losses from the piratical cruisers, and still has left some ten million dollars of the amount awarded to be paid by Great Britain—then the only course for our government to pursue would be frankly to pay back that much, or that which, it now appears, was an overplus in the award due. To do this would be an act transcendantly honorable, an example of uprightness and fair dealing, on a national, an international scale, which would tend most effectually to unite in honorable fellowship the two foremost nations of the world.—The Advance.

"Golden Medical Discovery" has been used with signal success in consumption of the lungs, consumptive night-sweats, spitting of blood, shortness of breath, weak lungs, coughs, bronchitis, and kindred affections of the throat and chest. Sold by druggists.

The prohibition movement, which it was feared might weaken the Republican party, is proving an element of strength, through the stimulating influence which it exerts upon the Republicans.—Toledo Telegram.

"Men must work and women weep,
So runs the world away."

But they need not weep so much if they use Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription," which cures all the painful maladies peculiar to women. Sold by druggists.

The General Minutes of the Methodist Episcopal Church South give these statistics for 1881: Traveling preachers, 3704; superannuated preachers, 307; local preachers, 5865; white members, 844,367; colored members, 993; Indian members, 5451; total ministers and members, 860,867, being an increase last year of 12,984: Sunday-schools, 9310; teachers, 62,445; scholars, 462,321—an increase last year of 21,707.

If it is headache of any kind that troubles you, you need never have another attack. Send $2 50 to Dr. C. W. Benson, Baltimore, Md., and he will send you by return mail 6 boxes of his Celery and Chamomile pills and they will permanently cure you. Of druggists, 50 cents a box.

Just now, when general interest is awakening all over the country against Mormonism, let the women of the Church "crystalize" the public sentiment into substantial help for our schoolwork in Utah. All such funds should be designated "for Utah fund," and sent to the treasurer, Mrs. A. R. Clark, 169 York street, Cincinnati, Ohio. The receipt of all moneys for this fund is acknowledged in the missionary column of the Western Christian Advocate.

$1500 a year can be easily made at home working for E. G. Rideout & Co., 10 Barclay Street, New York. Send for their catalogue and full particulars.

EARS FOR THE MILLION!
Foo Choo's Balsam of Shark's Oil

Positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness Known.

This Oil is abstracted from peculiar species of small White Shark, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as Carcharodon Rondeletii. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist Priest about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal that for over 300 years no Deafness has existed among the Chinese People. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1 per bottle.

HEAR WHAT THE DEAF SAY!

It has performed a miracle in my case.
I have no unearthly noises in my head and hear much better.
I have been greatly benefited.
My deafness helped a great deal—think another bottle will cure me.

"Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, as the writer can personally testify, both from experience and observation. Write at once to Haylock & Jenney, 7 Dey street New York, enclosing $1, and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. A WONDERFUL and SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.

These Glasses are chemically treated in the process of manufacture, and possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analysed by American and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and can in some cases restore the sight if used in time, but in no case can the eye become impaired by their use for the following reasons:

1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye, completely doing away with that tiresome sensation that is usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours' use.

2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.

3. The chemicals keep the glasses cold, and the result is that the optic nerves are always cool, doing away with any feverish sensation to the eye.

4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, with no distressing or tiresome sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.

After exhaustive examinations, tests and comparisons, extending through a period of several months, more than 250 Awards were made of medals and diplomas, in recognition of degrees of super-excellence attained in the various departments of musical art and manufacture. For REED INSTRUMENTS, including Organs and Harmoniums of all descriptions, European and American,

THE GRAND SILVER MEDAL,
being the only highest award in this department, was conferred upon the

MASON & HAMLIN ORGANS.

Their manufacturers value this extraordinary distinction the more highly because of the importance of the occasion, especially as an INTERNATIONAL MUSICAL INDUSTRIAL COMPETITION IN A COUNTRY SO PRE-EMINENTLY MUSICAL. The Mason & Hamlin Organs were honored by especial exhibition before the Royal Court by CARLO DUCCI of Rome, and warm commendation from their Majesties the King and Queen. At all the great WORLD'S INDUSTRIAL EXPOSITIONS for fourteen years these Organs have received the HIGHEST HONORS, being the only American Organs which have received such at any.

IMPROVEMENTS. During the year just closed this Company have introduced improvements of greater value than in any similar period since the introduction of the American Organ by them, twenty years since.

ELEGANT STYLES are now received from their factories daily, surpassing in capacity and excellence anything which has before been produced, and certainly worthy to be ranked with the VERY FINEST MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS IN THE WORLD. They are in cases of solid BLACK WALNUT, MAHOGANY, ASH, EBONIZED, &c., at net cash prices, $240, $330, $360, $390, $480, $570, $840, and $900.

POPULAR STYLES, including, also, the most valuable of the recent improvements, and adapted to all uses, public and private, in plain and elegant cases, are at $22, $30, $57, $66, $72, $84, $90, $93, $99, $108, $105 to $200, and up.

EASY PAYMENTS. These organs are sold for cash or easy payments, or will be rented until rent pays for an organ.

A NEW ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE, just issued, fully describing and illustrating MORE THAN ONE HUNDRED STYLES OF ORGANS, with net price lists and circulars, will be sent free to any one desiring them. Certainly no one should buy or rent any organ without having seen these circulars, which contain much useful information about organs.

is a compound of the virtues of sarsaparilla, stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, with the iodide of potash and iron, all powerful blood-making, blood-cleansing, and life-sustaining elements. It is the purest, safest, and in every way the most effectual alterative medicine known or available to the public. The sciences of medicine and chemistry have never produced so valuable a remedy, nor one so potent to cure all diseases resulting from impure blood. It cures Scrofula, and all scrofulous diseases, Erysipelas, Rose, or St. Anthony's Fire, Pimples and Face-grubs, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scald-head, Ringworm, Ulcers, Sores, Rheumatism, Mercurial Disease, Neuralgia, Female Weaknesses and Irregularities, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver, Dyspepsia, Emaciation, and General Debility.

By its searching and cleansing qualities it purges out the foul corruptions which contaminate the blood, and cause derangement and decay. It stimulates and enlivens the vital functions. It promotes energy and strength. It restores and preserves health. It infuses new life and vigor throughout the whole system. No sufferer from any disease which arises from impurity of the blood need despair, who will give AYER'S SARSAPARILLA a fair trial. Remember, the earlier the trial, the speedier the cure.

Its recipe has been furnished to physicians everywhere; and they, recognizing its superior qualities, administer it in their practice.

For nearly forty years AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has been widely used, and it now possesses the confidence of millions of people who have experienced benefits from its marvellous curative virtues.

Five Little Chickens.

Said the first little chicken
With a queer little squirm,
"O, I wish I could find
A fat little worm!"

Said the next little chicken
With an odd little shrug,
"O, I wish I could find
A fat little bug!"

Said the third little chicken
With a sharp little squeal,
"O, I wish I could find
Some nice yellow meal!"

Said the fourth little chicken
With a small sigh of grief,
"I wish I could find
A green little leaf!"

Said the fifth little chicken
With a faint little moan,
"O, I wish I could find
A wee gravel stone!"

"Now, see here," said the mother,
From the green garden patch,
"If you want any breakfast,
You just come and scratch!"

What Shall the Children Eat?

As many children cannot and will not eat oatmeal, Graham and rice, except at rare intervals, it becomes a study what to substitute that may furnish material for the growth of their unresting little bodies and brains. Too often the noon lunch is made of remnants of cake, sauce and pie, instead of one or two nourishing dishes, in which a child's preferences should be indulged as far as may be healthful. In one home this is made the children's special meal, just as the later dinner is planned to subserve in particular the needs and tastes of the head of the house. Highly seasoned or variously flavored soups do not find favor with them like a clear-strained stock made from a soup bone simmered four or five hours, and seasoned only with salt and a mere suggestion of pepper and onion. Give them small crackers to float in it. One little boy [illegible] imagination for the feat, [illegible] that his dish of soup is the ocean, his crackers islands or [illegible], and his spoon a big ship searching for Robinson Crusoe. Of his saucer of oatmeal is a snow-covered mountain, with rivulets of milk down its sides for snowslides and glaciers, or streams of berry juice for molten lava, etc. Potatoes like these have almost as much power [illegible] [illegible] the carefully-cooked viands [illegible]. OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

H. J. Wilght, Alexanderia: "We have been getting on nicely since the water commenced falling. While it remained we could not reach Stuart's chapel. I will commence a new church soon, as the builders are ready to go to work on it."

TEXAS

Benjamin Fisher reports the District Conference, for Huntsville district, which convened in Montgomery. Elder W. B. Pullam and 38 members were present. Elder Pullam reported the entire work as in a growing and prosperous condition. Mr. M. Anderson of Montgomery addressed the conference, and the people of the place were thanked for their hospitality.

TENNESSEE.

J. B. Bradford, Purdy: "On Nov. 26, 1881, I found 14 claiming membership in our church. I have preached every Sunday, or been at the church for that purpose since I have been on the work. I have labored to organize a Sunday-school but it seems to be a very hard thing to do. I have been able to meet seven or eight children around the town. We have only 4 or 5 members in this place, and at one point 12 miles distant, a membership of 9. I have received up to this time only $1.50 for work, and I have a disabled wife and a boy to take care of. It cost me $22 to move here. The work receives from missionary society $30. Our beloved presiding elder held the first quarter. We gave him $2.05"

E. Provine, McMinnville: "I entered on my work a few days after the annual conference. In Franklin, I found the people waiting and watching for my arrival. I am thankful to have been able to keep up my regular appointments around the work all winter, though we have had high water, and sickness in my family. A son aged 11 years passed away in triumph. A great many were cut off from church by high water, and my support was meagre; but since the weather has improved and the people are going to work the prospects are better. Elder H. W. Key held our quarterly conference in February. He is greatly esteemed and makes a profound impression on the people. At Fin[illegible] chapel, assisted by Mrs. Provine, the Sabbath-school is flourishing. Messrs. Walden & Stowe donated to us $4.50 worth of books, for which they have our thanks. We are pushing ahead on benevolent collections, and will get all cash subscribers possible for the periodicals of our church. Have had four additions to the church, and are pushing the temperance cause with some success".

A Remarkable Discovery.

A REAL SKIN CURE.

THERE IS ONLY ONE
AND THAT WITH SIMPLE NAME.

Beware of impostures, pirates, or any old articles which now suddenly claim to be best. They have been tried and found wanting, while this has been proved a remarkable success.

NO POMPOUS NAME.

This curative needs no pompous or incomprehensible title of Greek or Latin to sustain it, but its simple English name appeals directly to the common sense of the people. And the people are signally manifesting their appreciation of this frankness by selecting and using Dr. Benson's SKIN CURE in preference to all other professed remedies.

Dr. C. W. Benson has long been well known as a successful physician and surgeon and his life study has been the diseases of the nervous system and of the skin; since he has been persuaded to put his New Remedy and Favorite Prescription as a "Skin Cure" on the market, various things have sprung up into existence, or have woke up from the sleepy state in which they were before, and now claim to be The Great Skin Cure.

☞ Beware of imitation, or the various articles which have been advertised for years or struggled along, having no real hold or merit on the public that now endeavor to keep head above water by advertising themselves as "The Great Skin Cure." None is genuine and reliable except Dr. C. W. Benson's Skin Cure. Each package and bottle bears his likeness. Internal and external remedy, two bottles in one package. Price $1.00, get at your druggists.

Relief for all Overworked Brains.

CAUSE AND CURE.

Dr. C. W. Benson's Celery and Chamomile Pills are valuable for school children who suffer from nervous headaches caused by an overworked brain in their studies, and for all classes of hard brain-workers whose overtasked nervous centers need repair and sedation. Nervous tremor, weakness and paralysis are being daily cured by these pills. They correct costiveness, but are not purgative. Price, 50 cents, or six boxes for $2.50, postage free, to any address. For sale by all druggists. Depot Baltimore, Md., where the Doctor can be addressed. Letters of inquiry freely answered.

C. N. Crittenton, New York, is wholesale agent for Dr. C. W. Benson's remedies.

The Sunday law was observed throughout the State, except in a few places, and its good effect is generally conceded. The great mass of the people are on the side of the law. No doubt about that, and it is already manifested that the citizens of Ohio will never permit its repeal. The longer it stands and the more strictly it is enforced, the more popular it will become. The Legislature, in passing that law, fairly voiced public sentiment.—Cincinnati Gazette.

Fear Not.

All kidney and urinary complaints, especially Bright's Disease, Diabetes and liver troubles, Hop Bitters will surely and lastingly cure. Cases exactly like your own have been cured in your own neighborhood, and you can find reliable proof at home of what Hop Bitters has and can do.

The Baltimore Methodist says: "Bishop Wiley did a graceful and manly thing in making his home during the session of the Washington Conference among the people (colored) served by that Conference. It is the first time any of our bishops have done this in Baltimore, and it reflects no little honor upon Bishop Wiley to have inaugurated what we trust will now be customary."

The Kidneys.

Persons of Sedentary habits often suffer with kidney affections. Sufferers from this weakening and dangerous disease, by a persistent use of Simmon's Liver Regulator, will restore the kidneys to their wonted health and vigor.

The so-called Readjusters have just completed the first year of their control of the State of Virginia, and, if the report of the Superintendent of Public Instruction is a key to the record of his associated officials, there has been a marked improvement in the welfare of the State. During the year the number of the schools doubled, the number of the teachers more than doubled, and the expenditures for school purposes were increased from $570,389 to $946,109.

Mr. J. F. Cary, Columbus, O., Writes: "I tried Brown's Iron Bitters with my little girl, whose blood seemed poisoned, her skin being constantly covered with pimples and sores. It has cured her completely, and all traces of impure blood in her system has entirely disappeared."

We thank Mr. Slater most sincerely and profoundly—thank him for this great help to the colored people, and to the South, and to the nation. And we bless the good Providence that led him to a conclusion so wise and good. May his noble gift accomplish all he wishes and return to his own heart a hundred fold!—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

A Leetle Too Modest.

A lady on the northside wishing to test the merits of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup thought it would never do to ask the druggist in the name of "Bull." Why, dear me, she couldn't say Bull to save her life, and called at last on a neighbor woman for suggestions on the matter. Dr. Cow's, Dr. Calf's, Dr. Bullock's and Dr. Oxen's Syrup were all mentioned. The latter suited. "Yes, that will do—Dr. Oxen—the very thing, the druggist will understand that. A walk of two squares found her at the corner of Dr. H—'s store, when the following dialogue occurred:

"I wish a bottle of Dr. Oxen's Cough Syrup."

"Dr. Oxen, Oxen, why, mam, I don't believe I keep that. You mean Cox's Hive Syrup, don't you?"

"Oh, no, I mean, mean, Dr. Oxen," and then she seemed wrapped in solemn thought for a moment, when a bright idea seemed to break forth. "Hasn't Dr. Oxen got a relation, or—"

"Oh, yes, yes, mam, Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, yes, yes." The lady sat down a moment and all was over.—[illegible]apolis Ex.

SAMARITAN

NERVINE.

Samaritan Nervine

Cures Epileptic Fits, Spasms, Convulsions, St. Vitus Dance, Virtigo, Hysterics, Insanity, Apoplexy, Paralysis, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all Nervous diseases. This infallible remedy will positively eradicate every species of Nervous Derangement, and drive them away from whence they came, never to return again. It utterly destroys the germs of disease by neutralizing the hereditary taint or poison in the system, and thoroughly eradicates the disease, and utterly destroys the cause.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Female Weakness, general Debility, Lucorrhœa or Whites, Painful Menstruation, Ulceration of the Uterus, Internal Heat, Gravel, Inflammation of the Bladder, Irritability of the Bladder. For Wakefulness at night, there is no better remedy. During the change of life no female should be without it. It quiets the Nervous System and gives rest, comfort and nature's sweet sleep.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Alcoholism, Drunkenness and the habit of Opium Eating. These degrading habits are by far the worst evils that have ever befallen suffering humanity. Thousands die annually from these noxious drugs. The drunkard drinks liquor not because he likes it, but for the pleasure of drinking and treating his friends, little thinking that he is on his road to ruin. Like the Opium Eater, he first uses the drug in small quantities as a harmless antidote. The soothing influence of the drug takes strong hold upon its victim, leading him on to his own destruction. The habits of Opium Eating and Liquor Drinking are precisely what eating is to alimentiveness, as over-eating first inflames the stomach, which redoubles its cravings until it paralyzes both the stomach and appetite. So every drink of liquor or dose of opium, instead of satisfying, only adds to its fierce fires, until it consumes the vital force and then itself. Like the gluttonous tape-worm, it cries: "Give, give, give!" but never enough until its own rapacity devours itself. Samaritan Nervine gives instant relief in all such cases. It produces sleep, quiets the nerves, builds up the nervous system, and restores body and mind to a healthy condition.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Nervous Dyspepsia, Palpitation of the Heart, Asthma, Bronchitis, Scrofula, Syphilis, diseases of the Kidneys and all diseases of the urinary organs. Nervous debility, caused by the indiscretions of youth, permanently cured by the use of this invaluable remedy. To you, young, middle-aged and old men, who are covering your sufferings as with a mantle by silence, look up, you can be saved by timely efforts, and make ornaments to society, and jewels in the crown of your Maker, if you will. Do not keep this a secret longer, until it saps your vitals, and destroys both body and soul. If you are thus afflicted, take Dr. Richmond's Samaritan Nervine. It will restore your shattered nerves, arrest premature decay, impart tone and energy to the whole system

DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC.

A combination of Protoxide of Iron, Peruvian Bark and Phosphorus in a palatable form. The only preparation of iron that will not blacken the teeth, so characteristic of other iron preparations.

GENTLEMEN: I have used Dr. Harter's Iron Tonic in my practice, and in an experience of twenty-five years in medicine, have never found anything to give the results that Dr. Harter's Iron Tonic does. In many cases of Nervous Prostration, Female Diseases, Dyspepsia, and an impoverished condition of the blood, this peerless remedy, has in my hands, made some wonderful cures. Cases that have baffled some of our most eminent physicians, have yielded to this great and incomparable remedy. I prescribe it in preference to any Iron preparation made. In fact, such a compound as Dr. Harter's Iron Tonic is a necessity in my practice.
Dr. Robert Samuels,
St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 26th, 1881. 2104 Wash Avenue.

It gives color to the blood, natural healthful tone to the digestive organs and nervous system, making it applicable to General Debility, Loss of Appetite, Prostration of Vital Powers and Impotence.

Missionary Concert Notes—June, 1882.

SUBJECT: Our South-American Missions.

The name of our well-known South-American Mission, whose field of operations has been the region of the river P ata and its tributaries, was at the last meeting of the General Committee changed to Southeast South-American Mission, and two other missions in South America, viz: the Northeast South America, whose field is the Amazon region and adjacent coast, and the West South America, embracing the west coast of the continent, were put on the list of the missions of our Society. The Central American Mission (at present occupying in Costa Rica) was also added.

[On the subject of South America there is little very recent periodical literature. The following books, among others, may be profitably consulted: The Argentine Republic, by Richard Napp: Buenos Ayres, 1878; South America, by A. Gallenga: London, Chapman & Hall, 1880, $5 60; The Andes and the Amazon, by James Orton: New York, Harper & Bros. 1876 $3; Brazil, the Amazon, and the Coast, by Herbert H. Smith; New York: Charles Scribner's Sons, 1879, $5; Central America, the West Indies, and South America (In Stafford's Compendium of Geography and Travel), edited by H. W. Bates, with an ethnological appendix by A. H. Keane (a number of admirable maps); London: Edward Stanford, 1870, $8 40; Fifteen Thousand Miles on the Amazon and Its Tributaries, C. B. Brun and Wm. Lidstone; London: Edward Stanford, 1878, $8 30; Up the Amazon and Madeira Rivers, through Bolivia and Peru, by Edward D. Matthews; London: Sampson Sons & Co., 1879. $7 20; South Sea Sketches, by Mrs. M. V. Dahlgren; London: Boston: James R. Osgood, 1881. $ 50; America, a History, by Robert Mackenzie; London: T. Nelson & Sons, 1882, $1 50; (also, Franklin Square Library, No. 53, 20c); Between the Amazon and the Andes, by Miss M. G. Mulhall; London: Edward Stanford, 1881 $5; see, also, Appleton's Annual Cyclopedia.]

The population of South America, according to Behen & Wagners (1878) is about 27,000,000. It embraces the empire of Brazil and nine independent republics, besides the three Guianas. The area of Brazil exceeds in some estimates that of the United States by over 500,000 square miles, and the area of the nine republics together a little surpasses that of Brazil. The population of Brazil has been recently stated at 11,160,000. Other estimates place it at nearly 12,000,000. The Guianas contain about 353,000. The remainder of the population is included in the nine republics. These lie contiguous to each other, and if all were embraced in one nation it would have at present a yearly income of over $360,000,000.

The empire of Brazil has continued without great change since it ceased to be a province of Portugal and was made the seat of government by the Portuguese court, in Napoleon's time. In 1822 it became a separate nation. Dom Pedro II., who came of age in 1840, is the second monarch. Abolition of slavery began to operate by gradual process in 1871, the number of slaves being now reckoned at one million. There are twenty-one provinces, largely independent in local administration. The population has increased considerably in ten years, but there is comparatively little foreign immigration. The Argentine Republic far surpasses the other states in this respect. Brazil has immense agricultural resources. An acre of cotton yields here four times as much as in the United States. Wheat yields thirty to seventy fold; maize two hundred to four hundred fold; rice one thousand fold. Yet, on account of the scanty population, but about one fiftieth part of these resources is developed. The settlements are mostly on the coast. The government has used successful effort to open the rivers to steam navigation, and projected canals and railways. Of the latter about 1900 miles were in operation, mostly near Rio Janeiro, in 1880. Commercial enterprises here, as in all South America, are entirely directed by foreigners, English, Germans, Italians. The government and population are firmly attached to the Papal Church, as to outward form, though a spirit of infidelity is prevalent. All religions are protected by law, but bigotry characterizes a large part of the people. Ignorance abounds. In 1876, the public schools had only 140,000 pupils. Missions can do much in promoting education. The Presbyterians, the Southern Methodists, the Southern Baptists, and the South-American Society (English) have missions here.

Turning now to the chain of republics, we find Venezuela (pop. 2 200,000) also low in the scale in point of education. Not one in ten of the people can read. But the liberal party has been for some years substantially ascendant, and after a series of revolutions a state of tranquillity seems to be reached. Religious freedom is established. The Church has been declared independent of Rome. Compulsory education is instituted. Internal improvements are in progress. Trade grows. The soil is exceedingly productive. The people are hospitable; the outlook hopeful.

The confederacy of Colombia (or New Granada) embraces nine states, which are democratic and largely independent in their local government, paying little heed to the enactments of the central government at Bogota. Panama is the chief state. The confederacy has had a tumultuous history, having started in union with Ecuador and Venezuela, and having frequently changed its relations to those states. The government is now liberal, with full religious toleration. The population is about 2,903,000. A large proportion of the Indians are unsubdued. A recent authority says: "Colombia owns, perhaps, the most beautiful, the richest, and most fertile region in the world." Education is here also in the most backward state. The Northern Presbyterians have a small mission at Bogota.

In Ecuador the president is dictator. There is no actual liberty of speech or of the press. Education is at a very low ebb. The teachers of what schools and colleges exist are unpaid. Anarchy and despotism characterize the political institutions. Yet the country is productive. In 1879 the reports of the province of Guayas alone (pop. 180,000) amounted to $7,100,000.

Peru has been from the first sadly misgoverned, and the people have sought wealth in the export of products which have demanded little skilled labor. The mines still yield $5,000,000 annually. The stores of guano seemed for a time inexhaustible; then a large source of revenue was found in the nitrate of soda, of certain sections, about which the war with Chili has been waged, nearly ruining Peru, and crippling Bolivia. The extent of Peru is four times that of Chili, her territory reaching beyond the Andes. Under two enlightened presidents, who were murdered, the two great trans-Andean railroads were partially constructed. One, the Oraga road, has reached a height of 15,641 feet, and is destined to descend to a main tributary of the Amazon. The other will connect with La Paz, the chief city of Bolivia. These and certain other vast schemes of intercommunication in South America will, we may hope, some day be completed and lead to great strides of commercial progress. In Peru, out of a population of 2,500,000, fifty-seven per cent are Indians, twenty-three per cent are of mixed origin, the remainder of separate foreign nationalities. There are said to be 17,000 Italians in Lima.

Chili shows a different state of population. With something over 2,000,000 inhabitants, the number of pure Indians is small—perhaps 50,000. The white element predominates also over the mixed. The Spaniards who originally came here settled down to agricultural labor. With labor the race has developed energy. Since a suitable constitution was secured for the government there has been peaceful and healthy development. The northern portion of the country is arid, like Peru, but the central portion produces cereals for considerable export. There is an extended system of railroads. During the last thirty years the population has quadrupled, and the resources increased in greater proportion. Foreign immigration continues, but is not very large. There are French, Spaniards, and Italians, 4000 English, and perhaps 6000 Germans. The latter two nationalities have most of the commercial and all the banking business. The Germans settle largely in the southern province of Langahuie. Beyond that province is the chain of islands along the coast of Patagonia, the whole of which country, east and west coasts, is claimed by Chili against the Argentine Republic. Religious liberty is enjoyed in Chili as far as the laws are concerned and $250,000 is expended on schools, out of $3,500 000 revenue. The Northern Presbyterian and the South American Missionary Society, besides ourselves, are at work in this country.

II. With these notes in general survey of several countries in South America we connect our West and Northeast Coast Missions, both of which have been originated within a few years by Rev. Wm. Taylor and his colaborers. The missionaries sent out by Mr. Taylor are male and female, engaged in preaching and teaching. They number at present about forty-five. Those who began work in Peru were well received, but the state of war compelled a removal from this country as well as from Bolivia. Most of this number retired to Chili, where they are now at work. There are seven ordained ministers in Chili, with stations at Copiapo, Coquinbo, Valparaiso, Santiago, and Concepcion. There is a college at Santiago, with male and female department and twelve professors; a smaller institution at Concepcion In all the stations in these two missions the work of teaching is prosecuted by the missionary and his associates. In the state of Panama are three ministers and in Brazil one, at Para. Here also is a seminary, and there is one likewise at Pernambuco, with several teachers. All these missionaries seek their support where they labor—mostly among the foreign population. The aim of the work is a noble one. It is greatly needed in those countries. With the circumstances of the people in remembrance, let earnest prayer be offered to God for his blessing upon these pious missionaries who have gone forth, regardless of the hardships they may encounter, to carry knowledge and the gospel to these Southern lands which are so truly "neighbors unto us," our own South America.

III. The Southeast South American Mission, which dates from 1836, being our second foreign mission, has its seat in the great region of the Plate. This river, with its tributaries, the Uraguay, Parana, Paraguay, and others, drains half the continent. The settled operations of the mission are within the Argentine Republic, from Buenos Ayres and Rosario as centers, and in Uruguay, from Montevideo; but itinerant work has been done in certain provinces of Brazil and in Paraguay, while entrance into Bolivia is looked for.

The Argentine Republic is, in important respects, the foremost of all the South American states. It embraces over 500,000 square miles. The population is 1 887,000. The foreign immigration is very large, and has been growing. In 1878, it reached 50,000 The foreigners settle in the province of Buenos Ayres and in separate colonies up the Parana river in the province of Santa Fe (Rosario the chief city); also north and west of this region. There are over thirty of these colonies, of various nationalities. This is the temperate zone of South America, and the climate is pronounced exceedingly favorable for European immigrants, quite superior to that of Brazil or the northern republics. "The brightest and most enjoyable climate I have ever become acquainted with," is the recent testimony of a traveler. The country has already considerable exports, and immense undeveloped resources. The ravages of the Gauchos and the Indians who, twenty years ago, possessed half the land, have been to a great extent repressed, and railroads are pushed into the interior. From Rosario an important line reaches to Cordova and thence to Tucuman, destined for Bolivia. A branch from this line is already progressing, designed to reach Mendoza on the west and thence to cross the Andes to Santiago and Valparaiso. This projected road stands in the relation of our great Pacific Railroads. There are six lines in the province of Buenos Ayres. Over 9000 miles of telegraph are in operation.

In the matter of education the Argentine Republic is greatly in advance of Brazil, and considerably so of Chili. In 1874, the number of pupils was one to 15 66 of the population. Three or four years past have witnessed vigorous progress. The Ministry of Public Instruction expended $865,656 in 1880. There is a system of universities, of secondary institutions (fourteen colleges in the fourteen provinces), and primary schools. Entire freedom of religion exists, though the Roman Catholic is supported (at a very moderate appropriation) by the State. Like freedom exists in Uruguay, and our missionaries have found access in Paraguay. In Bolivia, bigotry prevails, and it is difficult to circulate the Scriptures.

IV. What has been stated shows how important is the field occupied by our Southeast South American Mission. It began in answer to an appeal from the British residents in Buenos Ayres. On the part of the foreign element the mission is self-supporting. The Spanish work was opened in 1867 by Rev. J. F. Thompson, one of our converts, who is stationed at Buenos Ayres. The superintendent, Rev. T. B. Wood, resides at Montevideo, in Uruguay, which city, though now inferior to Buenos Ayres in population, has probably a great future before it as a seaport. The Women's Foreign Missionary Society have four missionaries at Rosario, and one at Montevideo. The history of our mission can be consulted in Dr. Reed's History of the Mission, vol. i., and in the Manual for July, 1381, which is in the hands of every pastor. The pastor has also the Annual Reports of 1880 and 1881, and we urge special attention to these reports. They are full and clear on the subject of this mission. A particularly interesting feature is the tour of Messrs. Milne and Correa up the Paraguay river to Cuyaha, in the Brazilian province of Matto Grosso, over 2000 miles from Montevideo. See "South America," in the Manual for April, 1882. We commend this mission to the earnest prayers of the Church. Let the individual missionaries of both the parent and the Women's societies be remembered with sympathy, and divine grace and providential interposition be sought for a speedy enlargement of the work.

The subject for the next Concert of Prayer will be The North India Mission.

Class-Meeting Catechism.

At the Lancaster District Class-leaders' Convention, March 13th and 14th, the Question Drawer brought out the following:

1 Should the pastor have a class of which he is the responsible leader?

Ans.—No; though the pastor should often lead class.

2 Is it best to put a collector in each class to look after the quarterage?

Ans.—Yes; if the leader desires, or is not a good collector himself.

3. Is it essential to successful class organization that every leader have a class-book, and call the list at each class-meeting?

Ans.—Yes; for many reasons.

4 What is the best method of leading class, and is it proper for a leader to visit members on the Sabbath day to secure attendance?

Ans.—Such visits are proper, and the best method is to begin promptly, pray short, sing short, vary the exercises; use the voluntary plan usually; reprove, rebuke, exhort, encourage, and have faith for a blessing every time.

5. Can a child be educated to be religious?

Ans.—No; education can not bring a child from nature to grace; but when saved, then he may be educated in the things of God.

6. Should children be assigned to separate classes, or to classes in which there are adults?

Ans.—The regular Church classes should be like our own families, made up of old and young, but in addition there should be special classes for children.

7. How shall we organize children's classes so as to adapt the instruction to the different ages?

Ans.—The instruction adapted to the youngest is always helpful to the older, though it is sometimes well to put those from six to ten and from ten to fifteen into different classes.

8. What should be the maximum number in a Church class?

Ans.—Twenty.

9. Should the leader inquire of his members wheather they observe family prayer?

Ans.—He is expected to know, and should expect to ascertain.

10. Can a person be a good Christian and not attend class?

Ans.—Yes, but not a good Methodist Christian.

11. Is it right to practice rivalry between classes?

Ans.—Yes; Christian emulation is always commendable. "To provoke unto love and good works" is an apostolical injunction.

12 What are the essential characteristics of a model class-leader?

Ans.—Piety, common sense, and consecration to the work.

13. How can we reach the difficulties in the reduction of our classes to twenty in number?

Ans.—Immediately, if you can find the leaders, by a reconstruction of all the classes; gradually, by organizing new classes as rapidly as new leaders are forthcoming.

14 Can a leader conscientiously recommend a probationer for full membership who refuses to pray in public?

Ans.—Yes, if he is acceptable in other respects.

15. What is the duty of a pastor in the following case?—He has a class of thirty members, and but one of the class will accept the leadership, and, though a man of financial ability, is not in sympathy with our literature, or the benevolences of the Church?

Ans.—Have no leader, unless the pastor can lead.

16. What can the shepherd (the leader) do but drive when the sheep fail to obey command?

Ans.—The leader who thinks he he has a right to command is mistaken. If he can not entice and attract, he has no right to attempt to drive.

17. Is it right for a brother to accept the leadership when he feels it not his duty to do so?

Ans.—He should regard the voice of the pastor and the Church, if the work is laid upon him, as the voice of duty, unless there are providential hindrances to his accepting the class.

18. What is the best method for the pastor to instruct the class-leaders, as is made his duty by the Discipline?

Ans.—To meet them once a month together, to point out defects in their methods, suggest improvements, recommend books that bear on their work, and explain to them their duties as prescribed by the Discipline.

19. What is the difference between heart purity and the gift of power?

Ans.—Heart purity is the baptism of the Holy Ghost in the measure that removes inbred sin from the soul, and fills it with the fullness of God, and the gift of power is that baptism of the Holy Ghost that makes us effective workers in the salvation of souls. Moody calls it the baptism for work. Carvosso said, "It is love for souls."

"That There may be Equality." Paul.

The Christian Neighbor, of Columbia, S. C., tired of appeals for the heathen and for the "Brother in Black," makes one for the "Sisters in White." This reminds us of the fish which jumped from the frying-pan into the fire. Does our good brother forget that many thousands of "Sisters in Black" are in equal poverty and the joint heirs of the eternal kingdom?—Southwestern Christian Advocate.

No, dear brother; we are not conscious of forgetting any color of either sex. Possibly we did not forget the poverty and heirship of the "Sisters in Black" any more than the author of "Brother in Black" forgot the "Brothers in White, as he took one sex of one color, it seemed to us somewhat of an "equality" to speak a word on behalf of the other sex of the other color. Assayed only to set things somewhat level, that the partial admirers of the 'Brothers in Black" who have "fish and "flesh" to cook might use the frying pan or the fire according to fancy or taste.—Christian Neighbor.

An Eccentric Whim.

An eccentric old gentlemen in Lincolnshire, England, is so firmly convinced of the approaching end of the world that he has prepared a great balloon, by means of which he hopes (although he is now 83 years old) to behold "the end of all things here below." The balloon is provisioned for three years, the stores including such creature comforts as brandy, soda water and claret. He is of the opinion that among the debris of the world will be several large fragments, on one of which he will be able to effect a descent at an opportune moment and find a refuge for his few remaining years. The old gentlemen proposes to take with him a game keeper, who has been long in his service, and for whom he has great regard, and, having made these arrangements, is perfectly calm, and, indeed, cheerful. He expects, he declares, to get on better without the world than with it.

The True Wife

Oftentimes I have seen a tall ship glide by against the tide as if drawn by some invisible bowline, with a hundred strong arms pulling it. Her sails unfilled, her streamers drooping, she had neither side wheel nor stern wheel; still she moved on stately, in serene triumph as if with her own life. But I knew that on the side of the ship, hidden beneath the great hulk that swam so majestically, there was a little toilsome steaming with a heart of fire and arms of iron, that was tugging it bravely on; and I knew that if the little steam-tug untwined her arm and left the ship, it would wallow and roll about, and drift hither and thither, and go off with the refluent tide, no man knows whither. And so I have known more than one genius, high-decked, full-freighted, idle sailed, gay-pennoned, but that for the bare, toiling arms, and brave, warm-beating heart of the faithful little wife that nestles close to him, so that no wind or wave could part them, he would have gone down with the stream and have been heard of no more.—Olliver Wendell Holmes.

The practice of intrusting to a beadle or some other official the duty of awakening sleeping members of a congregation seems to have prevailed in America more than two centuries ago. In 1646, the Rev. Samuel Whiling was minister of Lynn, Mass One Obadiah Turner kept a journal at that time, from which we give the following amusing extract: "1646 June the 3d. Allen Brydges hath bin chose to wake the sleepers in meeting, and being much proud of his place, must need have a fox taile fixed to the end of a long staff, wherewith he may brush the faces of them that will have naps in time of discourse; likewise a sharp thorne, wherewith he may prick such as be moste sounde."—Chambers' Journal.

It was Herbert Spencer who made the following definiton of evolution: "Evolution is a change from an indefinite, incoherent homogeneity to a definite, coherent heterogeneity, through continuous differentiations and integrations." It was the mathematician Kirkman who translated the definition into plain English: Evolution is a change from a nohowish, untalkaboutable, all-alikeness, to a somehowish and in general-talkaboutable at-all-alikeness, by continuous something-elseifications and sticktogetherations."

Spurgeon gives a bit of wholesome advice as to the public prayers of the church, when he says: "It is my solemn conviction that the prayer is one of the most weighty, useful and honorable parts of the service, and that it ought to be more considered than the sermon. There must be no putting up anybodies or nobodies to pray, and then the selection of the abler man to preach. Appoint the ablest man to pray, and let the sermon be slurred rather than the approach to heaven."

That glass cost too much. You say you only paid a trifle for it. Young man! that paltry sum is not a millionth part of what it will cost you if you do not take care. You will have to pay for it in health, cheerfulness, character, friends, peace of mind, and at last, self. Is that glass worth all this? You are safe enough? Nonsense! A man might as well talk of safety when his boat is beginning to go around in the outer circle of a whirlpool, as to say he is safe enough when he is indulging this habit.

To practice righteousness and resist sin requires the indwelling strength of God. "Renew a right spirit within me," prayed the Psalmist. The original word signifies the firm, constant spirit that has no waverings. A steady hand writes a clear, strong line; the shaking, tremulous hand makes the crooked scrawl. Faith is likened to an anchor, because it has a holding power; and that comes from the hold which God has upon the man who exercises it.—T. L. Cuyler.

To exercise spiritual power is to develop and strengthen it. To disuse it is to repress and extinguish it Your spiritual faculties being uneducated, you are disqualified from apprehending truth by means of powers you have atrophied by disuse.—Elizabeth Stuart Phelps.

Things one would rather have left unsaid.—Vicar (who, until last Sunday, has always preached himself): 'Well, and did you like my young curate's sermon?" Mrs. Robinson: "Oh, quite the best we have heard for years! We all said so!"—Punch.

The old, familiar text, "Pay me that thou owest," is not altogether inappropriate at this time. Brethren who owe this office and will not pay their honest debts should preach it to themselves occasionally.

We are sending out statements of the accounts of pastors with this office, and we ask the brethren to give them prompt attention. Make partial payment now, send something more a few weeks later; do not put off settlement until the meeting of the annual conferences if it can be avoided.

Religious Excitement.

Perhaps there are times when Paul's admonitory counsel to the Church at Corinth: "Let all things be done decently and in order," would be an appropriate theme for the Christian minister, but we think that, for the present, a much more appropriate theme would be suggested by the words of the prophet: "Cry out and shout, thou inhabitant of Zion." We have no special dread from what some people call unwarranted religious excitement and outward demonstration. It is the opposite extreme that we fear. The great danger of the Church is from those who have the form of godliness, but are destitute of the power. We read some statements in revival notices that look too much like an apology for getting people excited enough to seek the Savior. After reporting a large number of conversions, it is added: "There has been nothing of what is generally called excitement," etc. To us, it seems not a little strange that in the conversion of five or fifty souls to God there should be no excitement. Certainly those communities must have a very mild type of sinners. Perhaps we live too much in the past, but we have this conviction, if a sinner of the mildest type possible sees the exceeding sinfulness of sin he will be made to cry out: "O, wretched man that I am!" Men may look upon themselves as gentlemen, but God will not convert them as gentlemen. God converts gentlemen after earnest repentance just as he converts other sinners. The religion of Jesus Christ is intellectual, but then it is not all intellect. It has a soul, a heart, and it is just as honorable for the heart to feel as for the head to think. The evangelical prophet calls upon the people to "cry out and shout" and then gives the reason for shouting. "Great is the holy one of Israel in the midst of thee." There was great excitement at Pentecost when the one hundred and twenty were filled with the Holy Ghost, and spake with other tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance. This brought a large multitude together who charged the apostles with being drunk. But God showed His approval in the conversion of three thousand souls, and these souls were so converted that Luke, the historian of those times, felt justified in saying that: "they continued steadfast in the Apostles doctrine and fellowship and in breaking bread and in prayer." Here God gave the tongues of fire and the baptism of power, and his approval of the most extraordinary religious excitements in all the ages. We know that there are multitudes who look upon the least manifestation of religious excitement as the evidence of weakness or ignorance, and that it does indicate as exalted a state of piety as a feeling of deep solemnity and awe. It is natural for all intelligent creatures to feel the dread of God's majesty to be checked by a thought of His greatness and power. Even the child stands and trembles in the presence of an offended and outraged father, but this child in the presence of a forgiving and smiling father will sing and dance for joy. We have seen men visited with an awful sense of God's terrors and have heard them pray under these circumstances; but they did not continue steadfast. Our churches need now what so many in them seem to be afraid of, a real, genuine religious excitement; only that will help the heart to feel and the head to think. Once in a while we come across a person who believes that order is heaven's first and only law, who makes great use of that old and almost stale argument in favor of quietness in religion, and he very modestly reminds us "that it is not the thunder that skins the cat, but the lightning." All of which we suppose is true, but this is not all the truth. It is true that the kind of lightning which shivers the oak is always attended with thunder. So we believe a godliness with the presence and power of the Holy Ghost will be attended with marked and outward demonstrations of some kind, not always alike but greatly differing with persons; and while we would have all things done decently and in order, we must avoid all final formality. It takes power to move men, and where there is the presence of the Holy Ghost there will be the manifestation of spiritual power and more or less emotion.

May God give to all of our churches a resistless tide of emotion to flood men towards an impulsive repentance and what good old John Calvin called a resistless translation from the power of Satan to the grace and kingdom of God.

The Salvation Army.

In England the "Salvation Army" has, for a series of years, been attracting a growing attention [illegible] has doubt[illegible] good by direct [illegible] among the masses. [illegible] the "Army" has at[illegible] it could de[illegible] have been made for and against it. It has been assailed and defended both by the clergy and the press. It has been a common occurrence for certain lewd persons to join the "Army," that they might the better obtain a support or carry on some scheme of iniquity.

On the one hand, it is claimed that the mode of procedure by the "Army" leads to rioting and "gross profanity," in fact, that it is productive of nothing but scandals.

On the other hand, it is stated that the Salvationists are a law abiding people, who are endeavoring to rescue from vice and crime the dregs of the population, who have been neglected by the great religious organizations of the country, and that they have had eminent success in promoting order and decorum, in making the drunkard sober, the rowdy peaceful, and the brutal humane.

We have watched the movements of the "Salvation Army," on this side of the Atlantic, with more than ordinary interest, and have rejoiced in all their successes.

But recently we observed in one of our Philadelphia secular papers, some of their notices, as follows: "Salvation market, Fifth street and Germantown avenue. The Salvation Army will hold a Real Hallelujah Spree to-morrow, led by Shouting Annie, from Baltimore, Captain Pilgrim Charlie, the salvation wonder, Captain Joe, the hallelujah carpenter, and Glory Milt, the hallelujah drummer. Knee drill at 7 A. M. sharp, and at 3 P. M., and 8 P. M, the Blood and Fire Brigade. Sharp shooting by the soldiers." We do not propose to become fastidious. Men who are really "casting out devils" can, with us, use numberless innovations; only give us clear proof that the "devils are cast out," and we shall not hinder, either by authority or argument as persuasion, those who are "casting out devils." We have a strong attachment to the Church, but no love for bigots or bigotry. We sincerely doubt the propriety of using slang or irreverent expressions in connection with the service and worship of God. We cannot see how any person can be benefited by them.

The men who thus glibly talk of a "real hallelujah spree," led by "Shouting Annie," are not the men to promote good order and decorum; they will never make the drunkard sober, the rowdy peaceful, and the brutal humane. We wish all men success in the rank of "casting out devils;" but we cannot endorse all the tactics of the so-called "Salvation Army."

The Governor's Message.

The message of Governor McEnery to the Legislature of Louisiana narrates the financial embarrassments of the State and its commercial metropolis, which are now most depressing. He says the constitution of 1879 has disappointed the hopes of its framers. It contains many provisions not applicable to our system of laws or our condition. The appointing power of the Executive is too great, and the power of suspending officials too complicated. The judiciary system causes much complaint. The limit of taxation is unfortunate, and it confuses the financial system. He says:

The constitution declares gambling to be a vice, yet it encourages that vice in its worst form, not only inciting to breaches of faith and embezzlement in the effort to get rich in the turn of a wheel, but demoralizing society, corrupting politics, and impeding legislation.

The constitution was intended to expedite judicial inquiries, and to cheapen litigation, but it has crowded the dockets of courts and increased the costs to such an extent that many are afraid to venture within the halls of justice. The instrument is difficult to interpret and impracticable in its execution.

The Governor speaks plainly on the needs of the State, and points out some of the evils to be remedied. There is nothing in the present condition of the affairs of the State to elicit admiration. It is the legitimate outcome of fraudulent elections, bulldozing, repudiation, and the poor statesmanship of the authors and supporters of the new constitution movement. When free ballots shall be honestly counted, independent convictions and political action be tolerated, the way will be much clearer than at present for the dawn of better days for Louisiana. Men do not gather figs from thistles; and reforms do not emanate from sloughs of corruption.

We send out to the brethren, this week, blank petitions praying for a Sunday law and temperance legislation. Let rousing mass-meetings be held in every charge during the next ten days; and let the petitions be returned to this office in as short a time thereafter as possible, filled with thousands of names. Let everybody who values a sober, Christian civilization sign these petitions, and assist in their circulation.

Temperance and a Sunday Law.

The resolutions of the last session of the Louisiana Conference, respecting temperance legislation on a Sunday law, gave no uncertain sound. The decidedly earnest expressed convictions of the conference call for determined Christian aggressiveness in rooting out the gigantic and terrible evils of intemperance and Sabbath desecration from the Church and State. In this holy combat we are to exert all the forces of church discipline, speech, example and influence. The Legislature is now in session at Baton Rouge, and should be so very strongly urged by all the moral and Christian masses of our citizens as to compel our Legislature to enact a Sunday Law and provide for a popular vote upon the expulsion of the liquor traffic. Then and not till then will we have a Sabbath in keeping with our Christian civilization. The following resolutions of the Louisiana Conference should inspire new zeal and energy in the masses, to work faithfully for temperance and the reclamation of the Sabbath, while our brethren should bestir themselves valiantly and lead the way.

Read them very carefully, and discern what the Master, your conscience and your neighbors' interest would have you do:

The grand old Methodist Episcopal Church, true to her honest convictions and the Word of God, has ever been on the front ranks of that mighty Temperance army that is incessantly striking effective blows for the ultimate overthrow of the liquor traffic and the eradication of its baneful, blasting and withering influences. But notwithstanding the strenuous efforts thus far put forth for its overthrow, intemperance still exists to such an alarming extent as to threaten the best interests and security of our moral, social and political institutions. Laws regulating the sale of liquor have all proven affective in curbing the insidious and dangerous intrusions of the rum traffic, and we are satisfied that nothing less than entire and absolute prohibition will remedy the evil and suppress the traffic. Therefore be it.

Resolved, 1. That we faithfully carry out the provisions of our Discipline in paragraphs 23, 32, 36 and 226, as they bear upon the subject of Temperance, and that none be allowed to remain among us who will continue to disregard our disciplinary prohibition.

Resolved 2. That we preach or lecture upon the subject of Temperance at least once a quarter in each of our charges, and that while we deem it our duty to influence all in favor of this holy cause, still, conceiving it of paramount importance to press this matter upon the rising generation, we will not fail to devise various effective methods to interest the children of our Sunday Schools and secure their signatures to the total abstinence pledge and their hearts and hands devoted to the cause.

Resolved 3. That the absolute prohibition of the traffic in intoxicating liquors as a beverage is the imperative duty of the hour, and we recommend all opponents of the liquor traffic to unite in a solemn compact to secure such a result.

Resolved, 4. That we request the Legislature of the State of Louisiana, at its session next May, to submit a constitutional amendment prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage to a decision of a popular vote, that the voters of the State, irrespective of party, may have an opportunity to express their opinion on this important question at the ballot box.

Resolved, 5. That each Church and Temprance organization be requested to hold public meetings the first week in April to agitate in favor of such an amendment.

Resolved, 6. That the Presiding Elders and two additional members be constituted a committee to prepare and present to the Legislature, a Concurrent Resolution submitting to the people a Prohibitory Constitutional Amendment; and shall prepare and aid in circulating petitions for the passage thereof, working through our pastors and their local committees, and to do such other work as their judgment may direct.

Resolved, 7. That we recommend to the committee the following form of petition:

PETITION.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana:

"The undersigned, adult residents of the Parish of——, respectfully and earnestly pray your honorable body to adopt, and submit for ratification to the voters of the State, as duly and legally provided, an amendment to the State Constitution, to forever prohibit the manufacture and sale as a beverage of all intoxicating liquors within the jurisdiction of this State."

Resolved, 8. That we exert ourselves to the fullest extent of our influence to bring this movement to a successful issue.

Also the following:

WHEREAS, The observance of the Holy Sabbath is of the utmost importance to the progress and success of all Christian efforts and enterprises, and is the institution of God for the advancement of Christ's Kingdom; and

WHEREAS, The Statutes of Louisiana make no provisions for its observance, be it

Resolved, By the Louisiana Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, that each member of this body will circulate among his people a petition memorializing the Legislature to enact such laws as will guarantee its observerance.

Resolved, That the Temperance Committee appointed to memorialize the legislature, be instructed to also use its influence in behalf of this Conference to secure proper Sabbath legislation.

These resolutions are clear and forcible. Now let all concerned go to work with commendable Christian earnestness. Let every honorable effort be put forth and let none be relaxed; and success will and must come.

The one great need of the Church is an increase of earnest workers. She needs it more than preaching. She needs to be more pious, and would be if she did more to win souls to Jesus. She could preach with more practical results if she reached her hands deeper into the hoodlum element of society. She would find there some gems the Master has purchased with his blood. If God's people would rise to the dignity of personal labor, the world would witness strides in spiritual growth. In Christ's life there was any thing but supineness or inertness. With him there was nothing of that formalism that apes to do things just so. He looked for vitality, life, force, and cared but little for forms. The Church of the Lord Jesus is no place for gay triflers, but for earnest, loving workers. Work is before reward; the daily cross before the golden crown. Every man to his work. One may plow, another plant, another water, another clean, another prune the vines, another gather the grapes, and still another build the fences or keep the gates. Each man is sure of his pay.

There is a member of the Louisiana Conference who when his business calls him to New Orleans has frequently enjoyed the hospitality of a brother clergyman living in the city. Not long since this city clergyman had occasion to call on his brother living in the country. It was natural that he should expect at least some show of hospitality, and he was kindly received and comfortably provided for; but no one can tell his surprise nor express his indignation when he was called on by his country brother to pay the usual price for his entertainment. He and his good wife left that man's home with some strange thoughts on "hospitality."

The Louisiana Republican says the Committee on Public Safety have taken hold of the matter of alleged frauds in the election of a member of the Legislature, from the 13th and 14 wards, which were intended to defeat I. W. Falls, the Republican candidate. Judging from the positive assertions made by Judge Falls, and others, the committee may very properly assert its wholesome powers in that direction. The men who are indifferent to impure elections cannot be honest citizens or faithful Christians.

Cardinal Newman's portrait will be the frontispiece of the June Century. An authentic life of the Cardinal, by Mr. Kegan Paul, the London publisher, will accompany it. In writing this life Mr. Kegan has had the assistance of some of the Cardinal's most intimate friends and associates, and his paper will probably be the best account of the Cardinal that will appear during his life. It includes a brief essay by the Cardinal himself, never before published, on the Inspiration of the Bible.

—The late Horace Maynard's last appearance in public was last Sunday evening, when he gave an address at the Welch Congregational Church in Mechanicsville, Tenn., on the duties of parents to children. Mr. Maynard took great interest in educational matters, and was a frequent visitor to the schoolrooms in Knoxville.—N. Y. Adv.

—During his visit upon the Mississippi Sound, our assistant was pleased to get acquainted with Rev. T. S. West, D.D., whom he found to be a whole-souled, progressive Methodist preacher. Dr. West is presiding elder of the Sea Shore District of the Mississippi Conference, M. E. Church, South.

—We congratulate our friends at La Teche upon the selection and appointment of Miss Julia Isabelle, by the Woman's Home Missionary Society, as a missionary to labor among them. Miss Isabelle is a young lady of good education, of rare social and Christian qualifications, and will no doubt accomplish a good work at LaTeche. As a teacher and missionary she has had very marked success in other fields of labor. May God abundantly bless this Christian lady as she goes from house to house, "not to be ministered unto but to minister." We ask for her a cordial welcome and earnest Christian co-operation.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

J. W. Richardson, Centreville: "The church is increasing in her congregations, and I hope will do better. The Sunday-school is doing well."

Rev. W. Brooks at Cypremort is being blessed wonderfully in the spiritual growth of his church. He reports 129 conversions, as the results of a recent revival, and a general awakening all through his work. This is verily soul reviving news. The Lord save many more.

Rev. J. W. Richardson, of Centreville was in a house on Todd's place, during the late storm, and it was blown to pieces, but neither himself nor any of the family were hurt. Two were killed on the place. One man had his neck broken by a piece of timber, and a boy had his skull crushed. High water caused many to seek refuge.

Joe Brown, A. Dimby, P. Richards, E. Alexander, G. Guill, G. Patrick, T. Fords, write us from Jeannerette: Tuesday, March 28, Rev. Jonathan Haskel preached one of the most impressive sermons in the St. Paul Methodist Episcopal Church at Jeannerette we ever had the pleasure of listening to. At the close of the sermon Bro. Haskel said: "If there are any persons here who desire to flee from the wrath to come, and want the prayers of God's people let them come forward to the altar," and a large number came. At the close of the meeting it was announced by our pastor Rev. Edward Fields that the meeting would be continued. For over two weeks Bro. Fields has pressed the battle, and thus far the Lord has converted sixteen and reclaimed ten. We want to express our gratitude to the Louisiana Conference for sending us one of its best men to be our pastor. Bro. Fields is much respected both by white and black, and we feel that he is the right man in the right place. At our last communion service there were 55 at St. Paul and 60 at St. Peter who joined in these solemn services. Our Sunday-schools are large and prospering."

MISSISSIPPI

Rev. B. F. Penny, at Yazoo City, wrote us the following very interesting report, under date of April 13, and it has been unavoidably delayed: "Having just closed our first quarter, I thought that I would write that your many readers might know that we are still moving along with the great body of Methodists. We hope to see the time come when there will be a general outpouring of God's spirit among men. I am glad to say that the good people of this city and church received me with warm hearts and open hands. We have a progressive people here. For some time we have been troubled on account of the high water. A portion of our city is still under water. This, of course, has hindered us somewhat in our temporal work. But we have been trying to improve the spiritual condition of the Church and look after the souls of men. Quite a number have been converted. We are glad to say that in this dark and sinful day, while so much iniquity abounds, as many as forty came forward and united with the church. The church is filled to overflowing. We are moving along quietly and nicely. Elder Barney was with us April 8 and 9, and we had a good time. Reports show marked improvement. We take pleasure in saying that Rev. Washington Reese' class is the banner class. This class reports money raised for the support of the ministry, $27 80. Elder Barney preached on Sunday to a large congregation and was listened to with attention. The Sunday-school is in a good condition. One class of young people and children has been organized this quarter numbering thirty-one. Pray for us that the good work may continue."

TENNESSEE.

A. Burdett, Friendship: "At Price Chapel we had five converts. A local preacher from A. M. E. Church has joined us. Rev. Wm. Deregans from Bell circuit, was with us, and preached a good sermon. I lectured at Alamo, and collected $10 25.

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

The Church at Bonham.

The fact is we have no church here at all, but it is the aim of W. L. Molloy, as well as myself, to build one here this year. To do this, Bro. Molloy has put me fully in charge of our work at Bonham. I landed here for the first time March 22, 1882, and am now boarding at the residence of Mr. Bob. Green. So far I am very much pleased with Bonham. It is quite a large town, situated on the T. & P. R R., and shows a promising view for a great work to be done here in future days, that is, in favor of the old M. E. Church. I am very happy to say, though, as yet my stay is very short as a new comer, that I have found more warmth for our Church than I anticipated. On conversing with a citizen of this town this morning in reference to our intention to build he said, "I have no doubt in case you build that you will get a great many joiners." Just here let me say to members and friends, let us build, and build now. Yes, let that committee which was appointed to investigate this matter in the last Annual Conference (Bishop Warren, J. C. Hartzell and W. L. Molloy) come to a speedy conclusion, and God grant that that conclusion will be to build, and to build now. It may be asked what will the people at Bonham donate towards the proposed building. To this I would say that we may not expect anything, and yet it is possible and probable that we would get a great deal donated. We have a lot already; why not build at once? This town is too extensive and too promising a place for us not to have our church planted here. Let us open our eyes to this point, and open them now, and thus bring in the vast number of colored people here to the memorial of Bishop Jane's flight from here about twenty years ago. The question now is, shall we build at Bonham? if so, when? I tell you, brethren, say now, for now is the time. Again, the Church Extension Society has never, so far as I know, used her money at a more appropriate place than she would in case she used it here, and used it now. What says the Church Extension Society? Are you ready to help us build! If so, I am here advocating the cause and at the same time awaiting your promise.

Yours, JAS. E. SHACKEEFORD.

The Childrens' Association.

MR. EDITOR—The Childrens' Christian Association had a grand parade at this place, with lanterns, which made a beautiful display. After parading the main streets, the procession moved on to the St. John M. E Church. The exercises were opened by the reading of scripture by Rev. J. W. Summerbill, singing by the Association and prayer by Rev. H. S. Welch. After an address by the pastor, a collection of $180 was taken up by two little girls, Lizzie Barns and Edney Tucker. An address by the Rev. H. S. Welch followed, then Mrs. L. C. Summerbill, Secretary of the Association read her report, from which the following extracts are made:

The Childrens' Christian Association of the M. E. Church was organized in Lawrenceburg, March 20, 1881, for the benefit of the children, that they might receive more care and attention, to become better men and women. It has proven successful from the beginning, although contributions are small. Each member is taxed five cents per month, and the apportionment is fifty cents per week to the sick. We are doing all we can for the Lord. Total active members for the past year was 61, honorary 10, in all 71; number on sick list 5, and at close of the year none; number died 2; discontinued 5. Expenses for sick, $4 50; other expenses $3 70. Papers and tracts were taken. On hand $5 55; paid into the treasury from all sources, $8 40; paid out, $9 95; due $12 30.

After the Secretary finished reading her report our visiting friends were revived up by hearing the beautiful speaking and singing from the children.

Yours truly, SUBSCRIBER.

A Sad Event.

DEAR EDITOR—Last night about 9 o'clock the people of this place were aroused by hearing the city bell and the cry of fire, and found that the county jail was burning. There were three colored prisoners in the jail, and before assistance could be rendered the flames had made such headway that all three perished with the structure. Those present did all they could to rescue the poor prisoners from the burning building, but all in vain. There are different opinions as to how the fire originated, but it is generally believed that the prisoners set fire to the building themselves. One was a boy 12 years old, the others were men.

From Huntsville District.

MR. EDITOR—After a long silence I desire to report in part the condition of the Huntsville District Texas Conference. My first round after Conference the weather was so unpleasant and the roads so bad that we could do but little. On my second round we are having a good time. Thus far fourteen have been converted, and over seventy-five have been received on probation. Money is scarce and times are hard, but we are working, pushing and praying. We are erecting four new churches on the district, have secured the deeds for the land upon which to erect them. We are only anxious to do more for the Master. W. B PULLAM.

There are eighteen different missionary societies at work. The American Presbyterians have 821 baptized adult converts; the American Board 669; the American M. E. Church 517; the Reformed Church in America 403. The American Board has ten wholly self-sustaining churches, there being no such in any other mission except one in the American Presbyterian. Of churches partially self-supporting, our mission has the largest number, viz., sixteen; the American Presbyterian, fourteen.

The American Bible Society, the National Bible Society of Scotland, and the British Foreign Bible Society together sold in 1881, 115,000 copies of Bibles, New Testaments, and portions of Scripture embracing 18,000,000 pages. 2,500,000 pages at least of other books and tracts have been distributed, omitting the report of the southern section of the American Tract Society's operations.

THE ATLANTIC DISTRICT, Des Moines Conference, (Rev. H. T Smith, P. E) is doing grand work for the missionary cause under its efficient system of meetings. This is the third year on the district since the "campaign movement" was inaugurated. In 1879, the district reported $579 10. In 1880, the first year of the mass meetings, there was an advance to $878 51; in 1811, to $1499 43; and the present year, to $2000 is the mark set. Let all districts take example.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

SECOND QUARTER—LESSON viii. May 21, 1882. SEEING AND CONFESSING THE CHRIST—MARK viii. 22-23.

Apparently seeking retirement that he might more fully instruct his disciples and escape the persecution of the Pharisees, Jesus had taken ship, for the north end of the lake. On the way he warned his disciples of the dangerous tendency of the Pharisaic doctrine. Having landed, the miracle of this lesson was performed and he continued his journey northward, conversing on the way. Thus he improved the moments as they sped. Of the four blind men restored by Jesus, all but one came to him. Jesus went to the man born blind. He had compassion on him, but he would not raise any tumult or arouse the jealousy of the authorities. First Jesus led the man out of the town, then he salivated his eyes, and put his hands upon him, and now the fourth act in this curing process is asking him if he sees anything. He calls the man's attention to the healing process. There was a weak beginning and continual progress. The man looked up and saw men, but so dimly that they appeared like walking trees. The man's faith increased, and he was restored. Jesus would keep the man from the crowd until he had gone away, lest they should again throng him and prevent his plan. He must instruct his disciples, and the people were not prepared to hear what he wished to tell his disciples. He went into the towns of Cesarea and Philippi. He asked his disciples "Whom do men say that I am?" Peter, ever forward, answered that they esteemed him as the Messiah of God, the hope of the world. Matthew adds, the "Son of the living God." Thus the disciples, for whom Peter spoke, professed that Jesus was the anointed of God; and that he was a divine one sent to redeem men from sin. What other conclusion could they reach? Jesus had performed miracles that no man unaided by divine power could perform. His teachings also showed him to be more than human. His wisdom was from God. On this fact rested the world's hope. He would commit his apostles to this central truth. They must so thoroughly believe it that they never could doubt. On this, the future church and the salvation of the millions of earth depended. Could they be so thoroughly indoctrinated as to endure the temptations which would assail them in those dark days of persecution and death of their beloved leader? Peter had been so commended for his wise answer confessing Christ, that he was emboldened to teach his teacher. It is abhorrent to our sense of justice that the innocent should suffer, yet every day they do suffer, and suffer for the guilty. His wrong and stinging rebuke are circumstantially narrated. Jesus looked around on his disciples, as much as to include them in the rebuke, and said, Get thee behind me, Satan. This is just what he said to the Devil in the great temptation in the wilderness. Jesus saw in these words a suggestion of the enemy. He dreaded the cruel death of the cross, and this temptation to avoid it he thrust aside with the stern rebuke of the text. Peter did not know God's plan, and should not set human wisdom up against divine wisdom. But men are ever prone to think that they know more than God.

Mrs. Garfield has written this message to the children in the Cincinnati House of Refuge in reply to resolutions of sympathy sent her last September. "Please accept my thanks and present to the children of the House of Refuge my gratitude for their expressions of regard for General Garfield and sympathy with us. To him the possibilities locked up in little children were of exceeding interest. These are his words: 'I feel profounder reverence for a boy than for a man. I never meet a ragged boy in the street without feeling I may owe him, for I know what [illegible] may be buttoned up under his coat.'"

NEW BOOKS.

"SINGING ON THE WAY." For Sunday-Schools. By Mrs. Belle M. Jewett, assisted by Dr. J. P. Holbrook. Published by R. W. Carroll & Co., 223 West Fourth Street, Cincinnati.

WILLIE AND BRAVE. A Sequel to Little Soldiers. By Rosaline Gray. 16mo. pp. 352. New York: American Tract Society, and sold at the Presbyterian Depository, 94 Camp street, New Orleans. Price, $1 10.

This is a well-told story, and contains much valuable matter. From its beautiful and clear type, and apt illustrations and anecdotes it makes a very readable book, especially for boys and girls of ten or fifteen years of age.

TARRYPORT SCHOOL GIRLS. By Miss Annette L. Noble. New York: American Tract Society. Sold at the Presbyterian Depository, New Orleans. Price, $1.

This is a useful book, conveying valuable information to both old and young. The style of the author is free and flowing. The reputation made by past productions will not be lessened by this.

RUTH, THE MOABITESS. The Ancestress of Our Lord. By R. Houghton, D. D. Cincinnati: Walden & Stowe.

Dr. Houghton has furnished an interesting and instructive book. He writes like one acquainted with all parts of his work. The characters are lifelike. The manners and customs of the time are clearly delineated. There is something elevating and tranquillizing in reading this book, and we heartily recommend it to the perusal of the Christian public.

OUT OF THE FLOOD. By Sarah Chester Logie. The American Tract Society. Sold at the Presbyterian Depository, New Orleans. Price, $1.

The title of this book to people living in the valley of the Mississippi in no way sets forth its object. While it is a story, it is free from all that is sensational and corrupting. We recommend it to all parents as a suitable book for their children to read.

Brethren will please make all due preparations for their quarterly meetings. See that the reports of the local preachers, exhorters, leaders, Sunday-school superintendents, and other quarterly reports are all written in proper form; and, according to the instructions of our last annual conference, bring up prominently, at this time, the temperance question before the people. The Gilbert Haven School of Theology subscription matter and other conference benevolences should also commend a large share of attention at present.

EARS FOR THE MILLION!
Foo Choo's Balsam of Shark's Oil

Positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness Known.

This Oil is obtracted from peculiar species of small White Shark, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as Carcharodon Rondeletii. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist Priest about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal that for over 300 years no Deafness has existed among the Chinese People. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1 per bottle.

HEAR WHAT THE DEAF SAY!

It has performed a miracle in my case.
I have no unearthly noises in my head and hear much better.
I have been greatly benefited.
My deafness helped a great deal—think another bottle will cure me.

"Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, as the writer can personally testify, both from experience and observation. Write at once to Haylock & Jenney, 7 Dey street New York, enclosing $1, and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. A WONDERFUL and
SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.

These Glasses are chemically treated in the process of manufacture, and possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analysed by American and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and can in some cases restore the sight if used in time, but in no case can the eye become impaired by their use for the following reasons:

1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye, completely doing away with that tiresome sensation that is usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours' use.
2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.
3. The chemicals keep the glasses cold, and the result is that the optic nerves are always cool, doing away with any feverish sensation to the eye.
4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, with no distressing or tiresome sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.

The MEDICATED GLASSES are all stamped on the frame H. HOUSAH, Medicated. NONE GENUINE UNLESS STAMPED.

ESPOSIZIONE MUSICALE IN MILANO
Sotto il Patrocinio di S. M. la Regina,
Palazzo Del R. Conservatorio
AT THE GREAT ITALIAN MUSICAL EXPOSITION

Recently closed at Milan, was probably the MOST EXTRAORDINARY COLLECTION OF MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS, old and new, ever brought together; fully illustrating the great progress which has been made and present high excellence in this department of manufacture. After exhaustive examinations, tests and comparisons, extending through a period of several months, more than 250 Awards were made of medals and diplomas, in recognition of degrees of super-excellence attained in the various departments of musical art and manufacture. For REED INSTRUMENTS, including Organs and Harmoniums of all descriptions, European and American,

THE GRAND SILVER MEDAL,
being the only highest award in this department, was conferred upon the

MASON & HAMLIN ORGANS.

Their manufacturers value this extraordinary distinction the more highly because of the importance of the occasion, especially as an INTERNATIONAL MUSICAL INDUSTRIAL COMPETITION IN A COUNTRY SO PRE-EMINENTLY MUSICAL. The Mason & Hamlin Organs were honored by especial exhibition before the Royal Court by CARLO DUCCI of Rome, and warm commendation from their Majesties the King and Queen. At all the great WORLD'S INDUSTRIAL EXPOSITIONS for fourteen years these Organs have received the HIGHEST HONORS, being the only American Organs which have received such at any.

IMPROVEMENTS. During the year just closed this Company have introduced improvements of greater value than in any similar period since the introduction of the American Organ by them, twenty years since.

ELEGANT STYLES are now received from their factories daily, surpassing in capacity and excellence anything which has before been produced, and certainly worthy to be ranked with the VERY FINEST MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS IN THE WORLD. They are in cases of solid BLACK WALNUT, MAHOGANY, ASH, EBONIZED, &C., at net cash prices, $240, $330, $360, $390, $480, $570, $840, and $900.

POPULAR STYLES, including, also, the most valuable of the recent improvements, and adapted to all uses, public and private, in plain and elegant cases, are at $22, $30, $57, $66, $72, $84, $90, $93, $99, $102, $105 to $200, and up.

EASY PAYMENTS. These organs are sold for cash or easy payments, or will be rented until rent pays for an organ.

A NEW ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE, just issued, fully describing and illustrating MORE THAN ONE HUNDRED STYLES OF ORGANS, with net prices lists and circulars, will be sent free to any one desiring them. Certainly no one should buy or rent any organ without having seen these circulars, which contain much useful information about organs.

Ayer's
Hair Vigor,
FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

It is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The VIGOR cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair,

The VIGOR is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.

Have You Not a Word for Jesus.

Have you not a word for Jesus?
Will the world His praise proclaim?
Who will speak if you are silent?
Ye who know the Savior's name.
You, whom He hath called and chosen,
His own witnesses to be,
Will you tell your gracious Master,
"Lord, we cannot speak for Thee"?
"Cannot!" though He suffered for you,
Died because He loved you so!
"Cannot!" though He has forgiven,
Making scarlet white as snow!
"Cannot!" though His grace abounding
Is your freely promised aid!
"Can not!" though He stands beside you,
Though He says, "Be not afraid."

How the Earth is Kept Up.

In an interesting book entitled "Glimpses of the Globe," written for young readers by Mr. J. R. Blakiston, of Trinity College, Cambridge, we have the following instructive conversation between a little boy and his uncle:

"Uncle, I have often meant to ask you how the earth is kept up, as it travels spinning around the sun."

"I thought you would be asking me that some day. I fear you will have to wait till you are much older before you can hope to understand it. Do you see yon bright star rising over the windmill? That also, like the earth, is a roamer round the sun. Yon star setting behind Dungeness is another planet, and there are many others, some greater some less, which wheel every day and night without ceasing round the sun, spinning as they speed along."

"Then they too have days and nights as we have?"

"Yes; and perhaps seasons, for they all travel as we do, somewhat aslant. Two of them are as much larger than the earth as a large and a small orange are than a pea; and there are four, the other eight moons wheeling round to light them by night."

"And do they travel as quickly as we do?"

"The largest planet (large enough to make thirteen hundred earths) spins more than twice as fast as the earth. Even at the equator the earth spins only at the rate of seventeen miles in a minute."

"Seventeen miles in a minute? Why! I wonder we are not all of us, houses and everything, hurled off as the water when one trundles a mop."

"Look at the hands of the clock. You know the large hand goes all round once every hour, and that the short hand takes twelve hours to go once round. Well, if your eye was good enough to see the short hand moving, you certainly [illegible] see the short hand move, can you?"

"No indeed [illegible]"

"Now, the earth takes [illegible] to roll once round. [illegible] I remember it takes twenty-four hours to roll round. How [illegible] is it round the earth?"

"Nearly twenty-five thousand at the equator. Thus every hour the [illegible] thousand miles an hour. It would take a train five weeks to go round the earth if it went thirty miles an hour day and night without stopping."

"You can [illegible] me that the sun is so much larger than the earth [illegible] go [illegible] large? It looks [illegible]"

[illegible] The moon is far [illegible] the sun. More [illegible] could be made [illegible] moons might [illegible]

[illegible] heard [illegible] the stars [illegible]

miles. But figures like these are mere words to us. We can neither see nor feel the earth's motion. You may form some faint idea of a heavenly body's motion from a sling. As long as you keep the sling whirling round your head the stone is held tight. Let go the string, and off flies the stone. The string is as the sun drawing in the planets which else would fly off—who knows where?

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA

Rev Z. Charles Gayden is having a prosperous year at Whitehall. Over thirty five have been converted, while a much larger number have joined on probation.

Few men have been more wonderfully blessed in their work in Louisiana than Rev. W. Smith at Donaldsonville. Immediately after conference, Bro. Smith entered upon his work with all his heart. As part of the results of a long protracted meeting 180 have joined on probation and 111 have been converted to God. This is certainly a glorious work, and ought to fill the hearts of our people at Donaldsonville with doxologies. In addition to the above, Bro. Smith has collected of money $238, toward the erection of a new parsonage.

MR EDITOR: I desire to express my thanks to the generous friends of the Methodist Episcopal Church and congregation in Camp Parapet for their numerous gifts at the Pound Entertainment, on Friday night, May 5. Sixty-two different valuable articles were presented to the pastor, after which several addresses were delivered. F. Johnson, on the infancy of the M. E. Church. Poems were recited by Adaline Collins, R Bundy and B. M. Hubbard. Rev. C. H. Claiborne, spoke on the superiority of our preachers. I found our people much discouraged. The Sunday school nearly broke up. At present the people are moving on. The church and Sunday-school are prospering. We shall do the best we can with the blessing of the Lord, for the salvation and elevation of the people.

AUSTIN JONES, Pastor.

TEXAS

Rev. John Gness, Columbia, writes: "We are having a gracious revival of religion. As the results of a protracted meeting thirty-four joined on probation and twelve were converted to God. Spiritually our church is doing well. We have strong hopes of a grand year."

A. Brack, of Spring Hill, Texas, says: "I wish to report through the SOUTHWESTERN to all the friends of West Texas Conference, that Mrs. M. A. Perkins of Tenn., closed her school with an exhibition, such as was never witnessed before. Mrs. Perkins was loved and respected by all of our people. My work is prosperi g, and the signs are good for a grand work for God."

John L. Smith, Cook's Point: "After suffering from more than three months with rheumatism, a part of the time in bed, I was able to keep up my appointment. Since 1880 a personage has been built, and a recess added to the church, which was blown down by the late storm. The church narrowly escaped. On Easter Sunday the Sabbath school was crowded, the church decorated with flowers. At the last Annual conference I was elected president of the Temperance Society, and I call on pastors to do all in their power to make it a success in all their charges. If you will forward to me one dollar, I will send you 300 temperance tracts."

Never Give up the Ship.

"Twenty-one years ago I was dying with the Consumption. There was no escaping that terrible death—at least so all the doctors told me—when a friend advised me to send to 1032 Race St., Philadelphia, and get Cannabis Indica, which finally and fully cured me."

O. S. BISLEY,
DeKalb, St. Lawrence Co., N. Y.

A Remarkable Discovery.

A REAL SKIN CURE.

THERE IS ONLY ONE AND THAT WITH SIMPLE NAME.

Beware of impostures, pirates, or any old articles which now suddenly claim to be best. They have been tried and found wanting, while this has been proved a remarkable success.

NO POMPOUS NAME.

This curative needs no pompous or incomprehensible title of Greek or Latin to sustain it, but its simple English name appeals directly to the common sense of the people. And the people are signally manifesting their appreciation of this frankness by selecting and using Dr. Benson's SKIN CURE in preference to all other professed remedies.

Dr. C. W. Benson has long been well known as a successful physician and surgeon and his life study has been the diseases of the nervous system and of the skin; since he has been persuaded to put his New Remedy and Favorite Prescription as a "Skin Cure" on the market, various things have sprung up into existence, or have woke up from the sleepy state in which they were before, and now claim to be The Great Skin Cure.

Beware of imitation, or the various articles which have been advertised for years or struggled along, having no real hold or merit on the public, that now endeavor to keep head above water by advertising themselves as "The Great Skin Cure." None is genuine and reliable except Dr. C. W. Benson's Skin Cure. Each package and bottle bears his likeness. Internal and external remedy, two bottles in one package. Price $1 00, get at your druggists.

Answer This!

Can you find a case of Bright's Disease of the Kidneys, Diabetes, Urinary or Liver Complaints that is curable, that Hop Bitters has not or cannot cure? Ask your neighbor's if they can.

Fully one hundred clergymen of the Church of England are said to be converted Jews.

St. Joseph Saturday Democrat, Aug. 27, 1881.

A Friend to the Friendless.

Sorrow and sickness is too common heritage of humanity, and when we see how little is done to alleviate the miseries of the great mass of humanity we are almost out of patience with life. Even where the intentions are best, ignorance is prone to bid the afflicted "suffer and be strong," instead of "ministering to the mind diseased," or laying a hand of healing on the poor tortured body.

Ah; when Science and Philanthropy, with love and sympathy and skill, come to the aid of the sufferers, they feel as if the angel of annunciation had drawn near.

Samaritan Nervine really is salvation to thousands. I speak from a full heart when I say it, for friends very near and dear to me have been restored to health and happiness by means of it.

"God bless Dr Richmond," said one of them to me the other day. "I feel as I know the men men found in Scripture must have felt when he went from Jerusalem to Jericho and fell among thieves, and when robbed and at the point of death, was befriended and restored to health by the Good Samaritan.

"Yes," he continued "that was exactly my condition. I had spent a fortune in doctor's bills and patent medicines. Everything I could hear of I tried, so desperate was my situation, but I grew worse steadily, until some kind friend told me of the Samaritan Nervine. Since taking I am, as you see, restored to perfect health.

With such incontrovertible proof of the beneficent nature of the remedy, it is not strange that an editor, always solicitous for an accurate knowledge of what could benefit the world in general, should take earliest opportunity of visiting the inventor and proprietor of the medicine at the World's Epileptic Institute.

We found the doctor in his elegant private office busily engaged in superintending the gentlemen whose duty it is to attend to the details of the immense correspondence which is a natural result of his wide-spread reputation.

On making known our wishes, he very kindly accompanied us in our tour of inspection through the magnificent building and grounds.

Almost as soon as we entered the office our attention was arrested by a wonderful collection of photographs, numbering somewhere in the thousands. All nations, ages and stations were represented. The elegant carte of society leader was side by side with the picture of humble artisan; innocent childhood and withered old age showed by counterfeit presentment the gratitude they could not speak; doctors, lawyers, ministers of the gospel, soldiers, laborers, plain mothers of families, haughty children of wealth, rich and poor, high and low, black and white, all were represented. It reminded me of the miracle cures of Europe, only instead of the crutches, bandages, gold, silver and wax images of the recuperated pilgrims, left before the shrine of the miracle worker, Dr. Richmond has as testimonials the pictures of his deeply grateful patients.

"You must feel very happy, doctor, when you look at this collection," we said.

"Ah! yes," said the doctor pleasantly, "but if you like my Art Gallery, what would you say to my Library?"

He led the way to the next apartment, and we followed, expecting only to see perhaps one bookcase filled with dusty tomes of abstract science. Instead the walls were lined with many very handsome bookcases, containing over one hundred thousand unsolicited testimonials from those whom the Nervine had cured.

"How wonderfully fortunate, as well as talented you are," we exclaimed in amazement. "The Nervine has proved a perfect gold mine."

The doctor looked at us reproachfully.

"I am not one to underestimate the value of wealth," he answered, "for I have known what it is to be without it, but what is the most colossal fortune that was ever in the grasp of mortal man in comparison to the good my remedy is doing? Picture to yourself, if you can, what must be the feeling of an epileptic. Think of him with his dreadful disease so long pronounced incurable. He cannot take part in the studies, duties, employments, recreations or amusements of an ordinary fellow-being. He is an object of horror rather than of pity to his friends. His malady stands still; it is constantly growing worse and more dreadful in all its phases. Last and most dreadful before him stands the awful phantom of insanity. Sleeping or waking he feels that it is there, and that sooner or later it will clutch him; and it does. An epileptic must be, like Job, tempted to curse Heaven and die. Why, it would bring tears to your eyes to read a letter I received from a gentleman at Potsdam, N. Y., telling how he had two thousand dreadful fits in eighteen months, and is now, thanks to the Nervine, entirely cured. That poor fellow can scarcely find words strong enough to express his feelings. That's the kind of a thing to make a man feel happy."

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Alcoholism, Drunkenness and the habit of Opium Eating. These degrading habits are by far the worst evils that have ever befallen suffering humanity. Thousands die annually from these noxious drugs. The drunkard drinks liquor not because he likes it, but for the pleasure of drinking and treating his friends, little thinking that he is on his road to ruin. Like the Opium Eater, he first uses the drug in small quantities as a harmless antidote. The soothing influence of the drug takes strong hold upon its victim, leading him on to his own destruction. The habits of Opium Eating and Liquor Drinking are precisely what eating is to alimentiveness, as over-eating first inflames the stomach, which redoubles its cravings until it paralyzes both the stomach and appetite. So every drink of liquor or dose of opium, instead of satisfying, only adds to its fierce fires, until it consumes the vital force and then itself. Like the gluttonous tape-worm, it cries: "Give, give, give!" but never enough until its own rapacity devours itself. Samaritan Nervine gives instant relief in all such cases. It produces sleep, quiets the nerves, builds up the nervous system, and restores body and mind to a healthy condition.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

DR. HARTER'S

GENTLEMEN: I have used DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC in my practice, and in an experience of twenty-five years in medicine, have never found anything to give the results that DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC does. In many cases of Nervous Prostration, Female Diseases, Dyspepsia, and an impoverished condition of the blood, this peerless remedy, has in my hands, made some wonderful cures. Cases that have baffled some of our most eminent physicians, have yielded to this great and incomparable remedy. I prescribe it in preference to any iron preparation ever made. In fact, such a compound as DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC is a necessity in my practice.
DR. ROBERT SAMUELS,
ST. LOUIS, MO., Nov. 28th, 1881. 3104 Wash Avenue.

A combination of Protoxide of Iron, Peruvian Bark and Phosphorus in a palatable form. The only preparation of iron that will not blacken the teeth, so characteristic of other iron preparations.

It gives color to the blood, natural healthful tone to the digestive organs and nervous system, making it applicable to General Debility, Loss of Appetite, Prostration of Vital Powers and Impotence.

IRON TONIC.

MANUFACTURED BY THE DR. HARTER MEDICINE CO., 213 N. MAIN ST., ST. LOUIS.

Is a compound of the virtues of sarsaparilla, stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, with the iodide of potash and iron, all powerful blood-making, blood-cleansing, and life-sustaining elements. It is the purest, safest, and in every way the most effectual alterative medicine known or available to the public. The sciences of medicine and chemistry have never produced so valuable a remedy, nor one so potent to cure all diseases resulting from impure blood. It cures Scrofula, and all scrofulous diseases, Erysipelas, Rose, or St. Anthony's Fire, Pimples and Face-grubs, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scald-head, Ringworm, Ulcers, Sores, Rheumatism, Mercurial Disease, Neuralgia, Female Weaknesses and Irregularities, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver, Dyspepsia, Emaciation, and General Debility.

By its searching and cleansing qualities it purges out the foul corruptions which contaminate the blood, and cause derangement and decay. It stimulates and enlivens the vital functions. It promotes energy and strength. It restores and preserves health. It infuses new life and vigor throughout the whole system. No sufferer from any disease which arises from impurity of the blood need despair, who will give AYER'S SARSAPARILLA a fair trial. Remember, the earlier the trial, the speedier the cure.

Its recipe has been furnished to physicians everywhere; and they, recognizing its superior qualities, administer it in their practice.

For nearly forty years AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has been widely used, and it now possesses the confidence of millions of people who have experienced benefits from its marvellous curative virtues.

VOL. 17—NO. 21. NEW ORLEANS, LOUISIANA, THURSDAY, MAY 25, 1882. WHOLE NUMBER 512.

[illegible] ple of these amendments, or that it is applicable, in the fullest degree, to the entire colored population of the United States. In the matter of rights and privileges there is now no white and no black man in the United States. All the people are simply men, having the same rights and subject to the same responsibilities.

The Fourteenth Amendment declares that no "state shall deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws." Mr. Justice Strong, referring to this language, in the recent case of Strander v. Virginia (10 Otto, 307), which related to the exclusion of colored men from juries said:

"What is this but declaring that the states shall be the same for the black as for the white; that all persons, whether colored or white, shall stand equal before the laws of the states and in regard to the colored race, for whose protection the amendment was primarily designed, that no discrimination shall be made against them by law because of their color? The words of the amendment, it is true, are prohibitory, but they contain a necessary implication of a positive immunity or right most valuable to the colored race—the right to exemption from unfriendly legislation against them distinctively as colored—exemption from legal discriminations, implying inferiority in civil society, lessening the security of their enjoyment of the rights which others enjoy, and discriminations which are steps toward reducing them to the condition of a subject race."

Now, it seems to us that this language of the Supreme Court, construing the import of the Fourteenth Amendment, is inconsistent with the adoption of the color line or the race line in the organization and management of public schools under the authority of state laws. We say state laws; for, if such a [illegible] be adopted by trustees or [illegible] of education, they are but [illegible] in exercising the powers [illegible] by law, and, unless [illegible] the law, what they do [illegible]. If colored children [illegible] from public schools [illegible] children attend, then [illegible] for their education is the [illegible] and they are colored children, and this is precisely the reason in [illegible] for which colored men in West Virginia were excluded from the jury-box, which exclusion the [illegible] Court of the United States [illegible] to be unconstitutional. [illegible] say nothing now about the ob[illegible] to the exclusion on the score [illegible] inconvenience to colored chil[illegible] or its impolicy on the score of increased expense, or its wrong [illegible] on the score of its fostering [illegible] and improper prejudice [illegible]. What we say is, that it is against the spirit and [illegible] of the Fourteenth Amendment, as interpreted by the Supreme Court. It goes upon the [illegible] that there is such a difference between the two races that [illegible] should not be educated [illegible] in the same schools; and as [illegible] known, this theory [illegible] from the antagonism of [illegible] the part of the white [illegible] the black race. It [illegible] race, not, for [illegible] because it [illegible] and discriminates [illegible] race; and, if the [illegible] Court is right in its con[illegible] of the Fourteenth Amendment, [illegible] discriminations of this [illegible] are inconsistent with its [illegible] and design.

[illegible] as a matter [illegible] establishing [illegible] by the Act of [illegible] Stat. [illegible] providing [illegible] to persons of color, though they were as good as those which they assigned exclusively for white persons, and, in fact, the very cars which were, at certain times, assigned exclusively to white persons." A car for Negroes and another for white people, as the Court held, did not meet the intent of the law; and precisely the same difficulty exists with schools exclusively for Negro children, and others exclusively for white children. The system is an attempt to dodge the fair and just application of the Fourteenth Amendment. It does not harmonize with the purpose of the Amendment, as construed by the Supreme Court of the United State. It makes an odious and invidious distinction between the two races and practically against the black race, which is contrary to the fundamental law of the land.

We sincerely hope that some colored man, whose child may have been subjected to this distinction, will have the pluck to pursue the case, if necessary, to the Supreme Court of the United States and obtain its judgment upon the question. That court can decide cases only as they come to it, and it so happens that no case involving the question of "Nigger schools" has ever reached it. Judging, however, from its decisions in other cases, there cannot be much doubt as to how it would decide this point. The principle which it has uniformly applied is, that no discriminations, by state law, or in its administration, between citizens of the United States, having their basis in race or color, are compatible with the recent amendments to the National Constitution. The two races, being citizens of the United States and of the respective States in which they reside, stand, in view of this instrument, upon exactly the same level, and any authority exercised under state law which in practice changes this fact, in any form or to any extent, is in conflict with "the supreme law of the land."—*N. For the SOUTHWESTERN.

Letter from Bro. Elkins.

DEAR BRETHREN OF LITTLE ROCK CONFERENCE:—When I left you last September to enter the G. B. I., at Evanston, Ill., I promised some of you that you should hear from me through the SOUTHWESTERN; but the scholastic year has passed and gone, and this is my first attempt to redeem my promise. Every day of the year has been a busy one, and every hour has been filled with labor. There were deep questions of theology to study, difficult principles of homiletics to master, abstruse theories of metaphysics with which to grapple, lessons in elocution, archæology and praxis, demanding my time, and last but by no means least there were Greek verbs to master, and Greek roots to dig; these, with various other duties, occupied my time so closely that ere I was aware, the close of the year had come.

I left Evanston a few days before school closed, to take charge of the Ontario street M. E. Church, of this Sheboygan city, Wis.

This is a beautiful city of ten thousand inhabitants—mostly German and Scandinavians.

The mineral water here has rendered this a noted resort in Summer.

The city is most admirably located on high grounds, overlooking Lake Michigan, while Sheboygan river, that flows majestically through the Southern portion of the city, makes a good harbor for the many vessels that come to this port.

Our society here was once a large and flourishing one—a society that demanded and supported first-class talent. The good Dr. Wheeler, now missionary in China, held a large audience spell-bound with his eloquence Sabbath after Sabbath, for three years; but the wolf at last entered and scattered the flock. Last year a preacher from Canada supplied the charge. He proved to be an able [illegible]—able to take the Church by the throat and choke the life out [illegible].

We now have twenty-two names in the class-book, and but four or [illegible] really interested in the salvation of the society. A preacher [illegible] here from conference, but he [illegible] and they have been [illegible] of any kind for [illegible] before I came.

[illegible] of the good meet[illegible] attended at Wesley [illegible] Rock, and out on [illegible] how I would [illegible] conference and camp meeting like that we had in Richwoods last August.

The SOUTHWESTERN is a regular visitor to my study, and I scan its pages closely for the news from the Little Rock Conference. I have noticed with great pleasure the increase in ministerial force, and hope when my school-days are over to take my place in your ranks again.

A good doctor of divinity said to me not long since: "My advice to any young minister is to go into the South and consecrate his life to the elevation of the down-trodden race. Teach them that all men are equal before God, and although some discriminate against them, yet the best men do not." "We do nothing nobly in this life," he continued, "but what we do for others; and the glory of life consists in making sacrifices for the needy." I then resolved that my life-work shall be with and for the down-trodden.

Dear brethren, be faithful in your work. Remember that immortal souls are looking to you to instruct them in the way that leads to heaven and to God.

May God abundantly bless you with all the interests of Little Rock Conference. More anon.

L. W. ELKINS.

Second Round—San Antonio District.

MR. EDITOR: I have finished my first and begun my second round on this district.

At Gonzales, Bro. J. Henderson had commenced his work in earnest, and we trust success will crown his efforts. Rev. George Brothers was appointed to the Mt. Vernon circuit, but failed to go. His place was supplied by Bro. L. Morris, who is going forward. Bro. J. C. Mays, at Cuero and New Hope circuit, one of our promising young men, is doing a noble work at Cuero under embarrassing circumstances. The failure in crops last year prevented the subscribers to our building enterprise from meeting their engagements. He is hoping that all will respond this season, which bids fair to be abundant. At Victoria, Bro. P. M. Carmichael stands popular among the entire community. His influence and his power in the pulpit are not easily estimated. His congregations are always large. He is aided in the work by Rev. W. A. Fortson, formerly of Clark University, and late graduate of Central Tennessee College. Bro. Fortson sustains a good reputation as a preacher and teacher and a worker in our church. At Mission Valley and Centerville circuit, Bro. A. M. Mason has by protracted efforts won thirty-seven souls to the Master this year, all of whom joined our church. This young man is meeting with great and persistent opposition from the African ministers, aided by their presiding elder, Rev. Richard Haywood, who wrote charges and specifications against Bro. Mason to me. After due inquiry, we find Bro. A. M. Mason is a perfect Christian gentleman, and had shown Bro. Haywood every mark of recognition, and gave him the warmest brotherly reception, at the same time having been railed at by Bro. Haywood, accusing him of being foolish for staying in "a white man's church." Bro. Haywood was invited into our pulpit and to lead in prayer, which he accepted, and consumed nearly a half-hour in asking God to "open our blinded eyes, that we might see our error in remaining with our old masters and overseers." This prayer did not take worth a cent with the people. We are unable to say how our Heavenly Father takes it. He called Bro. Mason a boy before the whole congregation; but he being reviled, reviled not again. Bro. Mason did just precisely what every pastor has a right to do, to prevent, if possible, any man from tearing his congregation to pieces. I would have felt it my duty to so stand in the way of any man, old or young. Elder Haywood had been kindly provided lodging amid our people without cost or price. If he has so much love and sympathy for the people of African descent why does he spend his ripe years to disturb their peace?

We ended our first round on the 30th of April, with Goliad, by baptising forty-one persons, only one infant, which scene was witnessed by a vast multitude of both white and colored. There were forty-eight conversions at Goliad at a meeting conducted by Prof. C. P. Westbrooks, professor in the [illegible] Male and Female Institute, Goliad. He is assisted by his noble wife, Mrs. L. A. Westbrooks, both graduates of Central Tennessee College. This institution is chartered.

Train the Converts.

Every preacher in charge of a district or station should organize all of his converts into classes, and then appoint a good leader over them, or lead them himself. We should not fail to instruct them, because the success of the Church depends upon its training of the young converts. The Church loses a great many of her converts because they have not been trained. They should be taught at once that religion means work in the vineyard of the Lord.

Young converts are young soldiers for Christ, and they need training in order to make useful members of the Church. If they are not trained they will not be of much service to the Church. The leader should show them their duties and dangers—how to escape the dangers and how to perform their duties. Every preacher should make it his prerogative to look after the young converts.

A. PHILLIPS.

Murfreesboro, Tenn.

Garrett Biblical Institute.

The official report of the board of conference visitors to Garrett Biblical Institute for the year ending May 11, 1882, says: the prosperity attending the school throughout the year is cause for much thankfulness. There have been in attendance about one hundred students. The present graduating class numbers twenty-one. These are a material strengthening of the army—two hundred and fifty strong—that has already gone forth from thes halls into all lands to preach the gospel. The examination has clearly shown that excellent work has been done by the able board of instructors. It is gratifying to notice the thoroughness with which our Methodistic theology has been taught in all departments. The students and teachers evince enthusiasm in their work. The demand for well-trained ministers is so great in the country tributary to this institution that the patronizing conferences should do their utmost to fill it to its entire capacity. About two hundred students can be accommodated here. And we most cheerfully recommend that each conference take such action as will effectually discourage, and if possible prevent, drafts upon the attendance at the institute during the school year. Every student should be constrained to finish his course without interruption, otherwise the completeness of his equipment may be seriously impaired.

Under the admirable tact and energy of Rev. Dr. Dandy, the financial agent, and the wisdom of the trustees, the finances have so improved as to show that the days of financial peril are past and that the time of larger opportunity has arrived.

The income of the past year exceeds the expenses by several hundred dollars, and there is great cause for congratulating the financial agent, the trustees, and all the friends of the institute, as well as for gratitude to all the generous donors. Let us have a jubilee!

This grand material prosperity fully warrants the policy of expansion adopted by the trustees. We are glad that Rev. Dr. Ridgaway has been added to the faculty, who will bring to the institution the vigor and attainments of the prime of his manhood.

We further take pleasure in calling attention to Dr. Raymond's work on theology, which, in our judgment, is a production unsurpassed, if not peerless, among us. And with pleasure we look forward to Volume VII, of Whedon's Commentary—the joint work of Drs. Bannister and Hemenway. These publications will bring honor upon this school of the prophets.

We would call special attention to the facts that the charter of the institute shows that this institution is organically independent of all other educational institutions of the Church; and that the character of the instruction is not only under the supervision of the board of trustees, but is actually within the special and complete control of the Church.

We have agreed, as official visitors, to make suitable reports of our impressions and observations to our various conferences, and to do what we may be able to emphasize the cause of ministerial education, to awaken a corresponding desire in our young men entering the ministry, and to intensify the interest in our several conferences in this noble institution at Evanston.

Bishop H. W. Warren in Macon.

A small number of brethren and sisters, formerly of the African Methodist Church, have been struggling for several years to erect a house in which to worship God. These Christian brethren and sisters are some of the best citizens in Macon. After due consideration, we decided we would unite with the Methodist Episcopal Church, which we have done, and on the 22d of January (last month) Bishop Warren came down and preached to the little band. He preached from the text "For God so loved the world," etc. This is a noble text and the bishop gave us a sweet and powerful discourse which will not be forgotten soon. After preaching, the bishop told us many things about the dear old mother church of Methodism and the good she is doing for the colored people and for all who will accept it. All enjoyed the bishop's discourse and visit much and hope he will come again. We ask all to pray for Haven's Church.—W. J. T. Hadson, in the Methodist Advocate.

"John."

In Swatow Province, of the Celestial Kingdom, there is an old tradition handed down for many generations, and implicitly believed in by common people. It is to the effect that, once upon a time, in the dawn of the ages, an old Emperor of China went down to purgatory and asked the great overseer of souls what he (the Emperor) could do for the good of his people. The overseer told him that for the present he could do no better than he was doing; but when a "flowery flag, with a heaven of stars and the light of the North upon its wings, shall come over the water to the flowery kingdom, then shall the great dragon turn his head to the East and find a land rising from the ocean, to be owned and enjoyed by his suffering poor. Then, oh Emperor, stretch thy hand and look across the setting sun and rejoice, for the gods have given thee another kingdom greater than the first." In the course of time, the American flag waved in China's harbors, and since that day it has been recognized as the "flowery flag"—the long promised ensign destined to lead the children of the sun to their promised heritage.

John is in no way loth to accept the traditional view of his destiny, and already regards the United States in the light of a Province of the Emperor—a sort of Canaan to his Judea. He is ready to make any sacrifice to come hither and the desire for emigration rages in tumultuous fever. If, therefore, it should be China's destiny to spread her crowded hordes over the broad face of this continent, we can only look upon it as a dispensation of Providence working out its part in the great scheme of mundane regeneration, and in this recognize our duty to encourage it.

It is useless, therefore, for our puny Senators to pipe against this rising gale. The old woman who endeavored to sweep the Atlantic out of her cottage with a broom did not essay a more hopeless task.

The government has been grossly insulted again in Alabama. The United States court in session at Huntsville, Judge Bruce presiding, ex-Gov. Smith, District Attorney, tried one of the cases of election frauds and the accused was found guilty beyond doubt of counting out Lowe. The judge charged the jury that there being no conflict in the testimony, and its truth being admitted by the defendants, they were bound to believe the evidence, and if they believed they must find the defendants guilty. Whereupon Gen. Walker, attorney for defendants, said: "I deny your Honor's right to make any such charge to this jury; it is an outrage upon the rights of the defendants and a violation of the Constitution, a denial of their right to have this jury pass upon their guilt or innocence." At the conclusion of this insolent language the crowd in the court-house cheered and stamped loudly for some time, producing great disorder in the court room. Then one of the jurymen got up and said: "If your Honor please, are we to try this case according to our understanding of the law and evidence?" The Court answered, "If you believe the evidence the defendants are guilty, and you will so find them." In a few minutes the jury returned a verdict of "not guilty." The court discharged both defendants and jury. This angered the Ku Klux and another effort was made to intimidate the court. There is no doubt that Lowe, independent candidate for Congress was elected by the people and counted out by the judges of the election. In all such cases Congress should act promptly and seat the persons elected.—Methodist Ad.

[illegible] in the [illegible] town of Gardner, Maine, between the hours of 11 and 12 at night, there leaned against the gate of a ruined home, what most people called a human wreck. Years before he had been a prosperous merchant, a good citizen, a consistent and happy Christian; he had been a shining light in that town, and the pride of a once happy home. That wreck was J. K. Osgood; his property was all gone, his home, once one of the most pleasant in town, now the most wretched. As he stood leaning upon the gate, with the last dime spent for drink, he saw through the window the sad, pale, care worn, yet patient and loving face of his wife. Just then he heard a voice saying, "Osgood, you once vowed before God to love, honor and cherish that woman. What are you now doing?" Instantly the tears rolled down his cheeks and there, in the dark, where none but God could see, he fell upon his knees and lifted his hands to heaven, and vowed never to drink again, and thus far he has kept that vow.

Then came weeks and months of struggling with the destroyer; God always helps those who are ready to help themselves. There was living in the community a well-known lawyer, who had been Mr. Osgood's boon companion; he was the first one to labor to save [illegible], and was wonderfully successful in his efforts. One morning, [illegible] was amazed to see [illegible] through the city the following notice:

Let it be understood that the money collected this day is to be used to help those scholars of our Sunday-schools, who need help in striving to obtain educational qualifications for the higher spheres of Christian usefulness, and that already more than seven hundred scholars from our Sunday-schools have been helped by the fund, and in the next ten years probably more than two thousand will be. Preachers and others, who desire a more complete history of Childrens' Day, are referred to the Sunday-School Teachers' Journal for May, and the Manual of the Methodist Episcopal Church for April. We hope that all of our preachers and superintendents will do their best to make the day a great success.

The Chinese Question.

The following, according to the San Francisco Chronicle, is the bill of fare the hoodlums and sand-lots, in company with what the Baltimore Methodist calls "the most intelligent and the most philanthropic citizens," have prepared for the Chinese. In answer to the question, "What can we do?" the Chronicle says:

We can tax their polls and their business. We can exclude them from all public institutions. We can place their lepers in perpetual quarantine and compel them to pay the cost of their keeping. We can utilize their convicts by working them in the streets and sewers. We cannot prohibit individuals and corporation from employing them, but in various ways we can make it hot and inconvenient for the employers, and by a prudent moulding of public opinion keep all such from political office. We can reach them by strenuous vagrant laws, sanitary ordinances and regulations relating to health and the strange diseases they bring with them.

This is coercion with a vengeance. It is much the same as that of some Southern whites for the negroes, after emancipation, who wished to revive slavery under a different form. We know all about the negro, they said, and we know that slavery is his best condition. But when it was found that the negro had a ballot in his hand, he obtained a sort of recognition. But the poor Chinese are to be deprived of everything. They can have no rights, civil, social, or religious that the hoodlums and sand-lots are bound to respect. One cannot but ask: "Is manhood, honor and justice clean gone in California?" We advocate the same rights for Chinese as for other nationalities. The English, Irish, Dutch, German, Celtic, Latin, Spanish, Scandinavian people are here. There are doubtless more than fifty arrivals to our cities from Europe to one from China. To us there is no justice in this discrimination against the Chinese.

President Arthur's reasons for not signing the first bill were clear and convincing. But we are not able to see how he could sign the second containing so much he had shown himself to be wrong in the first. If, in his veto message, the President acted the statesman, in signing this second bill, the statesman is sunk into the politician. We are opposed to this law because it is wrong to China; it is a violation of the fundamental principles of the Declaration of Independence and of the Law of God. No longer can we boast of this land as an asylum for the oppressed of all nations.

Attending Church in Boston.

The reporters of the Advertiser gathered up the statistics of church attendance in Boston, on Sabbath, April 16th, with the following result: Roman Catholics, nearly fifty [illegible]; the Baptists, between [illegible] and sixteen thousand; Orthodox Congregationalists, fifteen thousand; Episcopalians, [illegible] thousand; Unitarians and [illegible] between nine and ten thousand each. All of the Methodist pulpits were supplied by students from the Boston University, [illegible] being away to attend [illegible]. The day, says the Advertiser, was pleasant and the [illegible] would be tempted to enjoy the sunshine and out-of-doors [illegible], but, according to this showing, there were over one hundred and twenty-four thousand on [illegible] attending divine service in [illegible] day, which is a good intimation [illegible] Christianity has not lost all of [illegible] power among the people. Thus [illegible] by words only, but by works, and in the renewal of souls in the image of God, does the Gospel of Christ win its victories.

Public Rights and Bar Rooms.

Representative T. Allain, of Iberville parish, from his seat in the House, on the 18th, rose to a question of privilege, had the clerk read an article from the Capitolian Advocate, official journal of the State, which accused him of attempting to raise the question of social equality, and then made a pathetic complaint of the denial of his equal rights in a bar-room. On sober second thought Mr. Allain may realize, as many of his friends do now, that he has put himself in a most undignified attitude in this matter. There are better opportunities for oratory and statesmanship on other questions; and the monopoly of the whiskey shops, so strongly contended for by the white liners, might be conceded without the loss of any essential right or consequent sense of degradation by the colored people. In the great struggle which a rising race is making for the full recognition of their public rights, let the law be invoked to open the public schools and State universities, and to secure equal privileges from licensed public carriers; as for dram shops, gambling hells and brothels, responsible as they are for a large portion of prevailing prejudices and race conflicts, there is no impassable barrier to the union of wise and good men for their suppression.

Mr. Allain was sorely tempted, and in his weakness he fell somewhat. Satan has beguiled stronger men, and only those who are imbued with the spirit of the Savior, can bid him depart.

Mr. Allain, the natural son and former slave of a prominent white planter, after his freedom a political leader of his people, of conservative tendencies, and a successful planter, tells how he was accosted by a wealthy white planter:

Mr. John Hill met me on the street in Baton Rouge, the seat of government, made so by my vote and influence, and said to me, 'Allain, the white people of West Baton Rouge and Iberville have watched your course before the war, during the war and after the war; and particularly since your trip to Washington City in the interest of our levees, you are raised higher in the estimation of our people than ever before. Come on; let us go and take a drink.' I said to him, 'Mr. Hill, if you had a little bottle in your pocket we could take a little right here on the street. If we were in West Baton Rouge, I believe, or New Orleans, we could go in a saloon, but the people are not liberal here. I would be the last man in the State to give the keepers of these saloons an opportunity to insult and humiliate me.' He replied, 'I invite you; it is not you inviting me, and I have more money than all of them put together and they will not dare refuse you in my presence.' Mr. John Hill then took me by the hand and said, 'Allain, if you do not come with me and take a drink, I shall never speak to you again.'

The Tempter, through the agency of John Hill, so persuaded Mr. Allain to accompany him to a bar, where the proprietor refused to allow him to drink because of his color. Mr Allain says:

In 1879, while the Constitutional Convention was in session and the momentous question was being discussed as to whether the seat of government should remain at New Orleans or be moved to Baton Rouge, a delegation composed of Messrs. Wm. Garig, R. H. Burke, W. G. Randolph, and Chas. Wieck, sent for me at the St. Charles Hotel, and said to me that our delegates in the convention, Messrs. Jastremski, Herron, and Young have done and are doing all that men could do for Baton Rouge, but we are whipped; unless you use your influence with colored members of the constitutional convention to cast their votes in favor of Baton Rouge we are gone; and then assured me that if the capital be removed to Baton Rouge, public privileges before the law would be accorded the colored members of the General Assembly.

We do not doubt the bar-room proprietor was guilty of an unlawful act. The convention pledge to be interpreted fairly needs a "bill of particulars," and Mr. Allain was lacking in shrewdness if he failed to require it at the time. The question, what constitutes "public privileges?" is the one at issue. The Capitolian Advocate regards entrance to a whisky shop as a "social" privilege, and hence not nominated in the bond. The place of arbitration is a court of law. The delegation could not reasonably pledge something over which they had no control, and Mr. Allain knew the prevailing views on the subject of "social equality."

It is Mr. John Hill, and not Mr. Allain, his invited guest, who should have been heard with a loud voice on this occasion. The insult, in no chivalrous sense, belongs to Mr. Allain, whose chief cause for humiliation should be that he suddenly and painfully found himself in a bad situation. Let him solemnly resolve never to do so any more. We have no information as to the subsequent action of Mr. Hill, or whether his money and influence is to be heard from in pro[illegible] " right to take a glass of liquor with any man he deems respectable enough; but we do know that in the Constitutional Convention a proposition was brought up to establish a State University for people of color, and this measure was consented to on alleged grounds of policy by Mr. Allain among others. This proposition was as violative of the Fourteenth Amendment and civil rights laws as the refusal of admission to a Baton Rouge bar-room, and, like the seductive promises of the Baton Rouge delegation, it has come to naught—is a disastrous failure. The consistency of yielding to separate schools for people of color, and appealing for equal rights in liquor saloons, does not appear clearly to the average mind. Let convictions for the right be clearly enunciated, without any bowing-down before bar-rooms and race-caste, and the Negro race will sooner be lifted out of the valley of bondage and humiliation.

The New Bishops of the M. E. Church South.

Five men thrust into the office of a Bishop by one General Conference is a new era in the ecclesiastical history of the M. E. Church South. These five were elected on three ballots, showing a good degree of unanimity. Of these A. W. Wilson, D. D., of the Baltimore Conference, takes the lead. He is a native of Maryland, a graduate of Columbian College, Washington, D. C., joined the Baltimore Conference in 1853. He is a progressive man of great vigor of mind, and is reported to be a very popular preacher.

The youngest of the body, Atticus G. Haygood, D. D., is a native of Georgia, was born, we believe, in 1839, and is a graduate of the Emory College, of Oxford. Dr. Haygood is a bold thinker, a fine writer and eloquent preacher. He is President of Emory College, and for the past four years has been editor of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate. He is author of two books that have had an immense sale, "Our Children" and "Our Brother in Black. His Freedom and His Future." Few books have created more interest over the whole country than this last. And few men are better liked or more justly respected. His blood is of good Methodist type, and he will be a strong, calm, earnest, progressive officer of the Church; he is bound to win as a bishop as he has in all his previous positions.

J. C. Granberry, D. D., is a native of Norfolk, Va., and is about 53 years old. He has filled the chair of practical theology in the Vanderbilt University since 1875. As a writer and scholar, it is said that he has few equals in the M. E. Church, South.

Linus Parker, D.D., is a native of Kentucky, was born in 1825, and is a self-educated man. In 1847, he joined the Louisiana Conference, and whether as circuit rider, stationed preacher, presiding elder or editor, Dr. Parker has been a winning man. The members of the M. E. Church, South, here in New Orleans and Louisiana, have seen him face to face these many years. He is said to be fluent of speech, clear of brain, and fertile of thought. We wish for our neighbor the largest measure of success as a bishop of his church.

Robert K. Hargrove, D.D., was born in Pickens county, Ala., September 17, 1829. He was educated in the University of Alabama and joined that conference in 1857. He is said to be an able preacher, learned and lovable, and loves Methodism with all his heart, might, mind and strength; he has rendered to his church valuable service. We doubt if there is a better balanced mind on the board.

P. S.—We learn that Dr. Haygood, because of his connection with the College of which he is now President, declines ordination as Bishop.

After June 15, there will be no postage upon newspapers in Canada. This marks a step in advance in that country. The present postage on newspapers has always been unpopular and has been regarded as a tax upon the circulation of intelligence among the masses. Here in the United States there should be no postage as tax upon newspapers sent to actual subscribers by the publishers. All reformers move slow, but we trust that our legislators will reach this point by and by.

From time immemorial there has existed a law in the United Presbyterian Church forbidding the use of instrumental music in their churches. By a vote of 616 to 606 this law has been repealed. We are glad of it, glad that our good brethren have in the year 1882 come to recognize the command to "Praise Him with the sound of the trumpet; praise Him with the psaltery and harp; praise Him with stringed instruments and organs." This is a step in the right direction.

The anniversary exercises of Straight University takes place next week, as follows: Sunday 11 a. m., Baccalaureate Sermon by Rev. Dr. Alexander, at Central Church; examinations Monday and Tuesday; literary exercises, Wednesday 12 m., in the Chapel and at night at Central Church. Tuesday night Alumni exercises at Central Church. The general public are respectfully invited. Admission free.

The number of pupils at La Teche Seminary, is now reported at 244, of whom exactly one half are males and one half females. The Normal Class numbers 8; Biblical Class 8. Four conversions recently. During the absence of Dr. Godman, who goes North for health, Prof. G. W. Wells is in charge.

The National Brewers' Association is sending out large sums of money to defeat temperance legislation in the Western States.

—New Orleans is represented by two Bishops in the M. E. Church South—Keener and Parker—and both were promoted from the editorial chair of the N. O. Advocate.

—Hon. H. C. Dibble, late of New Orleans, is an applicant for the district attorneyship of Arizona. President Arthur would gratify many friends of Judge Dibble in this city by giving him this appointment, for which he is well qualified.

—Dr. Buckley, editor of the Christian Advocate, says that he has studied the German language, but when he attends a German conference he never addresses them in their native tongue for the reason "I never met a German who could understand me when I spoke German."

—Rev. I. G. Pollard, presiding elder of Little Rock district writes, May 18th: "I am at home with my sick family, and will not be able to get out on my district before the first Sunday in June. Wife and children all down with measles. Pray for us."

—Rev. Duston Kemble, one of our missionaries laboring in Mexico, passed through this city on his return to Leon, Mexico. Bro. Kemble seems to be in fine health, full of vigor, and plans for the development of his new field of labor. He says that New Orleans is better known in that Republic than any American city.

—We were pleased to receive a call from W. D. Godman, D. D., Agent of the Orphans' Home and President of La Teche Seminary. Dr. Godman was on his way North to secure funds to complete the Home and erect a boarding house for the students of the Seminary. He has a heavy burden to bear, and we commend him to the Christian public.

—Rev. A. A. Johnson, of the Austin Conference, has been spending a few days in Cincinnati on business connected with Church and college affairs in Texas. He is presiding elder of the Fort Worth District, which embraces the north half of the State, where our work is growing rapidly.—Western.

—During the last Winter while on his way to the Seventh Street Methodist Church in Minneapolis, Minn., Bisop Foss stepped upon an insecure board in the sidewalk and slightly sprained his ankle. It did not seriously inconvenience him then, but on Feb. 5, while at Litchfield, just before entering the church, the same ankle, the right one, received another severe injury, the Bishop stepping upon something which gave under his foot. Four weeks ago erysipelas set in, and inflamation followed. Despite the most careful medical attendance a low form of typhoid fever followed, from which he is now suffering. On the 9th he was reported as very low and rapidly failing, on Monday morning (May 15,) we had the following telegram from Rev. Dr. C. A. Van Anda: "Bishop Foss slightly better. Physicians encourged. He is very low, but evidently slightly stronger than yesterday."—Central.

The Cincinnati Gazette says: "There is not a criminal in Cincinnati, of high or low degree; not the keeper of a disreputable house; not a street walker; not a gambler; not a thief; not a tramp; not a highwayman, that is not on the side of the saloon keepers who are combined to defeat the laws."

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

C. Angrum, Comite: "Our Sunday-school is getting along nicely. We have five teachers."

A. J. Ford, Houma: "Our church here is being blessed greatly by the Lord. The church at every service is crowded. We are having a protracted meeting, with twenty-five penitents since we started. Out of that number there are four who have found Christ."

Stephen Priestley, Union Chapel: "I find a people with great faith and courage, still trying to finish their large church. We hope to accomplish it this year, with the help of the good Lord and our friends. Our revival was a success, with seventeen souls converted to Christ, and thirty who have joined on probation. Our Sabbath-school is healthy, and has fine singing on every Sabbath. Many of the adults attend the school. For the purpose of working on our church the members and friends of the Church rallied on the first Sunday in May, (7) and we collected over $316. Our work will commence soon. We have been favored with sermons from the following ministers this month: S. Osborne, P. King, R. Beal, T. Montgomery, A. Albert. Pray for our success."

The Church Extension Society have granted to our people at Live Oak, a donation of two hundred dollars, towards their new church.

TEXAS.

G. Bragner, Denison: "I am doing all I can to build up a church here. We have a lot and the deed for it. My Sunday-school is good."

S. Smith, Belton: "When I reached this charge I obtained an agreement by the members to contribute one dollar each for improvements. There is now a parsonage for preachers to live in when they are sent here. It is good sized and worth about $200."

W. H. Jackson, San Felipe: "Rev. F. C. Moore held our second conference. The brethren were prompt and their reports were thrilling. A new church in this place has been named Downey's chapel. There are three Sunday-schools on the circuit with 198 scholars; collection for elder was $10.20."

John Jackson, Clarksville: "I have added to the church this year, eight persons. The times are hard, and there have been many deaths. My church is a flat top box house and the people desire a new building. If the crops are good we will be able to do something. Bros. C. C. Pierson and J. B. McCulloch, are superintendents of the Sunday-school, and doing good work."

D. W. Tucker, Lavernia: "Since the visit of Elder Henson the work has been growing, I have raised by subscription at Stephenson's colony for the church $18,10, and we are still at work. Have also raised $19,90 for the Conference Seminary. I intend this shall not be the fourth of what we raise during the year. Pray for my success."

P. Carmichael, Victoria: "Elder Henson met a large representation of brethren in quarterly conference. We listened to an able sermon from W. A. Fortson at 3 p. m., and from G. J. Starnes at 7 p. m. Elder's collection was $26,30. There were many visitors and we had a pleasant session."

J. C. Mays, Cuero: "We have about seventeen members here, having no place to resort for worship but the public school house. This is about fifty yards from the Baptist Church, and is uncomfortable. We had expected to have a house up before this, but the failure of crops has prevented it. There are sixty-five members on the work; some need a little more oil in their lamps. Elder Henson visited us, battling for the Lord. Pray for us."

ARKANSAS.

J. P. Mack, Little Rock: "I am still attending Walden Seminary, and ride fifteen to twenty miles on Saturdays to visit every point on my circuit. We have held profitable meetings, and are preparing for a grand time on Children's Day. God bless the cause of our Church."

MISSISSIPPI.

W. B. Kendrick, Atlanta: "I have got my work in fine condition, with fine Sunday-schools and good congregations. Received seven in full connection. I am repairing two of my churches, and will build one new one this year. The members are all coming to my support, and working like brethren, and all the official boards (God bless them), they mean business this year. I have not missed an appointment since I took hold of the circuit, for punctuality is the key that unlocks the door for a good congregation. I have to stand over the anvil from Monday noon until Friday noon, and my studying is done at night and in the saddle; but it requires work to get to heaven. Fraternity is taking shape. Ostracism is now in this country very unpopular, especially with the laity. Some few of our brother preachers turn on the stream a little, through policy, but the best remedy, I think, is true and simon-pure religion. Pray for your servant and his work."

D. W. Calvert, Starkville: "We took a collection here on Sunday, April 23, of $50, to pay back to the Church Extension Society money loaned to build a church at this place. We have built a belfry upon the church, which cost $[illegible]."

TENNESSEE.

J. B. Marbrey, Brownsville: "My second quarterly conference closed with glorious results. Elder J. P. Price held a Sunday-school institute with much credit to the cause, and on Saturday, in Key Chapel, Bro. Wm. Dwegans, of Bell [illegible] [illegible] The trustees reported they had 3000 feet of lumber to improve the church in the country and had $24 on hand to plaster the church in town, and are doing all they can in making ready for our annual conference. Our people are much encouraged in having the conference here. They paid the preacher $41, the presiding elder $10 15, raised for missions $3, Freedmen's Aid Society $3 15, the other [illegible] ten cents each. Seventy-two members partook of the Lord's Supper. All persons are pleased with Elder Price; he is wide awake to the interests of our Church, and his sermons and lectures are like good seed sown in good ground. Seven joined our church, baptized three, read into full connection eight. Our Sunday schools are growing at each church. Brethren, pray for me."

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

Notes from Waco.

MR. EDITOR—The Seventh Session of the Waco District Conference convened, in Waco, April 13th, 1882. Rev. S. Gates the presiding elder being absent, the Secretary of the last conference, Rev. H. Swann, called the roll. Nearly all the brethren being present, Rev. B. F. Smith was elected Chairman pro tem. After opening exercises, committees were appointed and time fixed. Friday morning Rev. S. Gates and family arrived. At the second session reports from local preachers, exhorters, district stewards, class leaders and Sunday-school superintendents were called for and read with interest. During third days' session a communication from J. J. H. Dozier was received and after some debate referred to a committee of five. The presiding elder then read his report, which was encouraging: there was several new churches in course of erection and a general improvement at nearly every point. The pastors' reports were gratifying, showing a spirit of a revival at nearly every charge, and the temporal work in rapid progress. The afternoon was devoted to brief lectures on Sunday-school work, by Revs. B. F. Smith and H. Swann. Dallas was the choice of the conference for its next session in Septerber. The Sunday-school was addressed by Revs. P. Gates and H. Swann. At 11 o'clock, Rev. H. Swann preached on water baptism; the sermon was full of thought and power. At 3 o'clock S. Gates on baptism of the Holly Ghost. The Lord's Supper was administered to 212 communicants. We can say the witness of the power of God was felt in every heart. Rev. P. Gates gave us another rousing sermon at night. In connection with the District Conference, a week before its sitting, our worthy pastor, Rev. B. F. Smith, commenced a protracted meeting in which, I am glad to say, up to date of this writing, we have been blessed to see forty-eight souls happily converted, and fourteen accessions to the Church. All that have been converted have joined the church. We are only sorry that this is his last year with us, as he has served us his full time, and has not only been a shepherd by name but one in deed and truth. He is beloved by all.

The Austin Seminary.

MR. EDITOR: I wish to say a few words in favor of the conference seminary at Austin. The students are in a progressing condition, and seem to be prospering. Mr. and Mrs. G. O. Richardson are taking great pains in trying to advance the cause of education. The spring term will cease about the 30th of May. We think that the spring term has been conducted to advantage, and our teachers have discharged their duties fully toward each student. Mr. G. O. Richardson is an efficient teacher, and understands his duties thoroughly.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

SECOND QUARTER. Lesson ix. May 28, 1882.
PRECEDING CHRIST. (Mark viii, 34-ix, 1).
(Condensed from the Western.)

Jesus was still in the vicinity of Cæsarea Philippi. When alone with his disciples, en route from one village to another, he had questioned them about the people's and their own opinions concerning himself. The following lesson is a fitting sequel to his annunciation of his own death, as given in last lesson, [illegible] general in its character as to be applicable to all the people as well as to his disciples. They were with him, and he told them as he went to death, so must they, in [illegible] generation, likewise understand that a similar fate awaits [illegible]. Or, if some escape yet the [illegible] great, and the spirit [illegible] equal to bearing the worst. The general principle applies to all Christians, to whom the will of God must be supreme, at the expense of every privation and suffering if required. Whoever is not prepared to follow Christ in the sense indicated, but weakly draws back, and spares himself these sufferings, virtually renounces Christ, and in eternity will lose his soul. In gaining the world the soul becomes the bond-servant of sin, from whose power the person can not release it, and is held by the law of God, subject to divine penalties, from which he can not redeem it. But there is a Redeemer, though this thought hardly emerges here. The value and alternative destinies of the soul are there brought forward to impress the necessity of deciding aright the great question about following Christ. During the lifetime of some there the kingdom, now so seemingly weak and despised that no one cared to oppose its cause, would exhibit a powerful manifestation. This began in the outpouring of Pentecost; was signally advanced in the destruction of Jerusalem, in which the old dispensation passed away; in the fruitful labors of the apostles and others; and will close in the final coming of the Son of man in judgment.

DEATHS.

Sister Viney Hopson, aged about 60 years, departed this life May 14, 1882. She was a faithful member of our Church. She said she had finished her work and was ready to go at any time. She leaves a husband and several children to mourn her loss.

Enterprise, Miss., May 17, 1882.

Brother Stephen Minor died April 30, 1882, aged 55 years. He was a native of Tennessee, a member of the old Baptist Church of New Orleans, and has been striving in the cause of the Lord for 29 years; and when he came to press his dying pillow the last words he said were that all was right with him and the Master and he was ready to go, and was prepared for death.

Sister Rosa Rayne suffered for twelve months, but never murmured. She died shouting praises to the Lord. H. PRIMM.

Mrs. Sarah A. Burton, wife of Rev. T. J. Burton, passed to the glory beyond, May 10, 1882, at Holly Springs, Miss., in her 28th year. Her mother, Mrs. Lucinda Harroll, brought her remains to Grenada, where her dear relatives and many friends accompanied them to their last resting place. She was converted in 1870, and promptly united with the M. E. Church, of which she remained a devout, exemplary and useful member. Thoroughly consecrated to God, her zeal for His glory and the salvation was accompanied with an uncompromising and fearless antagonism toward sin and the follies of the world; and yet her meekness, gentleness and sacrifice for others, her untiring devotion to the cause of Christ, her patience in suffering and love for all that was good, true and noble, greatly endeared her to all who knew her best. She leaves a husband and three little children to mourn her loss. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of His saints."
A. M. TROTTER.

John W. Austin was born in Clinton Co., Ohio, June 4, 1840, and died in Nashville, Tenn., April 20, 1882. He served in the army during the war as private, and for meritorious services was advanced to the rank of first lieutenant. He was wounded in the battle of Champion Hill; was again in active service and was taken prisoner at Missionary Ridge, and spent nearly two years in Southern prisons, from which he was released at the end of the war, a mere physical wreck. He suffered much from the effects of his wound and treatment while in prison. He united with the M. E. Church while a child, was converted when young, and lived a faithful, consistent Christian life. His fidelity to duty was a marked characteristic. This was true in all relations of life—the smallest as well as the more important duties were most carefully discharged. His religious experience was rich, clear and full. He held various offices in the Church and had the fullest confidence of his brethren. He was a wise counsellor, a firm friend, and faithful and affectionate in all the relations of life. He stood firmly by the Church of his choice in Nashville, where he had lived since 1866, doing, in his quiet way, what he could for her advancement. At the time of his death he was superintendent of the Capitol. It is said he never used profane or obscene language, nor used tobacco or intoxicating liquor. He was for ten years a trustee of the Central Tennessee College, and dared to have convictions on the education of the colored people and do what he could to promote it. He died in peace, his only trust in Jesus.

Handbook on Mormonism

Every mail brings letters from the East to the missionaries in Utah asking for documents, facts, etc., to enlighten the people on the subject of Mormonism. To collect these documents and answer these letters is a great tax on the time and the purses of the missionaries. But it is all important that this information be scattered broadcast over the country, and that the information be so reliable as to secure confidence. Hence a Handbook on Mormonism has been compiled by Prof. J. M. Coyner and Rev. R. G. McNeice. It has over 100 pages, octavo size, bound in paper covers. The following is the table of contents:

Origin of Mormonism.
Letters on Mormonism, showing the organization, the plans, purposes and morality of the Mormon Church.
The Christian Conflict against Mormonism.
The Mormon Situation.
Polygamy.
The Endowment Expose.
Blood Atonement. Extracts from Brigham Young's Sermons, and J. D. Lee's Confession.
Are the Gentiles of Utah a Marauding Set.
Mormonism vs. Jurisprudence.
The Mountain Meadow Massacre.
Mormonism Exposed.
History of the Mission Work of Episcopal, Methodist, Congregational, and Presbyterian Churches.
An Appeal to the Christian World in behalf of Utah.

We believe this book will be of great value to those who wish to obtain a correct knowledge of the Mormon problem. And the only object in its publication is to scatter such information as will enable every American citizen to fight a good fight in the coming moral contest in favor of a unified Christian home and of free American institution.

This book will be sent postpaid on receipt of 25 cents.

No. 56 USE THE [illegible] St. Charles St.
TRADE MARK

A WONDERFUL [illegible] SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.

These Glasses are chemically treated in the process of manufacture, and possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analyzed by American and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and can in some cases restore the sight if used in time, but in no case can the eye become impaired by their use for the following reasons:
1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye, completely doing away with that tiresome sensation that is usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours' use.
2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.
3. The chemicals keep the glasses cold, and the result is that the optic nerves are always cool, doing away with any feverish sensation to the eye.
4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, with no distressing or tiresome sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.
The MEDICATED GLASSES are all stamped on the frame H. HOUSAH, Medicated. NONE GENUINE UNLESS STAMPED.

A Remarkable Discovery.

A REAL SKIN CURE.

THERE IS ONLY ONE AND THAT WITH SIMPLE NAME.

Beware of impostures, pirates, or any old articles which now suddenly claim to be best. They have been tried and found wanting, while this has been proved a remarkable success.

NO POMPOUS NAME.

This curative needs no pompous or incomprehensible title of Greek or Latin to sustain it, but its simple English name appeals directly to the common sense of the people. And the people are signally manifesting their appreciation of this frankness by selecting and using Dr. Benson's SKIN CURE in preference to all other professed remedies.

Dr. C. W. Benson has long been well known as a successful physician and surgeon and his life study has been the diseases of the nervous system and of the skin; since he has been persuaded to put his New Remedy and Favorite Prescription as a "Skin Cure" on the market, various things have sprung up into existence, or have woke up from the sleepy state in which they were before, and now claim to be The Great Skin Cure.

Beware of imitation, or the various articles which have been advertised for years or struggled along, having no real sold or merit on the public, that now endeavor to keep head above water by advertising themselves as "The Great Skin Cure." None is genuine and reliable except Dr. C. W. Benson's Skin Cure. Each package and bottle bears his likeness. Internal and external remedy, two bottles in one package. Price $1.00, get at your druggists.

Relief for all Overworked Brains.

CAUSE AND CURE.

Dr. C. W. Benson's Celery and Chamomile Pills are valuable for school children who suffer from nervous headaches caused by an overworked brain in their studies, and for all classes of hard brain workers whose overtasked nervous centers need repair and sedation. Nervous tremor, weakness and paralysis are being daily cured by these pills. They correct costiveness, but are not purgative. Price, 50 cents, or six boxes for $2.50, postage free to any address. For sale by all druggists. Depot Baltimore, Md., where the Doctor can be addressed. Letters of inquiry freely answered.

Mrs. Mattie Copeland, an elderly colored woman, was tried in the Newark Special Sessions yesterday on a charge of larceny, John Fisher, colored, alleging that she had robbed him of $3. The old lady defended herself, and proved that it is not always true that the person that who has himself or herself for a lawyer is a fool. She cross-examined the witness and broke down the case against her so effectually that she was promptly acquitted. The Court complimented her by saying that she had managed her case quite as well, perhaps, as if she had an experienced lawyer. She said she had only visited Newark occasionally, but every time she got on Jersey soil she got into trouble, but she intended to shake the dust of Jersey from her feet forever. She left court a very happy woman.—N. Y. Herald.

In the Democratic caucus to consider the South Carolina contested election case of Mackey vs. O'Connor, Mr. Kenna, of West Virginia, offered a resolution that no consideration of the case be allowed, but that Democrats filibuster from the very beginning. Ellis, of Louisiana, offered a resolution that discussion be allowed to such an extent as to acquaint the country with the full nature of the case. It was voted down by seven majority, and Kenna's resolution was adopted.

Advice to Consumptives.

On the appearance of the first symptoms—as general debility, loss of appetite, pallor, chilly sensations, followed by night sweats and cough, prompt measures of relief should be taken. Consumption is scrofulous disease of the lungs; therefore use the great anti-scrofulous or blood-purifier and strength-restorer, Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery." Superior to Cod-liver oil as a nutritive, and unsurpassed as a pectoral. For weak lungs, spitting of blood, and kindred affections it has no equal. Sold by druggists. For Dr. Pierce's treatise on consumption send two stamps. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

For Wakefulness at night, there is no better remedy. During the change of life no female should be without it. It quiets the Nervous System and gives rest, comfort and nature's sweet sleep.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Alcoholism, Drunkenness and the habit of Opium Eating. These degrading habits are by far the worst evils that have ever befallen suffering humanity. Thousands die annually from these noxious drugs. The drunkard drinks liquor not because he likes it, but for the pleasure of drinking and treating his friends, little thinking that he is on his road to ruin. Like the Opium Eater, he first uses the drug in small quantities as a harmless antidote. The soothing influence of the drug takes strong hold upon its victim, leading him on to his own destruction. The habits of Opium Eating and Liquor Drinking are precisely what eating is to alimentiveness, as over-eating first inflames the stomach, which redoubles its cravings until it paralyzes both the stomach and appetite. So every drink of liquor or dose of opium, instead of satisfying, only adds to its fierce fires, until it consumes the vital force and then itself. Like the gluttonous tape-worm, it cries: "Give, give, give!" but never enough until its own rapacity devours itself. Samaritan Nervine gives instant relief in all such cases. It produces sleep, quiets the nerves, builds up the nervous system, and restores body and mind to a healthy condition.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Nervous Dyspepsia, Palpitation of the Heart, Asthma, Bronchitis, Scrofula, Syphilis, diseases of the Kidneys and all diseases of the urinary organs. Nervous debility, caused by the indiscretions of youth, permanently cured by the use of this invaluable remedy. To you, young, middle-aged and old men, who are covering your sufferings as with a mantle by silence, look up, you can be saved by timely efforts, and make ornaments to society, and jewels in the crown of your Maker, if you will. Do not keep this a secret longer, until it saps your vitals, and destroys both body and soul. If you are thus afflicted, take DR. RICHMOND'S Samaritan Nervine. It will restore your shattered nerves, arrest premature decay, impart tone and energy to the whole system.

DEAR EDITOR: I wish to inquire for my daughter Mary Ann. I was sold from her in 1846. At that time we both belonged to Daniel Priest, who lived in ——, Montgomery county, Ky. I was sold to Daniel Bains, who lived in Bourbon Co., Ky. Afterward I was sold to a trader named Pierce Griffin. He carried me to Louisiana, on Bayou Plaquemines, twenty-five miles below Baton Rouge. My name at that time was Emily Priest; now it is Emily Wilson. The last time I heard from my daughter she was in Natchez, Miss., living with a doctor whose first name was John, last name I never heard. Address me at Topeka, Kansas, 504 Monroe street. 21-m6t

MR. EDITOR: I wish to inquire for my father, Thomas Beankum. The man that owned him is Ben Beankum, who lived at Kentucky, Hickman county, near the line of Tennessee. MR. EDITOR: I wish to inquire for my mother, who was taken from Davison county, North Carolina, in 1838. Her name was Charity Smith. She belonged to Major Geo. Smith, and he sold her to a trader. We learned the trader carried her to Georgia and sold her to a Mr. Fulwider. Her sister was Sarah Ann; grandmother was Millie Smith; aunt, Mary Smith; uncle, Alex. Smith. When mother was sold from me I was only two years old. After the death of old Major Smith, all of these persons as property fell to his daughter, Miss Anna. She married John Smith, and he brought us to Scott county, Miss., twenty-six years ago. Father is James Madison Moore. Address me at Forest, Miss.

Cure for Small-Pox.

"I am willing to risk my reputation as a public man," wrote Edward Hine to the Liverpool Mercury, "if the worst case of small-pox cannot be cured in three days, simply by the use of cream of tartar. One ounce of cream of tartar dissolved in a pint of water, drank at intervals when cold, is a certain, never failing remedy. It has cured thousands, never leaves a mark, never causes blindness, and avoids tedious lingering."

Invalids suffering from sluggishness of the liver, feeble action of the heart, a feeling of suffocation and debility arising from various causes, find sure relief in Brown's Iron Bitters.

The dream of a great British state in South Africa, under one central government, has apparently been abandoned. In 1879 Natal was advanced in dignity as a separate colony, and last year the Transvaal was made virtually independent. Now it is announced that Basuto Land, annexed to Cape Colony in 1868, has been abandoned by the Colonial Government and turned over to the Imperial Government. This may be the first step toward abandoning all the purely native districts adjacent to Basuto Land. The latter has an area of 7,000 square miles, and a population of 127,000.

A physician in Baltimore, Md., says: "I consider Brown's Iron Bitters the truest and best medicinal tonic for lost health and general debility that can be compounded from our present knowledge of drugs."

AYER'S

is a purely vegetable bitter and powerful tonic, and is warranted a speedy and certain cure for Fever and Ague, Chills and Fever, Intermittent or Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, and all malarial disorders. In miasmatic districts, the rapid pulse, coated tongue, thirst, lassitude, loss of appetite, pain in the back and loins, and coldness of the spine and extremities, are only premonitions of severer symptoms which terminate in the ague paroxysm, succeeded by high fever and profuse perspiration.

It is a startling fact, that quinine, arsenic, and other poisonous minerals form the basis of most of the "Fever and Ague Preparations," "Specifics," "Syrups," and "Tonics," in the market. The preparations made from these mineral poisons, although they are palatable, and may break the chill, do not cure, but leave the malarial and their own drug poison in the system, producing quinism, dizziness, ringing in the ears, headache, vertigo, and other disorders more formidable than the disease they were intended to cure. AYER'S AGUE CURE thoroughly eradicates these noxious poisons from the system, and always cures the severest cases. It contains no quinine, mineral, or any thing that could injure the most delicate patient; and its crowning excellence, above its certainty to cure, is that it leaves the system as free from disease as before the attack.

For Liver Complaints, AYER'S AGUE CURE, by direct action on the liver and biliary apparatus, drives out the poisons which produce these complaints, and stimulates the system to a vigorous, healthy condition.

We warrant it when taken according to directions.

that "er er" often enough to fence in a moderate-sized cow-pen or turnip patch. I can't do justice to this man and his style, for, to be appreciated, it must be heard; but I will try to give a sentence or two. "My breeth-ring-er, I stand before you-er to-day-er to speak-er of death-er, hell-er and judgment-er. My lovely, dying congregation, we are all one foot in the grave-er and the other all but-er." etc.

The wicked, uncircumcised ears would look for anything ludicrous and amusing, and so they caught at the last sentence and said "they liked the other foot best, as it was all butter."

Another noted divine (?) was one day preaching from the text "Marvel not," and was counfounding his text with the innocent games of marbles that the boys played at. Said he, as he warmed his subject: "Breeth-ring and sister-ing, Christ said marvel not, and therefore, we should not marvel." And continued: "Marveling leads-er to lying-er, for, as I 'rid' along to-er my appintment-er to-day-er, I passed by-er a squad of men-er marveling, and one said, 'Thar! I'm fatter!' and, my breethring-er, he was the leanest and lankest-er man in the crowd-er. So you see-er that marveling-er leads-er to lying-er." Sometimes this suffix was sounded as ah, and each sentence was profusely interlarded with ah! and ah! and ah!

It was used in reading Scripture and sacred poetry, and was regarded as a necessary part in worship and prayer. Often have I heard the ministry of that day read the hymns introducing these "grace notes" according to taste or habit:

"Awake, my soul, stretch every nerve,
And press with vigor on-ah;
A heavenly race demands thy zeal
And an immortal crown-ah."

Then there was a sing-song cadence in the voice that was very acceptable to the hearers, which can no more be described on paper than could the sound of the wind (it was mostly wind), and unless my young readers will pay me a visit, they must lose this part or draw on their imagination for it. Brother Hoyt, you can come to see me; and when you meet them at the Associations this fall you can tell them for me.

To persons (mostly primitive and ignorant ones) this style of preaching had a charm that made it more prized and appreciated than the best sermons of our most learned divines. If one of the latter preached for them, they invariably went fast to sleep and didn't appreciate the effort at all; but when "their man" preached, they listened, "except inspired," and came so into sympathy that they would sway their bodies to and fro and shout and give expressions like this: "Glory!" "Amen!" "Bless the Lord!"

I have heard a story of a D.D. who once went up into the mountains about Cæsar's Head, in his flight from the mosquitoes and "Yellow Jack" of Charleston, and took another D.D. from Greenville along with him. As they spent Sunday there, they inquired for a [illegible] Church, and, finding one [illegible], went over. The pastor, an old-time Baptist preacher, invited [illegible] preachers to "exercise" for him, and it was agreed that Dr. W. should preach and Dr. B. follow. The first named preached a charming sermon—one of the best, [illegible] of thought and eloquence, de[illegible] most chaste language, [illegible] which he was famous; and the [illegible] mountaineers, not used to [illegible] straightforward talking, just [illegible] sitting down in the chair [illegible] his neighbors," all went [illegible] he had gotten [illegible] with his introduction and [illegible] on till he had finished his [illegible] my brethren."

[illegible] B., who was remarkable for [illegible] practical, good, hard [illegible] as well as theology, [illegible] and rose, and [illegible] hymn in the "holy [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] people; then, [illegible] upside [illegible] hymn, he pro[illegible] the people: "My [illegible] as I [illegible] and the dog was a-gainin' on the varmint-ah fast-ah. And just then I forgot that it was Sunday-ah, and I slapped my hands-ah and said 'sick him-ah; and he cotcht him-ah right thar-ah." By this time the audience was in intensest sympathy with the speaker, and, as he in his description, clapped his hands, an old sister sprang up and clapped her hands, and shouted, vociferously: "Glory! Glory! Glory!"

In those days it was common for the preacher in warm weather to pull off his coat, lay it over the rail of the pulpit, and then "go at it" in true rail-splitting style. As he became interested, and grew warm and interlarded generously with "ah," he would spit on the floor of the pulpit, scrape it with his foot, fling his hands and arms wildly, pound the Bible with his fists, sometimes spit in his hands and rub them, and push back his shirt-sleeves, and loose his collar, and grow more and more nervous and noisy, till he would have the people in profoundest sympathy, not with the sentiment, but with the sound; and the climax would always come by a general shouting and audible expressions of approbation and enjoyment. —Baptist Courier.

The Indians Again.

Editor of The National Baptist:

Permit me to thank you for your excellent and timely article setting forth so clearly our governmental injustice and the cruelty of our present relations to the red race. Thank you also for calling attention to that true Indian picture by Nast in Harper's Weekly, to the new and able pamphlet by Hon. J. W. M. Newlin on the Indian question, and for your present and many past kind allusions to the work of our Association. But most, we thank you for your strong appeal for governmental "honesty and justice" toward Indians, and, therefore, for the abolition of the present Indian policy which, by its oppressions, make paupers, criminals, and slaves of Indians, and is thus an effectual prevention to their general civilization and Christianization.

If a Republican government is the best, purest, and nearest Christian of all forms of government, is it not the best for all races among us in our own Republic? If education, business, responsibility, and thrift were in the case of the negro necessitated by his enfranchisement, why would they not also be in the case of the Indian? If to endow man with the status, privileges, and responsibilities of citizenship is most surely to elevate him, why not begin the cure of the pauper-criminal-slavish-reservation system by granting American citizenship to every Indian who desires it? Of these, there are already many, as the late reports of Secretaries of the Interior, and of other officials prove. If sure legal tenure of property is an inspiration to all that is best in man regarding this life, why not allow such sureness to the Indian? Why, if there is sincerity in our professions of right feeling toward Indians, should we longer practically ignore the fact that he is human, having human characteristics, emotions, and capabilities?

You refer, Mr. Editor, to the present Indian war in Arizona, and suppose the occasion of this to be the usual "encroachment, oppression, and breaking of faith on the part of the whites towards the Indians." Alas! it is the same dreadful record written again and imperishably, as so often before, by Christian America in blood, and against herself. And this means that each Christian man and woman bears and must bear a definite share of blood-responsibility, if not praying, speaking, voting, or acting against that policy whose oppression necessarily occasions these Indian outbreaks. The present one in Arizona was prefaced by the usual wrongs. I quote from the Philadelphia Inquirer:

The facts in this case are briefly these: In 1849, the military commander in this region was convinced that large gold deposits were to be found on it, and he openly advocated the policy of prompt extermination of the Indians as the only way of obtaining possession of it. From that date, until 1862 [illegible] policy was pursued unflinch[illegible] General Carleton's orders [illegible] were: "All Indian [illegible] whenever or wher[illegible] If the Indians send [illegible] then you have [illegible] not deserving punishment. The avowed purpose was to exterminate them to get possession of the mining district.

In 1860, but one thousand Apaches were left. The commander writes: "I have encouraged the troops to root them out as they would wild animals. Since my last report, over two hundred have been killed." In 1871, about three hundred Apaches assembled at Camp Grant, stating that they had no home, as, wherever they went they were hunted like vermin by the troops. The officer in command, Lieutenant Whitman, set them to farm work for his post, for which he gave them half rations. More than five hundred Apaches came in and went to work eagerly. Lieutenant Whitman says: "I respected men who, ignorant and naked, were ashamed to lie or steal; and for women who, untaught, held their virtue above all price." On April 30, 1871, a band of the citizens of Tucson (who sent the despatches the other day) set upon this peaceful Indian camp, killed and mutilated women, men, and babies at the breast; in many cases, beating out their brains with clubs and stones.

Since 1871, other expeditions have been sent out against the Apaches, until there are but 578 of them remaining.

A year ago, extensive deposits of coal were found upon the San Carlos Reservation, these being of peculiar value where fuel is so scarce. At once "miners and prospectors poured in," and were, "with great difficulty, excluded." Then followed various efforts, lawfully, to obtain possession of the coal. "Appeals," "requests," and "propositions," asked exchange of these lands for others, and finally, the agent secured from the Indians a fifty years' lease "of all coal or other mineral lands" on the reservation. But this magnanimous consent—magnanimous because, as they knew, perilous to themselves—did not dis-possess the Indians, and so "the department" promptly disapproved the contract, and proposed to "remove" the tribe, though "it was admitted that there was no other place in the territory where they would be less in the way of railroads and of white settlements." When it is remembered that to all the outrages of the past have been added the fact that five times within ten years their land-area had been reduced, till they had but 1,600 acres of tillable land left, and that the threatened "removal"—most hated oppression of all—would not only rob them of property, but forever, by unavoidable rebellion to armed tyranny, put "out of the way" of living white men a large proportion of the remainder of the tribe, one cannot wonder at the present outbreak. What a spectacle it presents!

Can American Christians be silent, inactive, when so great wrongs are done by the government which represents us, and for whose deeds we are responsible, since they could not be done but for our silence and inaction? What shall be our answer to him who declared that "for this purpose he was manifested, to destroy iniquity," and who himself said, "As my Father hath sent me, so send I you." Is there not practical Christianity enough among the ten millions of American Christians, to "destroy" the "iniquity" of our national Indian policy, and to "bring in righteousness" for but a quarter of a million native Americans? Geographical remoteness from the white race is no longer possible anywhere within our national limits, and, therefore, enforced "removals" of Indians are as foolish as wicked. But utter remoteness from national pillage, murder, and armed ejectment, from their own governmentally-assured reservations, should be absolutely certain to every Indian tribe among us. And, if this cannot be, let us, at least, not applaud our Colonial Fathers for choosing to die as Freemen, rather than live as slaves, and yet, with the same lips, call the red man "savage," because he will not meekly see his property possessed by another, his home wantonly invaded, and his wife and children starve, that thieves may thrive; nor let American Christians insult his untutored conscience by appearing before the red man to teach him the religion whose every precept condemns ourselves.

A. S. QUINTON,

France is still in great trouble about the territory in Africa south of her newly acquired regency of Tunis as well as that of Algiers. The borders of the desert afford a great many hiding places for the wild tribes of Arabs who are continually making raids toward the [illegible] and annoying the army posts [illegible] the peaceful settlers near them.

The Needs of the Colored People.

Education and religion are the only things that will elevate and advance our interests as a people and lift us from the dark night of ignorance to the true light of an intelligent manhood. With us the great question is, how is this work to be done. Can the negro work out his own educational salvation? We answer, no. For full 245 years an awful night of darkness has been upon our ancestors. They were held as chattels, bought and sold like beasts of burden, till nearly every element of rational manhood was crushed out of them. Will the nation be able to accomplish this work? We fear not. Much less the States in their single capacity. To the question who are to educate the negro the writer of this paper has but one answer and he thinks that all of those who take the time to look this question full in the face will come to the same conclusion. The Negro, if ever educated, this work must be done largely by the Christian Church, and here the Old Mother Church must lead the van. She proclaims by words and works that the Negro shall be educated. No organization in this country is doing so much for our education as the Freedmen's Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Our emancipation was a great and grand work. All honor to the heroes who made us free, but double honor to the noble men who are laboring for our education, for emancipation without education would be more of a curse than a blessing. It is ours to accept with gratitude the God-given opportunity, and improve upon all of our blessings and make ourselves a name of honor among the nations of earth. The Old Mother Church comes here to Houston, our own dear city, and, at the expense of $7,500 opens up a school where our own people can receive all the benefits of a classical education, and thus lift themselves up to a high and honorable position. We say then, God bless the Freedmen's Aid Society, our friend and benefactor. Now my Christian friends upon the Houston District, come and help us; come with your hundreds, your fifties, your tens; give as your circumstances will admit; give lovingly; give as unto the Lord, and His blessings will be upon you and the children of your love in after years will praise you.

Life of a Student.

BY REV. L. W. ELKINS

No error, perhaps, is more generally cherished than that the life of a student is one of refined ease and pleasure—a life possessing everything that is desirable, not marred by the discouragements which are attendant upon other vocations. This impression, doubtless, arises from a misapprehension of the student's position, of the object which he has in view, and the means by which he proposes to accomplish that object.

If we consider the sacrifices which he is obliged to make, and the natural inclinations which he is compelled to overcome, we shall find that no other class of persons is more deserving of our sympathy, encouragement and commendation.

In the very vigor of youth he tears himself away from the family fireside, from all the luxuries of life, from the home of his childhood, it may be from the alluring pleasures of society, from the ties which so strongly bind man to the place of his nativity, to become the devotee of knowledge. Shut up in his narrow apartment, from early dawn till the last rays of the setting sun are withdrawn, from day to day, from week to week, from year to year, he pores over difficult tasks and slowly wends his weary way through the intricate labyrinths of science—now pouring out upon some difficult problem every effort of his mind, which he can possibly command; and now with careworn, though youthful look, exulting over some newly made conquest. Now penetrating the caverns of the earth in search of hidden beauties; and now soaring heavenward, he holds sweet communion with the planetory worlds, while his firmly knit brow, his mind, heart and soul gushing through fixed eyes, speak in eloquent language of his devotion to his studies. When his midnight lamp fails to perform its double office, with a mind reeling beneath the burden of his labors, he seeks his couch to revel in feverish dreams of future bliss. Mental labor having exhausted his physical strength, he becomes pale and emaciated, yet he struggles on with victory ever looming up before his vision, inspired to action, it may be, by the hope of outstripping his classmates, or by the allurement of fame and honor hidden in the deep recesses of an impenetrable future. What is nobler, more worthy of admiration, more commendable than a life thus devoted to the pursuits of true greatness—a youth spent in manfully combating the alluring temptations and delusive pleasures of early life? Yet how often do we find those whose minds are poisoned by an insatiable thirst for wealth, and who, having acquired a pretty sum, imagine themselves raised upon a royal eminence, sneering contemptuously at the less ostentatious, though far more ennobling position of the student. But it is the sneer of envy, excited by a consciousness of inferiority. From this class the student receives no favorable consideration, nor need he desire it. The motives which prompt him to action are of a higher nature; and while the favorable opinions of others should not be despised, those of the good only are desirable.

Accustomed, as he is, to constant mental exercise, his opinions are the result of calm deliberation. He considers life a great battle-field, and expects to meet its difficulties; hence he is prepared to smile with indifference, perhaps commiseration, upon the hollow pretentions of pompous dignity. But the student's pleasures are also great. The consciousness of self-improvement; the unselfish friendship and warm attachments of students' life are enjoyments which the selfish world of business can neither experience nor understand.

Letter from Thibodaux.

MR. EDITOR—Allow me a space to let your many readers know what we are doing in Thibodaux in the way of building up the cause of Christ. We have been holding a protracted meeting which, so far, thank God, has been fruitful of much good, adding twenty-three converts to the Church, fifteen of whom are young men. We are still going on with the good work, animated by the spirit of God. Rev. Wm. Smith, of Donaldsonville, and Rev. Milton Spyies, of the Baptist Chuch, were with us two nights, doing yeomen service. We are having a glorious time.

The Sabbath-school is in a prosperous condition, and anticipate having soon a grand union picnic in conjunction with the Sabbath-schools of Bros. Carr and Hunter.

Our pastor, Rev. F. T. Chinn, has been a powerful instrument in building up the cause of Christ through the grand old Methodist Church. His thirty-fourth birthday came on the 24th of April, on which occasion the stewardesses presented him, through Sister M. C. LeBlanc, one of their number, a fine suit of spring clothes, after appropriate remarks.

Next came the Sunday-school (of which he is Supt.) with roses and other mementoes expressive of their love and appreciation, nor was this all, the cry was "Still they come" for they were soon followed by Sister Hester Hill with a fine clock; Josephine Wilson, a hat; Jane Taylor, slippers; Annie McCrossie, a table-cloth of her own make; Mary Hollins and C. Hart, handkerchiefs; Bro. and Sister Henry Bell, shoes and umbrella; E. Walker, socks. This, I think, is pretty good evidence of the estimation in which our pastor is held by his charge.

We expect to have our pro rata for the Gilbert Haven School of Theology ready by the middle of August, next. We are sincerely thankful to our worthy Bishop Peck, beloved Elder M. Dale, and the conference for sending our pastor back to us. I omitted to mention above that after the presentations to the pastor, he preached and held his large audience entranced for the space of half an hour.

The people at last are becoming to realize the great importance of education, as is evidenced by the flourishing condition of the public school here. Its roll being larger, I think, than ever before, taxing our large and commodious building to its utmost capacity to accommodate the large number of pupils that daily throng its doors.

The water is falling slowly, despondency has given place to hope, and a better feeling pervades all classes. Pray for our success.

E. H. THORNHILL.

Thibodaux, La., May 12th, 1882.

Dr. Buckley and Hartzell in an Insane Asylum.

Dr. Buckley, of the New York Advocate, in writing to his paper from Augusta, Maine, has the following interesting account of a visit to an Insane Asylum. He heads the paragraph:

"SOME STRANGE EXPERIENCES.

While in Augusta I was most outrageously abused, both by men and women, and the most intemperate language used concerning my character and religious connections. The persons who did this were not intoxicated, and frankly expressed their opinions. And some of them were, professedly, Christians. The above may serve as an instance of the way of putting things. Dr. Hartzell was the guest of ex-Governor Morrill, who is a trustee of the State Lunatic Asylum, and invited the Doctor to go out there with him. An invitation sent to me was promptly accepted. And this abuse was received there.

The Superintendent, Dr. Harlon, who has been connected with the institution for thirty-seven years showed us every courtesy, and made the visit exceedingly pleasant. A minister confined there, addressing me and pointing to Dr. Hartzell, said, "You are a Methodist, but he is a gentleman." If Dr. H. had not also been a Methodist, the remark would have been terribly significant. I was told by a lady that I had sunk so low that no one would take care of me but a negro. Hoping to get even with the Doctor, I asked if he was the person who took care of me, but it was denied. At last both he and I were described as the worst products of the lower regions. We remained till the evening, when a grand musical entertainment was given, attended by marching and dancing. The lunatics, to the number of more than 200, were present, and the marching and dancing were done by them. A Quaker trustee of an Asylum, when the matter of allowing dancing was presented for discussion, was expected to oppose it. On the contrary, he rose and said, "I favor it, and it is my opinion that it should be confined wholly within the walls of an Insane Asylum." One of the patients who had abused me in the afternoon was completely won over in the evening by the gift of a lead-pencil.

Giving Rewards in the Sunday School.

While disapproving of prizes in the Sunday-school, we have taken no exceptions to a wise system of rewards. As in accord with our views on this point, Mr. D. C. Taylor, of New York, reports to us his method of stimulating scholars to effort, punctuality, and good behavior. It will be seen that this is calculated to accomplish the result aimed at in prize-giving, while it avoids its possible evil consequences. In his school, Mr. Taylor has established "Sunday-school Bands of Honor," having the following titles and conditions of membership:

BRIGHT AND EARLY BAND.—Those never late during three months and afterwards, nor absent without good cause.

BAND OF GOOD BEHAVIOR.—Those who are attentive, orderly, polite, and gentle every Sunday during three months and afterwards.

BRINGING IN BAND.—Those who bring in one or more new scholars.

BAND OF BENEVOLENCE.—Those who every Sunday, for three months and afterwards, give money to the school, to be used in doing good.

BIBLE BAND.—Those who every week, for three months and afterwards, do their best to study and recite the lessons of the school.

BAND BRIGHTEST AND BEST.—Those who are members of all the other bands. They shall be the superintendent's guard of honor, and in any general entertainment or distribution of gifts shall be entitled to special distinction.

Band membership is forfeited by any failure to comply with the above conditions, and requires a new start,—except in case of absence with good cause. In the latter case, all missed recitations and contributions have to be made good. A roll of each of the bands is kept posted in the school-room. Perhaps other superintendents will feel like trying this bane idea.—S. S. Times

A bill has been passed by the New Jersey Legislature providing that after a jury has been out more than six hours, a verdict signed by nine members shall be considered legal. A similar law ought to be placed on the statute books of every State, then there would be an end to the power of one or two suborned, vicious or obstinate men to defeat the demands of justice in jury trials.—Donaldsonville Chief.

The New Orleans University.

The school year, just closed, has been one of marked prosperity. The University has never, in its history, been so largely attended. 193 students have been in attendance, distributed as follows: Seniors, 2; Juniors, 6; Sophomores, 7; Freshmen, 15; Preparatory, 85; Primary, 82. Full 100 students have been refused admission for the want of room. Could they have been accommodated, we have no doubt that, instead of 193, over 400 students would have been enrolled. The great want of wants is a new building. The present building, being formerly but a small dwelling house, has but four small rooms—one of which is used for a chapel.

The University has no apparatus and scarcely any library. The accommodations for young people, coming from a distance, are so limited and poor, that many of the children of Methodist parents go to other schools in the city. We state this fact with sadness, and with a deep sense of humiliation. We know that the Methodist Church cannot afford to allow other people, in any locality, to educate her young men and women. Of all places in the South, New Orleans is the centre of colored population; hence the best location for a school. Our cry is for better buildings and facilities for the education of these masses. The advanced students in the school are young men and women of great promise. In their training great pains have been taken, and their teachers may justly feel [illegible].

The University graduated its first class in 1878, of three young men and one young lady; its second in 1880, of three young men and one young lady; its third class this year, one young man and one young lady. The work done at this point has settled in the minds of all people the problem of higher education among the Negro race. That problem is no longer an experiment. One of these graduates has entered a school of theology in Chicago, and we are assured, on the very best authority, that his examination would have done credit to any college in the land.

Highway Robbery of Commerce.

The Times-Democrat of last Saturday pointedly makes objection to the bill prepared by the State Board of Health, and reported favorably by legislative committee, as an unjust tax upon commerce. The bill provides for a charge of $30 for every ship, $20 for every bark, $10 for every brig, $7 50 for every schooner, $5 for every steam boat (except towboats), $30 for every steamship, and if inspections are made between sunset and sunrise, the charges to be doubled. The money so obtained to be used to support a quarantine physician and assistant, whose united salaries amount to $7000, to pay boatmen, watchmen, hospital stewards, nurses, etc., necessary to a proper care of the buildings and the sick, men to attend to fumigating vessels, etc. In this inconsiderate and senseless way a small corporation of the medical fraternity have annually driven away commerce from this port. Vessels from healthy ports with clean bills from government consuls, and without a case of contagious disease on board, have been compelled, on a national highway, by agents of a State forbidden by the National constitution to impose a tax on tonnage, to stand and deliver quarantine fees, and to submit to the damage of their cargoes by means of villainous fumes alleged to be disinfectants. We have been surprised that the commercial community should quietly submit to this unreasonable imposition.

There ought to be a strict and efficient quarantine law fully maintained, as the Times-Democrat says, out of the general fund of the State. The interests to be served are mainly local. The Nation through its own officers may take care of itself through the operations of a National Board of Health, and vessels actually infected be required to go to fixed stations before entering the mouths of rivers or harbors.

The Legislature is reminded that a bill of the kind mentioned, if it becomes a law, will do more in a few months to break down commerce than the expenditure of large amounts of capital and the energy of years can do in building it up. One firm has successfully resisted the payment of quarantine tax, because it was illegally levied; and if through undue influences a medical monopoly again attempts to fasten itself upon this unfortunate city, merchants and shipping men should combine as did the men who threw the stamped tea into Boston harbor.

Miss Clara M. Cushman, a young lady who was sent out by the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society to Peking, China, was called upon by one of her correspondents to "tell some ways in which our woman's work is efficient, where men would not do as well." This is her answer: "I think men could not do this work as efficiently or well as we, for the very good reason they could not do it at all! And so you see in all the ways in which we do it, they could not do as well as we! I make no plea for the superiority of our sex, or of the work we do. I merely maintain that the work we are doing would be left undone were we not here to do it. It is a work for women and girls, and must be done by their sisters."

To George W. Cable, we suppose, we are indebted for a copy of the Constitution and laws of the Prisons and Asylums Aid Association. The object embraces everything of interest to society in general in connection with institutions, and their inmates. The association is formed by, and appeals direct to, philanthropists of New Orleans. Mr. Cable is the author of this movement, and we shall wish to hear more of it. The roll of officers, place of meeting, and conditions of membership might be published, to satisfy many inquiries from persons interested in the object of the association.

Mr. E. L. Godkin, editor of "The Nation," offers a forcible answer in the June Century to the plea that civil-service reform would entail "The Danger of an Office-holding Aristocracy." He claims that such tendency is wholly foreign to the genius of the American [illegible], and that whether the [illegible] politicians like it or not, civil-service reform is inevitable and [illegible] near at hand.

PERSONAL MENTION.

— Mrs. Amanda Smith has recovered from African fever and is now engaged in evangelistic labors in Liberia, Africa.

— The Hon. Judge J. H. Carpenter, a prominent layman in the Methodist Episcopal Church in Indiana, died at his residence, in Garret, Ind., May 11.

The Western Methodist Book Concern pays more than half as much tax on personal property as all the thousands of saloons in Cincinnati.

The remains of Chief-Justice Chase are about to be transferred from Washington to Cincinnati, where a monument is to be raised to his memory.

— Bishop Kavanaugh, M. E. Church South, preached in Nashville on a recent Sabbath two sermons of great power and effectiveness, yet he is over eighty years old.

The House is now considering the South Carolina contested election case. The Republicans have resolved to seat Mackey, the Democrats to sustain the candidate of tissue ballots and other admitted election frauds.

— Mrs. W. E. Kellock, Madison, Wisconsin, has four daughters. The two oldest are well educated physicians with large practice; the third is a successful and popular minister of a church near Chicago; the fourth is a successful dentist at Chicago.

— Among the visitors who have honored us with a call is Linden E. Bentely, the genial gentlemanly editor and proprietor of The Donaldsonville Chief, a clean, family newspaper. Mr. Bentley is always sure of a warm welcome at our office.

— It will be seen by reference to the death notices in this issue of the SOUTHWESTERN that Rev. and Mrs B. F. Williams, of Fort Bend, county Texas, have met with a severe loss in the death of their only son and child, Benjamin Thomas. We deeply sympathize with our beloved brother and sister in this time of sorrow.

— The youngest divine in attendance at the C. M. E. Conference is Rev. J. B. Wilkins, of Verona, Miss. Rev. Wilkins is only 26 years of age. He was ordained Elder during his 20th year. He is also president of the Colored Mutual Benefit Association, of Mississippi, which is the strongest colored organization of the kind in the United States.—Washington Critic.

— Professor Isaiah U. Mullen, former Professor of Greek and Latin in the New Orleans University, but now connected with the Medical Department of the Central Tennessee College, gave us a call last week. His visit to New Orleans was a source of great pleasure to his former students and many friends in the city.

At the session of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Conference, Poughkeepsie, May 17, the special Committee appointed to interview Homer Ramsdell, regarding the outrage on Bishop Moore and others on the steamer J. L. Hasbrouck, reported that Mr. Ramsdell had apologized for the same, and did not indorse the action of the steward of the boat; whereupon a resolution was adopted thanking Mr Ramsdell "for his open apology and manly, outspoken principles."

— Dr. W. H. Gray and wife, late of Morgan City, are now at their old home in Bethel Maine. Here is an extract from a private letter from him: "Maine is a good State to live in, notwithstanding the cold, for those who wish to enjoy the comforts of civilization. But there are some things you have in Louisiana that we miss very much i. e. saloons and drunken men. * I feel five years younger since I came here. I fear I must take some medicine to destroy my enormous appetite."

— We learn that the services of Rev. W. C. Webb, late pastor of Ames, but now at Grace Methodist Episcopal Church, Philadelphia, are highly spoken of. Bro. Webb is preaching to crowded congregations, and additions are made to the membership every Sabbath. The Baltimore Methodist says: "The Grace people are now casting about for another $100,000 to build the church they have in contemplation, and which with their present spacious and elegant chapel it is thought will be the finest Methodist edifice ever yet completed." With Bro. Webb for their pastor, Grace may look for a grand time.

— Latest dispatches read: May 21st. "The condition of Bishop Foss is less favorable to-day. His mind is somewhat clouded, and he is suffering from pyæmia and typhoid fever. His trouble originated in a sprained ankle, and his right leg has wasted to half its natural size." May 22d. Mrs Foss to N. Y. Advocate: "Saturday, symptoms seemed most favorable. Complications this a. m. make the case more serious." Says the editor: "A private letter from W. G. Eustis, Esq., Attorney-at-Law, leads us to fear the worst. He speaks of persistent delirium and weakness."

— On the 13th inst., in the city of Detroit, Bishop Peck fell in attempting to enter a carriage. He passed over a stone step on to the flagging. His shoulder was partially dislocated and he suffered other severe injuries. He returned to his home Tuesday morning in charge of Bishop Foster. His injuries have been skillfully treated, and with good nursing he has commenced again to improve. With great difficulty and at some risk he, Sunday, ordained two men to go abroad. His restoration will require time, and he cannot expect to do work of any kind in advance of his conference sessions.—Northern.

— We had the pleasure of receiving a call from Rev. J. W. Bowen, A. B., teacher of Languages, History and Mathematics, in the Central Tennessee College for the past four years. Bro. Bowen is a native of this city, and a graduate of the New Orleans University. He has done good work at the Central and represents the College as having had a year of marked prosperity, 454 students having been enrolled during the year. He feels that God has called him to the one work of preaching the Gospel. He leaves the Central with the purpose of entering this coming August the Theological Department of the Boston University.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

Rev. T. Jackson, Natchitoches, says, as a result of a two weeks protracted meeting, 23 back-sliders were reclaimed and 13 converted to God and are now happy in the Lord. Our second quarterly meeting was held May 13–14; 150 came to the communion, collection $19.

T. Montgomery, of First Street Church, reported at the quarterly Conference that the Sunday-school was flourishing, and has made a present to the church of a fine marble topped table. The Social Circle presented three chairs costing $25. These gifts show the loyalty of the people, and are also things of beauty. Last quarter 18 were baptized, 20 received on probation, 13 in full membership, 15 converts. Protracted meeting is still going on, with promise of fruitful results.

MISSISSIPPI.

P. Blue, Greenwood: "We have been scouting from high water at considerable expense. Stock has died in large numbers, and sickness threatens the people. Preached in Carrollton court-house and took up a subscription of $80 to build a church in town. We need one there badly. We left our list in the hands of the kind Sheriff to canvass the whites for us."

E. Collins, Carthage: "My first quarterly conference was presided over by Elder Barney. The people are much pleased with his administration. My people are very poor but are doing all they can for the Lord. I have six appointments. One of my churches burned down March 14th, but we are going to build again. There are 150 pupils and 8 superintendents of my Sunday-schools, which are all missionary societies."

H. Heslup, Durant: "Elder G. W. Barney held our first conference, and lectured before the Sabbath school. Collection was $11 25."

L. Clayton, Deerbrook: "The first quarterly conference, Elder Dunn presiding, was a good occasion. Paid elder $11 05. Administered sacrament to 106"

J. W. Dunn, Greenwood: "As it is generally known that the home of my family is in the portion of the county that has been very recently under water, and I of course had to rally to their relief. I presume it unnecessary to state why I am late in publishing my second round. I am now trying to mend up breaches made by the overflow."

W. McDonald, Aberdeen: "Our church is in a prosperous condition. On Easter Sunday we had prayer meeting at daylight, and the church was decorated beautifully. The Sabbath-school, the following week gave a concert for the benefit of the church, and realized $20."

TENNESSEE.

Rev. H. Dunlap, of Mansfield, gives a cheering account of his work. His P. E., J. P. Price, held his second quarterly meeting May 6. Six were converted to God, five joined the church. We collected for our Elder $10 20, for benevolent objects $4.70, and for the pastor $34.

Wm. Dwegan, Alamo: "The elder held my quarterly with a grand institute. Many beautiful essays were read, and we had a crowded house all of the time. Collected for elder $14,65. I am geting along very well with my work, and have 16000 feet of lumber to build with. Rev. J. B. Marbrey, of Brownsville, preached for us acceptably."

J. L. Massey, at Linden, says his people are good Methodists, but can do little in the way of supporting the church, and are praying for good crops. Many are begging for something to eat. They did not make corn last year to fatten their hogs. "I have ridden my horse to a preaching place 20 or 25 miles, and could not get an ear of corn for it. I stop with families and leave early without getting anything to eat. Have taken in two new points, and have not missed an appointment. Have collected for pastor $27, 30, elder $11,80, bishop $1, missionary $1,40, Freedman's Aid 35c, church extension 60c."

TEXAS.

S. C. Coleman, of Waelder, writes that the Sunday-school has forty in attendance, well supplied with books from the Elder G. W. Richardson. The pastor, Rev. Lee Reid, has had a protracted meeting, with 73 converts this year.

Edwin Eason, Columbus: "The church is on the up grade under the pastorate of Rev. W. H. Davis, who is doing all he can to elevate the people. This year we have built the best parsonage in the West Texas Conference. We had a protracted meeting a few weeks ago, in which twenty-two souls professed a hope in Christ. Our second quarterly conference, held by Elder Richardson, was a nice affair."

I. B. Scott, Houston: "A club, made up of some of the nice young people of the city, gave an entertainment for the benefit of our new church. Their singing and literary productions were both highly complimented. They turned over to trustees $49 90. On Trustees' Sunday we collected $17 50. Festivals given by members realized about $90. Workmen are busy plastering and painting. To date, no conversions in our protracted meeting. Several additions to the church. Pray for us, brethren."

Frank Hamilton, Mooresville: "We are making fair progress in educational matters, and have one of the best teachers in the State. We are prospering in every respect."

To the Ministers and Members of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

The bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in semi-annual meeting, assembled in the City of Detroit, May 11, 1882, respectfully ask your attention to the following recommendation of the Ecumenical Conference:

"We beg also to say that it is time that our Chapels, Churches and Institutions of Learning, should be relieved from debt, and no more of the Lord's precious money be sunk in interest. We are persuaded that with the proper determination this might be achieved in a brief period of time. We entreat our brethren to move forward in this great enterprise promptly, and, as nearly as possible, simultaneously throughout the world."

We believe that there can hardly be any movement (next to a more faithful use of usually recognized means of spiritual power), more important than this. We fully agree with the Ecumenical Conference, and believe that its proposition is entirely practicable.

We do not, of course, assume to advise our churches respectively as to the method to be adopted to accomplish this desirable result. You can judge of this much better than we can. But let us get this work upon our hearts. Let the thought of this grand achievement pervade the whole Church. Let it be a subject of prayer, of self-sacrifice, and of strong resolution, becoming practically irresistible.

By order and in behalf of the Bishops.

E. G. ANDREWS, Secretary.

The Shreveport District.

MR. EDITOR—I have made my first round on the district. I was at Monroe, March 5th. Bro. Frank Walker was at his post. We had a grand time. Owing to the high water, I could not get to Bastrop and the Island. When I left Monroe the water was one and a half feet at the church. Coming from Monroe to Shreveport, a distance of 110 miles, the entire county was overflowed. In Shreveport, March 12th. I found Bro. Thompson at his work, and from appearance in earnest. At this charge Bro. J. T. Marshall was pastor last year. He left a lasting impression on the minds of the people that will be gathered many days hence, especially on the temperance question. Bro. Thompson has made a good start, and will continue repairing the church.

Dixon's Cross Road I could not reach. Bro. Fopps had to come out from his home in a skiff.

I met the brethren and pastor at Scott Chapel March 25th. Bro. P. B. McDonald is one of our young men. He has made a grand start and the people all love him.

April 14th, I was at Fairfield. Bro. Frank Harvey is stationed there. He is like a general leading his army to victory.

At St. James Church the prospects looked bright, but since that time things have changed. The great storm has thrown it down. It had an indebtedness of $800. God does all things for the best. The disaster aroused all concerned. I have examined the records in the Court House, and found that the land on which the church was built has never been paid for. We shall go to work and pay for the land before we build again.

April 9th, at Mansfield; found Bro. Johnson wide awake. He was carrying on a protracted meeting, resulting in 17 converts.

At Springs, 10th and 11th; found Bro. Brooks going ahead.

At Conshatta, the people love Bro. Moore, and are doing all they can to make him happy.

At Pleasant Hill, Bro. Pickett found neither church nor parsonage, but he has succeeded in building a splendid parsonage and the foundation of the church is laid. He has gained the esteem of all.

On the district we are having the hardest times for some years.

S. DUNCAN.

Letter from Bastrop.

MR. EDITOR—I landed here pecuniarily feeble, with no friends except those a preacher usually finds when he lands in a strange town. I proceeded to raise means to get my family here, which was confronted by considerable opposition from those who said, that getting my wife here would be like many others who had been cheerfully helped to get their families here, but never got them. The tide, at one time bearing me means to get them, seemed to move away from me, but it turned, and the faithful few, which it must be acknowleged are in all churches, with many of the worldly people, came to my assistance, and I started off for them, delighted with having stemmed the tide of opposition; but, sometimes when we think our way is all clear, there is just ahead of us an obstruction of the worst kind. We went on all night till we got to Long Bridge Bayou (which is about seventeen miles south of this town), which was high with water, and the driver, not being well acquainted with it, plunged in, and about the time we got middle way of the stream, over went the hack and I was tilted into swimming water. I had been fighting sin, but now I had to turn my attention to fighting water, which I assure you I did manfully till I reached a place where I could consider myself secure. With this exception, I reached home safe, got my wife and children, and am now back here to the surprise of many of my bold opposers, who declined to help me on account of what others (preachers) had done.

I have started a revival. Sunday night Bro. Washington was up to see me, and, with his assistance, caused 13 to join the church, on probation.

I have also found it somewhat tantalizing to engage in anything like having an objection to my people using whiskey. But I am, at present, busy carrying around a paper for our people to sign to prohibit the barbarous habit of using so much of it; have been quite successful, so far as getting names on paper is concerned. It remains yet to prove whether it will be a benefit to the people of this community.

My Sunday-school is in tolerable good condition. I am busy now getting my work in shape. The church should be remodeled. It is rather rickety for a large congregation. It needs good benches and lights and a parsonage, which, I hope, in the course of time, by the help of the Lord, we may have. The times are hard now, and the people are unable to do what they are willing to do. I have found the white people very liberal, and are, almost to a unit, unwilling to recognize any thing like immorality on my part. They look on any minister with disdain who does not let his morals be strictly unimpeachable.

The town itself is quite a pleasant little place, of about twelve hundred inhabitants. Most of the stores are neatly built of brick. It is quite healthy here. Water is good and, as a general thing, so is health. None of the contagious diseases reach here, nor the high waters. I have written this letter to you because I know you desire to hear how we are getting along, etc. I will commence shortly to take subscribers for you. Yours in Christ. Fraternally,

J. S. PATTERSON.

A Sunday-school Picnic.

MR EDITOR — Having noticed several accounts of picnics, and other festive occasions, enjoyed by the young people, I write you a short account of a Sabbath school picnic enjoyed by our young people—and old ones too—on the 6th inst.

On that morning the scholars, teachers, parents and friends gathered in a beautiful grove near Swan's Chapel, where a procession was formed. The procession marched to the music of a sacred air to the platform prepared for the crowning of the Queen.

The chosen Queen was Miss Mary Huff. The crown and scepter bearers, Miss Rosa and Miss Callie Huff. The proceedings were opened by right beautifully dressed floral girls; following these were all the other willing subjects of the beautiful "Queen of May."

Then came speeches suitable to the occasion by various members of the Sabbath school. After these appropriate and interesting addresses were delivered by Rev. Carper and Mr. Hasty. In the course of their remarks, they paid to Mr. Carter, our teacher, great credit as a noble worker and teacher.

After this came, what to the little ones, is the crowning event of the day — the dinner, and you know yourself that, on such occasions everyone, even an editor himself, is prepared to do his share at eating. There was enough and to spare, and all seemed to eat heartily.

The afternoon was spent by the children, and others, in different ways of amusement and enjoyment, until toward evening when the people partook themselves to their homes, feeling that the day had been well spent in the innocent amusements and exercises of the day. Yours truly, PIC NIC.

Luling, Texas, May 11th, 1882.

Sunday-School Temperance Day, July 2.

The attention of the church is called to the appointment, under the approval of the bishops, of Sunday, July 2, 1882, as a Sunday-School Temperance Day in all the Methodist Episcopal Sunday-schools of the land.

A temperance service will be prepared. The lesson for the day need not be omitted, for it is the lesson on "Home," discussing marriage and childhood; the lesson in which occurs the beautiful passage "Suffer the little children and forbid them not to come unto me." No more appropriate lesson could possibly have been selected for the furtherance of the temperance work than the one which happens to be on the list for July 2.

Will our ministers, Superintendents, teachers and scholars everywhere co-operate in making it thunder all around the horizon in the interest of temperance on July 2, 1882? J. H. VINCENT, Sec. S. S Union of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Longfellow Memorial Association.

CAMBRIDGE, May 15, 1882.

The death of the poet Longfellow has taken from the world one upon whom the affections of all English-speaking people unite.

To provide some lasting memorial which shall testify to future generations the tender respect in which his contemporaries hold that pure and gentle life is the purpose for which the Longfellow Memorial Association has been formed.

From his early manhood Mr. Longfellow lived in Cambridge, Massachusetts, in a house already famous as for a time the home of Washington.

This venerable house stands facing the Charles River, the poet's favorite view, towards which looked the windows of his study, and of which he wrote:

> "—long years of mingling feeling
> Half in rest and half in strife,
> I have seen thy waters stealing
> Onward, like the stream of life."

The Association hopes to raise enough money to secure that part of Mr. Longfellow's grounds which lies between the house and the river, there to erect an enduring memorial to Mr. Longfellow, and to keep the spot, doubly rich in associations, forever open to the people. It is also included within the plans of the Association to provide for the permanent preservation of the house, should it ever pass out of the possession of the family of Mr. Longfellow.

In order to accomplish this, or to erect some other public and appropriate memorial near to the scenes of the poet's life, this Association calls for a national subscription. It asks for contributions of one dollar each, for which a certificate of honorable membership will be given.

Contributions should be sent to John Bartlett, Treasurer, P. O. Box 1590, Boston, Mass.

[illegible] Mission.—The work of [illegible] mission is in a very interesting state in many ways. Rev. [illegible] reports that the [illegible] of the late series of meetings [illegible] the reception of over thirty probationers for the Church. He also states that Mr. Ahok, the merchant and [illegible] of the College, was one of the number. The greatest portion were from the schools of the Mission. Mr. Chandler will be compelled to return home by the critical condition of his health. One of his lungs is very seriously affected as the result of a severe attack of pneumonia experienced some two years ago. This obliged his suspension of labors for some months, but he has since continued his work in hope of persevering with [illegible] yields, with great [illegible], to the necessity of return. "I have been intent," he writes, "on remaining here [illegible] and a [illegible] years. I am in more trouble about returning to America than I experienced in leaving it." There is hope that with prolonged rest he will yet recover strength to return again to his so much loved work.

Death of Rev. J. Kihlstrom of the Swedish Mission.—We have sad news from Sweden. It is but recently that very inspiring reports were transmitted to us of the work of God in the Stockholm [illegible] Conference [illegible], Presiding [illegible] District, and now we [illegible] to chronicle his sudden death [illegible] accident, on the 29th [illegible]. own at Foochow. The mission has 96 members and 40 probationers. The Central American Mission, beginning at Mexico City in 1873, reports a membership of over 1000. There is a prosperous Mexican Border Mission, chiefly in the State of Texas along the Rio Grande. The Brazil Mission has struggled with hindrances to its progress. The Womans' Missionary Society is helping here as elsewhere. For home and foreign purposes it raised $28,000 in 1881.

These facts concerning the foreign missions and much else of interest to all Methodists concerning the home missions of the M. E. Church South may be found in a compact volume of 144 pages (price 50 cents) recently prepared by Rev. A. W. Wilson, D.D., who, having been four years Missionary Secretary, has recently been elected Bishop of the M. E. Church South.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Second Quarter. Lesson X. June 4, 1882.

The Transfiguration. (Mark ix, 2–13)

About a week after the events of last lesson, the disciples Peter James and John were permitted to see the raising of the daughter of Jairus, and later the Lord's passion in Gethsemane. Ordinarily his appearance did not differ from that of a human being, though his inward nature was sublime and out of all proportion to his outward appearance; now, his outward appearance took on a form approximating more nearly his true character. God the Father, present in the cloud, spoke in audible tones to the disciples, and the sound came to them from the direction of the cloud. This is my beloved son—That is, Jesus is the Son of God the Father, and well beloved, a truth he would impress on the disciples. Hear him.—Believe and obey him. As in times past God had spoken to the fathers by the prophets, in these latter times he now speaks by his Son. That is, neither the law, as represented by Moses, nor the prophets, as represented by Elijah, should longer continue as the supreme authorities among the people of God; but Jesus, who came to fulfill and supplement both, now assumes authority and gives laws to the people of God. Matthew relates that their fear was so great that they fell on their faces, that Jesus came to them and assisted them to rise, and that looking about after rising they saw no man. He charged them that they should tell no man what things they [illegible] [illegible] it might excite incredulity [illegible] all events it would not be understood. No good would come [illegible] publication, and harm might [illegible] it. They asked each [illegible] what the rising from the dead [illegible] the general doctrine [illegible], or life after [illegible] acquainted with [illegible] it meant especially [illegible] of the Messiah. They [illegible] understand why he should [illegible] to this process, and his [illegible] of it left them [illegible]. It did not seem to comport with popular notions of the glory of the Messiah.

The June Popular Science Monthly begins with an article by Judge J. B. Stallo, of Cincinnati, entitled "Speculative Science." It is a reply to an attack upon "The Concepts and Theories of Modern Physics," by Professor Newcomb. The article is witty and pungent, but brilliant and solid; and, besides its skillful polemics, it throws much valuable light upon fundamental questions in speculative and historical physics. "The Eye-like Organs of Fishes," by Dr. Ernst Krause, editor of "Kosmos," describes some remarkable formations, almost exactly resembling real eyes in appearance, that have been observed on the bodies of certain small fishes living near the bottom of deep seas, the nature and objects of which are a puzzle to naturalists. An explanation of "The Zuni Social, Mythic, and Religious Systems," is by F. H. Cushing, who has made a special study of the subject to the extent of having become a Zuni himself for the purpose. Not the least in interest is Dr. von Dollinger's review of "The Jews in Europe," and the treatment they have received at the hands of the Popes and Christian nations. The portrait and biographical sketch are of Mr. Darwin, and the latter is the fullest account of the illustrious naturalist that has been given to the United States. New York: D. Appleton & Company. Fifty cents per number, $5 per year.

A dispatch from Breaux Bridge, La., says: Last Monday, Jos. E. Jenkins shot his brother-in-law Raphael Castille, in the night. The next day, on an affidavit by Coroner Guilbeau, he was arrested and put in jail at St. Martinsville to await trial. To-day about 300 men gathered here and went to St. Martinsville and took him. They brought him to the spot where he killed Mr. Castille, passing through Breaux Bridge, and hung him to a tree about a half a mile from town. The same crowd, while on their way to Breaux Bridge, seized a colored man by the name of Eugene Azar, innocent of the charge of killing a young man, and then under bond. Both men were escorted to the spot where Castille was killed and there were hung on the same tree. It is reported that Jenkins' wife witnessed the execution. Gov. McEnery immediately telegraphed Sheriff Guilbeau, stating that he had offered $2000 for the arrest and conviction of the person or persons engaged in hanging Jenkins and Azar.

The Charleston News is in a towering rage that the district attorney who is prosecuting South Carolina offenders against the Federal election laws should bring "white men to trial upon the evidence of Negroes alone." The district attorney is a Southern born white man, and the News brands him as false to his blood and a traitor to his race." Such talk reminds us of the days of slavery, when a Negro could not testify in any suit to which a white man was party, and when a white man could kill a "Nigger" in the presence of a thousand "Niggers" with perfect impunity, so far as any trial is concerned. The News has plainly forgotten in what age it is speaking.—N. Y. Independent.

Colden's Liebig's Liquid Extract of Beef and Tonic Invigorator is a most excellent preparation. Rev. Mr. Albert, in his lecture on Africo-American commerce, published in the SOUTHWESTERN, gives some most valuable statistics. [illegible] Britain has twenty-three [illegible] as much trade with Africa as the United States has, and France fifteen times as much. Great Britain's commerce on the West Coast alone amounts to over [illegible] millions of dollars, and that of France to over fifteen millions, [illegible] to a little over a quarter [illegible]. There are at least [illegible] ports between Liberia's [illegible], Cape Palmas and [illegible]. Send for the SOUTHWESTERN [illegible] Advocate.

MARRIAGES.

Near Brenham, Texas, by Rev. T. Jackson, Miss Josephine Fletcher to Rev. Major Reeves.

DEATHS.

Jacob Kennedy, the oldest member of Todd's Chapel, Saulsbury, Ark., died March 11, 1882. Aged 75 years. Bro. Kennedy was a good man and true to God and the Methodist Episcopal Church.

H. H. McAllister.

Benjamin T. Williams, son of Rev. B. F. Williams, died at the residence of his father in Fort Bend county, Texas, May 13, 1882. Benjamin was an only son, and Bro. and Sister Williams were anxious that he should have all the benefits of a thorough education. In 1878, he entered Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn., where he remained till 1881, when poor health made it necessary for him to return home, where after a lingering sickness, but without a cloud between him and the future, he died in great peace of mind and with a perfect trust in God.

S. Hardwell.

Samuel Snell died at Rolling Fork, Miss., May 9, 1882, aged 81. Bro. Snell was a native of Georgia; came to Mississippi in 1876. He was a good man and leaves many relatives to follow him to the better land. For eight years Bro. Snell was a traveling preacher and did good work.

London Danzy, a local preacher in the Methodist Episcopal Church, died April 15 1882, aged 35 years. His life was a good one, his testimony clear. He leaves a wife and five children to mourn his loss.

John Russell died in perfect peace May 22, 1882. Aged 36 years.

Alice Williams died May 8, 1882 Aged 30 years. Sister Russel was a faithful member of the M. E. Church, and has only been transported to the Church above.

C. S. Steward.

On January 1st, the mother of Sister Margaret Grant, aged 93 years, passed from labor to reward. The same day an infant died, and both were carried to the grave at the same time. This was an unusual sight. January 2d, an infant child of Bro. and Sister Touse was burned to death. The 25th, an infant was accidentally killed in a fight between its uncle and father. February 18th, Miss Amanda Buford was overcome by death, and left no encouraging words for the living. March 9th, little Johnny Putney, of the Sabbath-school, fell asleep in the arms of Jesus. March 17th, Sister Francis Davis joined the other part of God's family. April 23d, Sister Emma Fountain went to bed well and hearty; at 3 a. m., she woke her husband, saying she was going to die; she did not want a doctor, and speedily passed away; she was a member of the L. P. O. U. Society. On Sunday, little Etta Hill was baptized and passed from this world.

What is ministerial success—crowded churches, full aisles, attentive congregations, the approval of the religious world, much impression produced? Elijah thought so; and when he found out his mistake and discovered that the applause on Carmel subsided into hideous stillness, his heart well-nigh broke with disappointment. Ministerial success lies in altered lives and obedient, humble hearts,—unseen work recognized in the judgment day.—F. W. Robertson.

The Tariff Commission should be made up of men of moderate views and of large experience. It is by no means important that they should be men who are conspicuous protectionists, but those who recognize the fact that the country is committed to the policy of protection, and that any radical change, such as the free-traders would advocate, would involve every industrial interest in ruin.—Boston Journal.

Heartily Recommended.

Don't condemn a good thing because you have been deceived by worthless nostrums. Parker's Ginger Tonic has cured many in this section, of kidney and nervous disorders, and we recommend it heartily to such sufferers.—News.

The Turkish troops have reinforced the camp on the frontier between Tripoli and Tunis. This has irritated the French authorities, who now regard the submission of insurgent Arabs as improbable.

Enjoy Health and Be Happy.

For depression of spirits, general debility and ill-health, also a certain strengthener of every part of the system, nothing equals Browns Iron Bitters.

Egypt is in an excited condition. The army is in rebellion, and the Khedive refuses to reinstate Arabi Bey at its demand. The Porte sustains the Khedive, and the English and French squadrons are on hand to preserve order. A crisis is near.

Many a merchant of brilliant faculties, has been stricken down in career by paralysis of his nerves, and is left out in the race of life. Such unfortunates should be treated with Dr. Benson's Celery and Chamomile Pills. Restoration is probable.

TARRANT'S SELTZER APERIENT

The Gentle Way is Best.—In dyspepsia, liver complaint, and constipation, the diseased organs are preternaturally sensitive and tender. Do not use them roughly. An alterative like Tarrant's Seltzer Aperient, that tones, corrects and purifies the system without unduly exciting or irritating either the stomach, the liver, or the bowels is the true specific in such cases. Reason teaches this, and experience confirms it.

No Whiskey!

Brown's Iron Bitters is one of the very few tonic medicines that are not composed mostly of alcohol or whiskey, thus becoming a fruitful source of intemperance by promoting a desire for rum.

Brown's Iron Bitters is guaranteed to be a non-intoxicating stimulant, and it will, in nearly every case, take the place of all liquor, and at the same time absolutely kill the desire for whiskey and other intoxicating beverages.

Rev. G. W. Rice, editor of the American Christian Review, says of Brown's Iron Bitters:

Cin., O., Nov. 16, 1881.
Gents:—The foolish wasting of vital force in business, pleasure, and vicious indulgence of our people, makes your preparation a necessity; and if applied, will save hundreds who resort to saloons for temporary recuperation.

Brown's Iron Bitters has been thoroughly tested for dyspepsia, indigestion, biliousness, weakness, debility, overwork, rheumatism, neuralgia, consumption, liver complaints, kidney troubles, &c., and it never fails to render speedy and permanent relief.

A Remarkable Discovery.

A REAL SKIN CURE.

THERE IS ONLY ONE
AND THAT WITH SIMPLE NAME.

Beware of impostures, pirates, or any old articles which now suddenly claim to be best. They have been tried and found wanting, while this has been proved a remarkable success.

NO POMPOUS NAME.

This curative needs no pompous or incomprehensible title of Greek or Latin to sustain it, but its simple English name appeals directly to the common sense of the people. And the people are signally manifesting their appreciation of this frankness by selecting and using Dr. Beeson's SKIN CURE in preference to all other professed remedies.

Dr. C. W. Beeson has long been well known as a successful physician and surgeon and his life study has been the diseases of the nervous system and of the skin; since he has been persuaded to put his New Remedy and Favorite Prescription as a "Skin Cure" on the market, various things have sprung up into existence, or have woke up from the sleepy state in which they were before, and now claim to be The Great Skin Cure.

☞ Beware of imitation, or the various articles which have been advertised for years or struggled along, having no real merit on the public that now endeavor to keep head above water by advertising themselves as "The Great Skin Cure." None is genuine and reliable except Dr. C. W. Benson's Skin Cure. Each package and bottle bears his likeness. Internal and external remedy, two bottles in one package. Price $1.00, get at your druggists.

s&monly

A short time since two young ladies were accosted by a gipsey woman who told them that for a shilling each she would show them their husbands' faces in a pail of water, which being brought, they exclaimed, "We only see our own faces." "Well," said the old woman, "those faces will be your husbands' when you are married."

Needless Misery.

Many people miserably drag themselves about with failing strength feeling that they are sinking into their graves when Parker's Ginger Tonic would begin with the first dose to bring vitality and strength back to them.—Sun.

Well-Merited Success.

A gentleman once asked a distinguished dispensing druggist to explain the secret of the almost universal demand for Dr. Richmond's Samaritan Nervine. He said that it was in fact a genuine medicine—such a compound as every good physician would prescribe for the disease which it was advertised to cure. Of course it cost less than any druggist would charge for the same article supplied on a physician's prescription, and [illegible]

SAMARITAN

NERVINE.

Samaritan Nervine

Cures Epileptic Fits, Spasms, Convulsions, St. Vitus Dance, Virtigo, Hysterics, Insanity, Apoplexy, Paralysis, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all Nervous diseases. This infallible remedy will positively eradicate every species of Nervous Derangement, and drive them away from whence they came, never to return again. It utterly destroys the germs of disease by neutralizing the hereditary taint or poison in the system, and thoroughly eradicates the disease, and utterly destroys the cause.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Female Weakness, general Debility, Lucorrhœa or Whites, Painful Menstruation, Ulceration of the Uterus, Internal Heat, Gravel, Inflammation of the Bladder, Irritability of the Bladder. For Wakefulness at night, there is no better remedy. During the change of life no female should be without it. It quiets the Nervous System and gives rest, comfort and nature's sweet sleep.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Alcoholism, Drunkenness and the habit of Opium Eating. These degrading habits are by far the worst evils that have ever befallen suffering humanity. Thousands die annually from these noxious drugs. The drunkard drinks liquor not because he likes it, but for the pleasure of drinking and treating his friends, little thinking that he is on his road to ruin. Like the Opium Eater, he first uses the drug in small quantities as a harmless antidote. The soothing influence of the drug takes strong hold upon its victim, leading him on to his own destruction. The habits of Opium Eating and Liquor Drinking are precisely what eating is to alimentiveness, as over-eating first inflames the stomach, which redoubles its cravings until it paralyzes both the stomach and appetite. So every drink of liquor or dose of opium, instead of satisfying, only adds to its fierce fires, until it consumes the vital force and then itself. Like the gluttonous tape-worm, it cries: "Give, give, give!" but never enough until its own rapacity devours itself. Samaritan Nervine gives instant relief in all such cases. It produces sleep, quiets the nerves, builds up the nervous system, and restores body and mind to a healthy condition.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Nervous Dyspepsia, Palpitation of the Heart, Asthma, Bronchitis, Scrofula, Syphilis, diseases of the Kidneys and all diseases of the urinary organs. Nervous debility, caused by the indiscretions of youth, permanently cured by the use of this invaluable remedy. To you, young, middle-aged and old men, who are covering your sufferings as with a mantle by silence, look up, you can be saved by timely efforts, and make ornaments to society, and jewels in the crown of your Maker, if you will. Do not keep this a secret longer, until it saps your vitals, and destroys both body and soul. If you are thus afflicted, take Dr. Richmond's Samaritan Nervine. It will restore your shattered nerves, arrest premature decay, impart tone and energy to the whole system.

A WONDERFUL [illegible]d

SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.

These Glasses are chemically treated in the process of manufacture, and possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analysed by American and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and can in some cases restore the sight if used in time, but in no case can the eye become impaired by their use for the following reasons:

1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye, completely doing away with that tiresome sensation that is usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours' use.
2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.
3. The chemicals keep the glasses cold, and the result is that the optic nerves are always cool, doing away with any feverish sensation to the eye.
4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, with no distressing or tiresome sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.

Cathartic Pills

Combine the choicest cathartic principles in medicine, in proportions accurately adjusted to secure activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. They are the result of years of careful study and practical experiment, and are the most effectual remedy yet discovered for diseases caused by derangement of the stomach, liver, and bowels, which require prompt and effectual treatment. AYER'S PILLS are specially applicable to this class of diseases. They act directly on the digestive and assimilative processes, and restore regular healthy action. Their extensive use by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, is one of the many proofs of their value as a safe, sure, and perfectly reliable purgative medicine. Being compounded of the concentrated virtues of purely vegetable substances, they are positively free from calomel, or any injurious properties, and can be administered to children with perfect safety.

AYER'S PILLS are an effectual cure for Constipation or Costiveness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Foul Stomach and Breath, Dizziness, Headache, Loss of Memory, Numbness, Biliousness, Jaundice, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Dropsy, Tumors, Worms, Neuralgia, Colic, Gripes, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Gout, Piles, Disorders of the Liver, and all other diseases resulting from a disordered state of the digestive apparatus.

As a Dinner Pill they have no equal.

While gentle in their action, these PILLS are the most thorough and searching cathartic that can be employed, and never give pain unless the bowels are inflamed, and then their influence is healing. They stimulate the appetite and digestive organs; they operate to purify and enrich the blood, and impart renewed health and vigor to the whole system.

NEW YORK OFFICE:

WILLIAM BALDWIN, [illegible]

A MARRIAGE HYMN. [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] under this charter they organized the 'Nauvoo Legion,' of which Joe Smith was the commander-in-chief, with more rank than was held by any officer in the United States army. In truth, he was prophet, priest, and king, as well as the executive, legislative, and judicial head of an imperium in imperio. This council passed an ordinance declaring in effect that the municipal court should have jurisdiction in all cases of arrest made in the city by any process whatever. Exercising this power, Joe Smith, who was several times arrested under warrants issued by the Governor of Illinois upon writs based upon requisitions from the Governor of Missouri, as a fugitive from justice, was released from arrest on writs of habeas corpus from the municipal court. Extending their powers to meet the necessities of the case, they later enacted that no writ issued from any other place than Nauvoo for the arrest of any person in the city should be executed without the approval of the mayor; if any officer did so, he should be subject to imprisonment for life, and that the Governor should not have the power to pardon the offender without the approval of the mayor." Now all this goes to show the audacity of the leaders of the Mormon people. If they can do this with their people in the face of the national, gubernatorial, and municipal laws, what may we not expect them to do hereafter? It proves beyond the shadow of a doubt that Mormonism claims the political, religious, and moral rights of its people in its own hands. They are working every moment for political power. They have the reins of government in Utah, and are driving at a furious rate, while their enemies are seen on all sides of the road. A spider could not have more securely wound a fly in his net than Mormonism has wound the Territory of Utah. Every member of the Territorial Legislature is a Mormon. The officers of the counties that are elected are Mormons. I know not but the Mormon elders distribute [illegible] churches [illegible] and no [illegible] his [illegible]

But will they not reform and leave off polygamy if let alone? We ask, can the leopard change his spots or the Ethiopian his skin? Why, sirs, they have not been interrupted for thirty years, and as to reform they can never do more in that direction than they have done and remain Mormons. They year after year widen their borders and fasten their fangs in every one with whom they come in contact. A young lady of respectability left the States and went to Utah for health, visiting relatives. She visited church through curiosity, and the Mormon elders—men who steal heaven's livery to serve the devil in—preached, visited, and quoted scripture to her to prove their point. The poor girl believed them, and the result was she joined their Church. This means, with Mormons, more than I would like to take time to explain. Her father hurried to her rescue and carried her back, but at times, even now, she declares her intention of returning. I ask, if these things be true has Mormonism no power? I think that whoever dares camp on this enchanted ground will find themselves next morning in the power of Giant Despair; whoever reclines under the shadow of Mormonism, his friends will find when too late that its effects are like that of the deadly upas tree.

Now the attitude assumed by these Mormons toward the government is of a menacing character. Brigham Young declared that the government, to impede the progress of Mormonism, would have to bridge the Rocky Mountains over and put a million soldiers on it. They do not fear to make known their intentions. The last-named Mormon leader declared in a sermon preached in 1856 that if his wife had borne him all the children she ever could, the celestial law taught him to take a young woman who would bear him children. Now these remarks were made twenty-six years ago, when they had hardly rested from their precipitate flight from the States. If he spoke thus that early, what think you they would do now? I am not ignorant of the fact that this government has come in contact with Human Slavery, Kukluxism, and Intemperance, but I know of nothing with which it has come in contact that will be as troublesome to get rid of as Mormonism. I remarked that they had no fear of legislative enactments. Just so, for George Q. Cannon, a Mormon leader, and some time United States Representative from Utah, said, in Salt Lake City, not long since, that the Government would be as powerless in the future as it had been in the past to enforce the anti-polygamy or any other law detrimental to the progress of the kingdom of God on earth (meaning the Mormon Church). He further said that nineteen years before Congress had enacted a law to prohibit and punish the practice of polygamy in the Territories. He then asked how many present had been punished and how much prohibition the law had effected. He said but two, and they furnished the evidence for their own conviction. Does such language, coming as it does from a member of Congress, mean nothing?

Now just what should be done I know not, only that it seems to me to be the duty of every man, woman and child who loves his wife, home and children, and every Senator and Representative who loves his country, and every preacher who loves his God, with every Christian who loves our holy religion, to lift [illegible] feel [illegible] upon the fair fame of our glo[illegible] country. That Congress re[illegible] the Mormon member [illegible] work, [illegible] work, and the power of our [illegible] of learning, with the [illegible] of our Christian religion, [illegible] brought to bear upon this [illegible] system of prostitution. [illegible] is the time to act, for to-mor[illegible] may find its fangs fastened [illegible] in the very vitals of [illegible] homes, impeding the [illegible] of our system of educa[illegible] and destroying our darling [illegible]

BY JOHN LEE.

From time immemorial Scotland has been the home of heroes. When Rome in the day of her greatness sent forth her conquering legions, they never halted in their northward march until the Grampian Hills and Scottish bravery said: "Thus far thou shalt come, and no farther." "Let us do or die," was the rallying cry of the lamented Wallace when he led his troops against the foe, and vowed his country should be free. This same spirit rolled back the tide of English invasion when Bruce and his army made Bannockburn a classic spot. And what "the land of the mountain and the flood" produced in the past, she produces in the present—heroes. If that life which is spent for the uplifting of humanity, be the noblest type of life, then has Scotland in the nineteenth century produced a man worthy to be remembered during all coming time. That man is David Livingstone the missionary, explorer, philanthropist, a man who in his hatred of slavery equaled Lincoln, in his love of humanity measured up to Howard, and in his missionary travels far surpassed even St. Paul himself.

Situated on the west coast of Scotland, in the same group with Iona, rich in missionary memories, lies the isle of Ulva. For many generations this was the dwelling-place of the Livingstone's, a family whose motto was: "Be honest." Poverty, often a blessing in disguise, compelled David's grandfather to leave his island home. Near Glasgow he commenced life anew. His father in the words of his illustrious son, was "too conscientious ever to become rich," but by "his kindness of manner, and winning ways," he secured a warm place in his children's affections. His mother was one of those pure, gentle, lovable characters, the fragrance of whose life seemed to be wafted from a holier and a happier sphere. From such a family was born the man whose name has become familiar in every household, the wide world over. The doings of childhood are in miniature the achievements of the coming man. They foreshadow what we may expect by and by. The love of literature, and the power to set difficulties at defiance, early manifested themselves in Livingstone. He entered a cotton factory at the age of ten, and with a part of his first week's wages purchased a Latin Grammar. The slim Scotch lad was compelled to be in the factory every morning at six, but the midnight hour often came and went, and found him batting away at the gate of knowledge. If you could have looked upon that youthful face, and read the expression there, it would have seemed to say: "I have a purpose to accomplish, and it must be accomplished," and the power to say this is the golden link in that unseen chain which connects humanity with Deity. Difficulties, by the very inherent force of his character, were swept out of his way like the trees of the forest in the path of the tornado. After several years of unremitting study he completed a medical and theological education and offered himself as a missionary to China. The mission directors, however, refused his application, but modestly suggested to the rough looking Scotchman who had broken down in his first sermon, to seek a less pretentious field.

When God has a work to do, He always finds a workman. The cry of Israel ascended to Heaven and Moses made his appearance. When Jezebel and the prophets of Baal were marching hand in hand in wickedness, Elijah, bold as a lion, went forth to execute the behests of Jehovah. When Deity was about to become incarnate, when the morning long foretold by patriarch and prophet, was about to dawn, John the Baptist commenced his mission. Slavery and heathenism had crushed millions of hearts in Central Africa. Century after century had passed away, and darker and darker grew the picture. The heart of Him who spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all," was [illegible]. The angel took a live coal from off the altar, touched the lips of a dweller in a northern home, and immediately the pulsations of a nobler life began. In the year [illegible] Livingstone sailed for that [illegible] with which his name [illegible] be forever associated. There he toiled, suffered, and finally died.

"Where Afric's sunny fountains Roll down their golden sand"

Picture to your minds a vast tract of country nearly 2000 miles in length and more than a thousand miles from east to west, comprising about a million square miles, all darkened by the humiliating fact that on its broad area the light of civilization had never dawned. Then parcel out this empire of moral darkness among scores of blood-thirsty rulers. Place your eyes now for a moment on a sight which makes the heart grow sad. It is a long line of manacled men, women, and children, perfectly naked, compelled to march over the desert's burning sands, while the sun's fierce rays pour down on their unprotected heads, and then recollect that this is only one of hundreds of scenes which are yearly enacted. Turn aside your gaze and see in the near distance a man. Heedless of consequences he liberates the poor downtrodden slaves. Now, the great controlling purpose of his life is to remove this terrible evil. To accomplish this, he traverses thousands of miles where the foot of white man never trod, where the voice of prayer or the song of praise never ascended, and using every means to bring before the world the evils of this iniquitous system, he permits no difficulties, however formidable, to deter him in the prosecution of his purpose. The lion wounds him, robbers track his path, savages threaten his life, once almost drowned, frequently exhausted with hunger, often oppressed with thirst, more than thirty times the fever prostrates him. Behold him month after month sleeping on the damp ground, wading through marshes, living on the poorest kind of native food, and scorning to regard this as sacrifice, and tell me then, if in the nineteenth century, earth received into her bosom or heaven into her mansions, a grander hero than David Livingstone?

In reading the lives of eminently successful men the question forces itself upon us, what were the elements in their character which contributed to their success?

Livingstone was a brave, manly soul, full of "the milk of human kindness." Like the granite of his native hills, he was rugged in form, but a finer, tenderer heart never throbbed in a human bosom. Did sadness cloud the brow of a daughter of Africa at the treatment she received from one of Stanley's men? Sorrow swept the heart strings of the great Scotchman. "He cast her off here," he writes in his journal: "She is somebody's bairn nevertheless." This is only one of the many incidents in his life, which reveal the innate goodness of the man. This quality—the reflection of God Himself—stamps itself upon every action of his childhood, reveals itself in every deed of his youth, is seen in every achievement of his manhood, pervades every page of his journal, follows him down to the grave, and passes home with him to heaven.

He was independent. To lean upon others for help would have been death to him. With his own hands he toiled to secure the means to fit himself for his noble work. In speaking of his college career, he says: "I never received a farthing of aid from any one." By his own unaided efforts he intended to go to China as a medical missionary. God ordered otherwise. In his appointment to Africa, only one thing detracted from his happiness. Let him speak for himself. "It was not quite agreeable to one accustomed to work his own way to become in a measure dependent on others." Livingstone possessed definiteness of purpose, untiring energy, unflinching perseverance, an iron will, a martyr's fortitude, and determination so invincible, that death itself would have been preferable to defeat.

The first element in true greatness is genuineness; the crowning quality, thorough devotion to God. Genuineness frequently wearies in the race; devotion, never. The former takes hold of man, the latter grasps the Eternal. Had Livingstone lacked this personal devotion, he would still have been a great man; possessing it, he becomes one of God's noblemen. Like all great natures, his piety revealed itself in deeds, not words. In him it was a steady burning flame. Self was completely lost sight of. Death, at any hour, would have been welcome, if by it slavery could have been suppressed, the reign of Christ inaugurated, and Africa set free.

Listen to the words of this friend of science, this lover of humanity, words addressed to his Creator only a year before he died: "My Jesus, my King, my Life, my All, I again dedicate my whole self to Thee; accept me, and grant, O gracious Father, that ere this year is gone I may finish my task. In Jesus' name I ask it. Amen. So let it be." Baalsm's prayer is the language of devotion, but it is as far above his life as the heavens are above the earth. Here is a prayer of intense devotion, but it is the outgoing of a soul actually consuming itself to make the "desert rejoice and blossom as the rose."

We have glanced at Livingstone in his childhood, observed the heroic efforts of his youth, seen him in his manhood fighting earnestly for the oppressed. Let us now turn our eyes to the closing scene. Like soldiers in battle, all true heroes die, "falling on the foeman's ground." It is the first of May, 1873. The sun has not yet risen. Higher up the eastern sky the morning twilight climbs, beautiful emblem of the day when Africa's moral night shall be no more. Silence reigns in the desert. In his lonely hut, on his weary couch, thousands of miles from home and kindred lies "the great white chief." From afar he hears the footsteps of him at whose icy touch the pen drops from the author's fingers, the sword from the warrior's hand, and the crown from the monarch's brow. By his bedside kneels the dying hero. Into his Savior's listening ear he breathes his heart's most ardent wish, and then the toil-worn traveller's journey ends. How potent the eloquence of such a life! It far outstrips the fiery words of Demosthenes. Ringing down the ages, echoing and re-echoing along the shores of time, it proclaims with a trumpet voice, Strike the shackles from the enslaved and tell them they are men. Attempt not to estimate the results of his labors. It is too soon. That can only be done when the weary watcher through the long centuries beholds the bow of hope spanning the mountains of the Dark Continent, sees the long expected sunrise, and hears the rolling sound of of the Gospel's chariot while coming with full pentecostal power, and in that glad hour it will be said: This is the morning for which Africa has waited long; her unrest has ceased; her last wail of sadness has been heard; her debasing idolatry has passed away; her last slave-master has thrown his weapons of cruelty down, and her last slave now breathes the air of freedom; her glens, her valleys and her hills have all become bright with the knowledge of Christ.

Often has the cry ascended to Heaven from the hearts of those who longed for Africa's redemption, "Will the morning never come?" and the silent watcher on the mountain-top, with gladness in his voice, at length replies, "The horizon is becoming brighter and brighter, the morning is almost at hand." Morning has come at last, the full-orbed sun pours down his flood of light, and beholding the splendor of that morning, calm and unprejudiced, listening to the last words of the slave's best friend, "All I can do in my solitude is to cry, may Heaven's rich blessing come down on every one, American, English, Turk, who will help to heal this open sore of the world," and having caught the distant refrain of the ascending songs from Africa redeemed, tell me then, does science number among her votaries, literature among her brilliant lights or religion among her most devoted sons a truer, nobler, grander soul than David Livingstone, the friend of Africa?

A colony of colored people are going from Mississippi to Dakota, and will settle near Bismarck. This is an important experiment, and will be attended with much risk; but the colony will be welcomed, for as the Bismarck Tribune says: "A man is not sized up by his color here, but by his worth." If the colonists are hard-working, intelligent men, they will succeed at Dakota, but that is no place for indolence or stupidity.—Inter Ocean.

Judge Melton is not satisfied with the result—the best that could have been attained with such juries—but he thinks the prosecutions will prevent similar frauds in the future. He has no hopes of fairness in the next election, but he believes that the Bourbon Managers will meet with difficulties in getting men to do their bidding when they know the Government will spare no efforts to punish them. Assistant Attorney Marshall is of the same opinion, and Mr. Saunders, it is said, left here convinced that "so long as South Carolina remains Democratic by the methods employed, every Northern State should continue Republican." The work of the courts, briefly summed up, is as follows: Five cases were tried, of the 400 on the docket; three persons were convicted, though the subsequent action of two of the jurors will probably cause the verdict to fail of its effect; one was acquitted by proving an alibi; two pleaded guilty to technical violations of the election laws, and sentence was suspended in their behalf, and mistrials were entered against 39 defendants. The cost for the pay of jurors and witnesses is estimated at $16,200, and the total cost, including salaries, it is believed will be $25,000.—N. Y. Times.

The Rev. Dr. John C. Waite, at the anniversary of the American Sunday-School Union held in Pittsburg, in speaking of the work done by that Society used these glowing words: "Oh, worthy Society that is made of the best in all the land, capable of larger views, capable of striking hands if need be, together over abysses, sinking all differences and unworthy experiences, and forming a grand unison that this mighty people at last may be trained in God's own ways; that it may be capable of achieving God's purposes. You know as well as I do what these purposes must be, how liberty must stand for one and equality to righteousness [illegible] how God and his knowledge and his truth must saturate the whole idea. Whatever noble things you may form before your minds, it seems to me that this shall be the part of the vision that will be conjured up when you look for the great American result. How shall it be accomplished? Men may say by some resplendent and very tangible and powerful process. This cannot be it. It seems to me that is to be by this slow, persistent process of education; this work, that the American Sunday-School Union is concerned about.

There are two little words in our language which I always admire—Try and Trust. You know not what you can or cannot effect until you try; and if you make your trial in the exercise of trust in God, mountains of imaginary difficulties will vanish as we approach them, and facilities will be afforded which you never anticipated.—Samuel Smiles.

Abstinence from Sin.

The Bible abounds with warnings against the dangers and evils to which all persons, of all ages, characters, and conditions are exposed. There are quite as many cautions in the Scripture as particular precepts and prohibitions. While Christ was loving and tender, as the good Shepherd he was very watchful over all his disciples, and endeavored to guard them against all the dangers with which they must come in contact in this world. So with the apostles. they made it their practice to give special cautions and admonitions to all to whom they spoke or wrote. "Abstain from all appearance of evil." This is Total Abstinence from all sin; not only from sin, but what appears to be sin. In some instances sin, appears as it is. Then appearance and reality are the same. But in a vast number of instances there is a wide difference between the reality and the appearance. Certain things have perhaps more of the appearance than the reality of sin; in other words, they may be sinful only in appearance. They must, however, be avoided. In some cases vice and virtue may seem to approach very near to one another, and it may be very difficult even for some very conscientious persons to determine where holiness, real heart purity ends and sin begins. In all cases where right and wrong, holiness and sin, vice and virtue seem to be so nearly connected (for it is only in appearance, in reality there is a chasm deep and wide between them), every thing that has even the appearance of sin is to be avoided. It is not enough that we abstain from sin in general, nor that we avoid it in particulars; but just so far as any mode of speaking or acting appears doubtful it has the appearance of evil and is to be avoided. The child of God is to be dead indeed unto sin, not only to sin as a whole, but to each and all kinds, forms, and phases of sin. A partial abstinence proves nothing, and in one sense amounts to nothing. There must be a total abstinence from all sin. There must be respect to all of God's commandments. The thoughts of man run in a train, so one always leads to another. It is hardly possible for one thought, word, or action to stand entirely solitary or unconnected. Each is a seed sown. And it is for each person to determine [illegible] to good and what to evil. [illegible] leads to sin has the appearance [illegible] and must be avoided. [illegible] mode of amusement, mode [illegible], or company leads to [illegible] should be avoided. There the abstinence should be total. "Come [illegible] among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing," is God's sole [illegible] of full acceptance and rec[illegible]. It is when the Christian [illegible] light shine that men see his good works and glorify his "Father which is in heaven." It is then that [illegible] walk worthy of God as dear [illegible]. "Dearly beloved," says [illegible], "I beseech you as strangers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts which war against the soul; [illegible] your conversation honest among the Gentiles; that whereas they speak against you as evil doers, they may by your good works which they shall behold glorify God in the day of visitation."

[illegible] of Satan is that [illegible] these things on [illegible] ignorance [illegible] not say, they [illegible] sin that [illegible] the closest ex[illegible] evil upon [illegible] seem to [illegible] or practices, [illegible] all things [illegible] of evil. [illegible] highest [illegible] ob[illegible] and man[illegible] the real [illegible] stand [illegible] and con[illegible] ex[illegible] harm[illegible] from [illegible] and all [illegible] may [illegible] this; [illegible] for [illegible] for [illegible] the [illegible] of [illegible] the [illegible]

ordained; a board of Church extension was formed; the new chapter on temperance was adopted; the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society recognized. Arrangements were made to send out an agent to raise money for a colored school. The annual allowence of each bishop, which includes traveling expenses, was fixed at $3000. The following officers were elected: book-agent, J. B. McFerrin; missionary secretary, R. A. Young; missionary treasurer, D. C. Kelley; Church extension secretary, David Morton; Sunday-school editor, W. G. E Cunnyngham; editor of Nashville Christian Advocate, and book editor, W. P. Harrison. After an earnest debate provision was made to change the name of the Church to "Methodist Episcopal Church in America." The word "South," once so sunny and balmy, so historic, has become a "thorn," a "stone of stumbling," a "rock of offense," a source of weakness, indeed, a positive hindrance to the Church in her work. During this discussion, Rev. D. C. Kelley, D. D, whom the Conference had elected missionary treasurer, referring to the word "South," said that "he found that our present name was retarding our growth. It is a perpetual barrier to our success." Rev. E. K. Miller, D. D., said that "a change is now demanded;" that "a brother transferred to Kansas City from Louisiana hed written to the committee urging the change. To retain the name meant retrogression, decay, and death. To change it means perpetuity, advance, success." Rev. H. D. Hogan, D. D., said that "the greatest barrier to our success is the word 'South.' There is a great prejudice against it. Unless we do something in the direction of a change, we might as well build a Chinese wall around the Church." So that word "South" must be eliminated from the Church. Thus the old landmarks one after another, are being obliterated. "Skin for skin," one once said, "yea, all that a man hath will he give for his life." This desire, so strongly expressed for the removal of the suffix "South" need not be regarded as any reflection upon their past history, but as a purpose to adapt themselves to the present exigencies of the times. The next General Conference is to meet in Richmond, Va., in 1886.

Holiness Miscellany.

We have never seen a doctrinal statement of "Entire Sanctification" that was satisfactory to all classes of readers, and never expect to. In the book before us we have the doctrine stated, first, in that plain matter of fact style so peculiar in all the writings of Dr. Adam Clark; then in that clear, strong, and argumentative way that characterized Richard Watson. With either of these statements of the doctrine all who have ever had any experience on this line will be satisfied. This part of the book is valuable, and will have great influence with all candid minds. But the illustrations of this grace as furnished in the experiences of Doctors Peck, Wood, Cookman, Long, Steel, and Bishop Foster, will be its chief attraction. For nearly forty years we have held to the doctrine that men may be entirely holy in this life; that the depth of depravity as well as the guilt of sin may be washed away in "the blood of the Lamb." But never till 1870, while attending the National Camp Meeting at Hamilton, Mass., did we realize in our personal experience the joy of the great salvation. We have read this book; the doctrinal statements, and the wonderful experiences of these men of God, as here narrated, with the greatest satisfaction. It is not for us to make comparisons between these experiences. They are all precious, and will give direction to those who are "hungering and thirsting after righteousness," and strength to the weak. Rev. John S. Inskip and the National Association for the Promotion of Holiness have done a good work in preparing and sending out this volume. It bears the title Holiness Miscellany, and is sold by J. S. Inskip, 921 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa., at fifty cents. It is remarkably cheap.

The Presbyterians.

The four days discussion of the Presbyterian Church South upon the subject of fraternal relations with the Presbyterian Church North better indicate the real spirit of that body than the resolutions that were adopted. During that discussion many things were said to make good the statement that clergymen in the South [illegible] less inclined to accept the new order of things than business men or the people at large. The Bourbon [illegible] were as fierce and furious as in 1861 and 1862. They did not want fraternal relations re-established at all. There were others who [illegible] to fear, as they did not [illegible] have any action that would [illegible] representation that the [illegible] were sorry [illegible] the rebel[illegible] sembly wanted to make the [illegible] of theirs conditional, so they wrote out what they wanted their Northern brethren to say and presented it as their ultimatum. But the assembly at Springfield were not prepared like parrots to repeat the words dictated to them by their brethren at Atlanta. The Northern assembly had been loyal to the government, and had denounced treason and rebels. They had sent prayers to Heaven and men to the front, for the overthrow of the rebellion, and nurses to the hospitals, and were not prepared to say that they were sorry for all that they had said and done for the preservation of the Union. But they were anxious to have fraternal relations re-established between the two assemblies, and were willing to express regret for all that had been said concerning "schism, heresy, and blasphemy," but they had no sorrow, no regret, for what they had said about "loyalty and rebellion," nor for what they had done for the preservation of the government. And this was acceptable to the Southern assembly, and fraternal relations were re-established between the two assemblies.

Ask My Wife.

Years ago we read of a notorious character who was converted to God. His former associates and companions in sin taunted him with being a hypocrite. He replied: "If you want to know whether I have religion go ask my wife. She will tell you that once I was a miserable vagabond spending all the money I earned in drink. That my children fled from me as they would from a tiger, and hid when I came into the house. And she will tell you that now we have as happy a home as there is on this earth, and that our children watch and wait for my coming. She will tell you that I have good wages, and that I do not spend my money at the saloons. Yes, go ask my wife if you want to know what religion has done for me."

We know of men who would not be willing to refer this matter to their wives. True their wives in correctness of morals, in general intelligence and social culture, in self denying benevolence and unaffected piety, are at once an honor to the church to which they belong, and to the community in which they live. Yet for some mysterious reason they would never refer this question to their wives.

Moral—Christians ought so to live that those who know them best, will have the most confidence in their piety.

There comes to us the journal of one of our missionaries in Peking, China, from which we take the following:

"I take very great delight in the thought that the song of the Cross is sure to be sung in many a Chinese home through the years to come. Many who will not listen to the preaching will listen with pleasure to the singing. It seems to me that every singing is the sowing of a precious seed, and that some time we shall see the fruitage. God hasten the day when the chanting of the priests shall be lost in the swelling anthem that exalts the name of Him who has said "I will be exalted among the heathen;" when instead of the beating of gongs and bells before hideous idols, shall be heard the chiming of sweet bells calling this nation to the worship of Him of whom it was foretold centuries ago, "The idols He shall utterly abolish."

Preaching the gospel is not a profession, like that of being a physician or a lawyer. It is a calling. God calls men. And while it is all right and proper that the preacher should by a course of reading and study prepare his sermons, yet if he would be successful in winning souls to Jesus, he must not spend so much time in his study as to get no time to pay pastoral visits. We think that at least one-fourth of his time he should use in going from house to house looking up the sorrowful and the mourning, speaking comforting words to those that are cast down, calling sinners to repentance, and in doing all that one can do in trying to change this world, now so full of sin, wretchedness, and misery, to a world filled with righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Ghost.

The Alumni Association of Straight University, on Friday evening, May 30, gave their first public exercises at Central Church. They were most gratifying to the friends who were present. But where were the thirty-two white graduates of Straight University, those young men who accepted an education in the same classes, under the same teachers, with their colored fellows? They had discovered that Straight, offered the cheapest facilities for their admission to the bar of the State, and with practical good sense ignored colorphobia, and are now in the enjoyment of the honors and perquisites of members of the legal fraternity. They should not be ashamed to extend the hand of fellowship and encouragement to their colored fellow-students.

"Our Brother in Black" and His Friends.

The following paragraph is from the Central Methodist, Catlettsburg, Ky., a Church South paper:

Surely "our brother in black" is being betrayed in the house of his friends. The universal cry from the North, that the South refuses social recognition to their colored brother, has not only ceased to be heard, but he is receiving worse treatment in that section than was accorded him where better known, and hence better appreciated. Recently Gen'l Robert Smalls, a colored Congressman, was denied entertainment at the Revere House, Boston, because of color; the Hudson River Company refused colored ministers a seat at their tables; the letter-carriers of Toronto, refused to continue in service because a colored man was appointed, while there are numerous other instances of similar treatment. Perhaps the "brother" is not now as important a factor as formerly, and hence must take his chances.

The public has not been informed by the vigilant Associated Press agents (who almost always give partial statements of facts where the Negro is concerned) whether the rebellious letter-carriers of Toronto were dismissed, submitted to better influences, or were successful in their mean and cowardly assault on the colored brother. Queen Victoria has granted social courtesies to colored men, and the nearness of Toronto to the conditions of American snobbery may somewhat excuse this seeming exception to the general British rule.

The president of the Hudson-River Company disapproved the conduct of his extra-officious employe, apologized to the ministers, and they by resolution thanked him for his manly course.

We have before us a copy of the Boston Commonwealth, and it contains a description of the reception of Gen. Robert Smalls, of South Carolina. It says editorially:

It is in execrable spirit for any hotel-keeper in Boston, at this day, to deny rooms to a respectable colored man; and yet this was what landlord Ferrin's agents, at the Revere House, did, on Saturday last, to Gen. Robert Smalls, the renowned pilot of Charleston, S. C., who, early in the war, run the rebel barriers and turned over the steamer "Planter" to the Union navy—an act that was resplendent for pluck and courage as any during the contest, and wor which the whole loyal country as aglow at the time. The poor excuse was offered that there were no rooms to be had, as spring replenishing was going on, though, if the story be correct, a white man, sent by the colored people twenty minutes after, got the refusal of a room when wanted. There must be a strata of ineffable meanness in a public purveyor who can deliberately treat a respectable man or woman in this way. It was to the lasting credit of Col. Walcott, of the Vendome, that when he heard of this outrage he tendered the hospitalities of his house to Gen. Smalls and his escort. Citizens of Boston that have any sheme at such transactions will make a proper discrimination when they have occasion to recommend our hotels to their friends, or engage them for club or social festivities.

There are men in Boston, who imagine they are on the road to wealth, when they bow to face prejudices. Judge Hilton sought to run a hotel at Saratoga, New York, and exclude the Jews. He did not prosper with that hotel, and has not with any other business since. There was a hotel in Boston which did receive Gen. Smalls, and there is something more to add to the credit of that city. Gen. Smalls was tendered a reception at the Baptist church and the building was filled. The Governor of the State presided, and delivered the speech of welcome. After the exercises the company repaired to the vestry, where a banquet was served. Imagine such a thing taking place anywhere near Catlettsburg, Ky! Gen. Smalls, in his speech, recited the interesting historical facts that in the war for independence the first to fall had been a colored man; in the Seminole war the colored men had given the whites all the assistance in their power; in the war of 1812 they had not been found wanting; and in the war of the rebellion they had freely given life and home for their country.

We hope Bro. Meek will publish such of the facts above given as were probably not known to him at the time of writing, and affect the statements of his paragraph. Let the interior of Kentucky be informed of what is going on in the outside world. He is mistaken when he speaks of "the universal cry from the North" for the social recognition of the colored brother. He has heard no such cry, but he has heard, and will continue to hear that the constitution and laws of the country relative to the civil and political rights of citizenship must and shall be obeyed. What is meant by this is clearly defined by the Lewiston Journal, published by an ex-Governor and Congressman from Maine:

The attempt of Mr. Tucker and Democratic organs to represent that the Republicans are trying to force equal rights for the colored man at the South, while they deny it at the North, has no foundation. The Republicans demand at the North as well as the South equal rights for the colored man before the law—an equal right to vote, to have his vote counted, to have his children educated, to have his life, liberty, and property protected, and to enjoy the advantages of institutions and conveyances and other conveniences supported at the public charge, or made public carriers and purveyors by law. So far Republicans affirm that black and white, rich and poor are entitled to equal privileges and protection North and South, East and West.

Beyond this limit law does not and cannot reach. Equality of mental capacity, equality of property, equality of income, equality of social condition, equality of attainments—these are impossibilities in this life where we find men with such a wide difference in God-given faculties and tastes. Because we demand that the most humble coal heaver shall have equal rights before the law, it is not necessary that we should invite him to our social gatherings or entertainments. We have no right to intrude ourself into any social circle without an invitation. Because we claim that a railroad chartered for public use shall allow a colored as well as a white man to ride on its trains, it does not follow that he has the right to participate in our social festivities. Equality before the law is one thing; social equality is a very different thing. The former is the right of every American citizen. The latter is the right of no one.

Will the great Teacher from whose lips fell the parable of the good Samaritan, and whose disciples are commanded to minister to all men, be pleased with the record of a Church, that preached as it claims, to a multitude of bondmen, to the end, by its own admission, that when the shackles were broken by others they should nearly all desert its fold? Does it not indicate something wrong in the practice and policy of that Church? The light which has partially dawned in Dr. Haygood may yet reach Bro. Meek.

Rust University.

Just as we go to press we receive the following telegram:

HOLLY SPRINGS, Miss., June 5, 1882.
Editor SOUTHWESTERN:
Board of trustees annual meeting changed name from Shaw to Rust University. W. W. HOOPER.

Whatever may be thought of this change in Cincinnati, and despite any protest founded in the natural modesty of dear Dr. Rust, we are confident it will be everywhere hailed with rejoicing. It is not proposed to allow a university bearing that honored name to suffer for want of support.

The Pittsburg Colored Citizen, Rev. T. J. Smith, editor, is a new paper, with a good appearance.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—The wife of Major B. M. Harrod died in New Orleans on the 1st.

—Bishop Foss is a little better. The physicians think the crisis has passed.

—Ex-President Hayes has been appointed Chairman of the Board of Distributors of the Slater Fund for the colored people of the South.

—Mr. John T. Roberts, Assistant Editor of the Northern Christian Advocate, was married on the evening of May 18 at Scriba, N. Y., to Miss Libbie Snyder.

—The post office address of Rev. Thomas M. Mason, principal of Walden Seminary, for the summer will be Francesville, Indiana. The school closed May 26th. The year was spent pleasantly.

—Miss Josephine Cowgill, missionary of the Woman's Home Missionary Society, left the city by steamer, last Saturday evening, for a vacation in Ohio. She expects to resume her efficient labors here in the fall.

—Professor J. M. Williams. late of Wilmington Conference, and Principal of the Female Seminary, has been transferred to the Maine conference, and appointed by Bishop Andrews to the pastorate of Pine street Church, Portland

—Dr. J. F. McKinley, Professor of Histology and Microscopy in the Meharry Medical Department of the Central Tennessee College, Nashville, Tennessee, visited us last week. He was on his way to Texas, to look out for openings for graduates of the College.

—Rev. Charles B. Galloway, of Mississippi, whose writings have frequently appeared in its columns, succeeds Bishop Linus Parker as editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. The formal change was effected on the first instant. Editor Galloway will not take up his residence here until fall.

—Senator Hoar presented and received the signatures of sixty Senators to a letter addressed to Senator Hill of Georgia, expressing satisfaction at the news of his improved condition, and their affectionate regard for his courage and patience under severe trial. This is a pleasing exhibition of Senatorial courtesy.

—We learn from the Kansas Methodist that Rev. Felix Landor, pastor of the Asbury M. E. Church, North Topeka, died on Friday morning, May 19. Bro. Landor was formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference, in which he has many warm friends. He endured considerable persecution from bulldozers, and went to Kansas to enjoy the rights and privileges of a freeman. He was a faithful and earnest Christian.

—Col. Wm. M. Barwell of New Orleans is being urged for appointment as a member of the Tariff Commission. President Arthur could not select an abler, worthier or more competent man for the place from this part of the country. We doubt if any other citizen of the South possesses equal knowledge of the subject with which the Commission will have to deal or of the bearings of the tariff upon the interests and industries of the people of the Southern States. — Donaldsonville Chief.

— General Garibaldi, liberator of Italy, died at Caprera, on the 2d, of bronchitis. Condemned to death at the age of 27 for engaging in an attempt to overthrow the government of Sardinia, he was next heard of in charge of a cholera hospital at Marseilles from which the nurses had fled in dismay; then in the service of the Bey of Tunis; in 1836 struggling in behalf of the Republic of Rio Grande in South America; assailing, at the head of an Italian legion, the Dictator Rosas of Buenos Ayres, and in 1848 among the defenders of Rome, whose defeat by the French sent him once more into exile, after enduring with heroic fortitude the most terrible hardships. His residence on Staten Island, N. Y., engaged in the business of manufacturing soap and candles—was irksome to a man of his active temperament, and he returned shortly after to Caprera, where he engaged in farming. In the war of 1859, between France and Italy against Austria, Garibaldi distinguished himself as a leader of the Chasseurs of the Alps, an independent flying column of some 17,000 Italians. His daring enterprise, which resulted in the capture of Palermo and his subsequent entry into Naples with Victor Emanuel in triumph, was the realization of his most ardent wish—the union of the Italian States under one government. He served France during the great war with Germany. He always refused to accept office, and died at his island home, respected by all the world. The French Assembly adjourned in his honor, and the Italian government will order imposing ceremonies.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

The Vesta Social Circle, connected with the First St. M. E Church in this city, of which Sister Elisabeth Cochrane is president, and Bro. Andrew Jackson secretary, is an organization having the welfare of the pastor and his family always before them, and by its members he is never forgotten in his work and labor of love. They have made their present pastor, Rev. T. G. Montgomery, two very pleasant calls, and each time left him material tokens of their love and care for him and his family. At their first call Bro, Madison Gant was the speaker, and in a few well chosen words presented the pastor with presents too numerous to mention, but all valuable. Upon the second visit, Sister Cochran herself was the speaker, and in behalf of the Circle presented the pastor with ten dollars in cash, and it was agreed then and there that the pastor should have a new coat in which to shine. For these tokens of love Bro. Montgomery desires to express his thanks to all the members to the Vesta Social Circle.

MISSISSIPPI.

R. Snell, Athens: "We have built a new church on the circuit this year, and paid for it. We are at work for Shaw University."

TEXAS.

W. Goodwin, Goliad: "I was called away from my work Feb 27, on account of sickness, and returned April 13. During my absence there was a grand revival carried on by Prof. C. P. Westbrook, which resulted in 48 converts. The like has never been witnessed since the establishment of the church here. There is great interest manifested among the young men and women. We desire an interest in your prayers."

TENNESSEE.

G. N. Johnson, Galway: "Our church has steadily increased in membership since conference. Nineteen joined the Church. Of this number twelve have been converted in the past six weeks. Our Sabbath-school is in a flourishing condition, numbering about fifty in regular attendance. The teachers meet every Friday night to prepare the lesson for Sabbath. The officers and teachers are laboring hard to make it a success. The first Sabbath in each month is devoted to missionary collections. We have organized a Band of Hope, a temperance society, which meets every Sabbath evening. In connection with this we have the children to commit our Catechism to memory. We are a little embarrassed financially, but our motto is onward and upward, never intending to stop while heaven is in our view. We hope that every sinner around Galway may be saved by the blood of the Crucified One this conference year. Pray for us. Rev. S. A. Samuel preached for us last Sabbath."

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

"Our Brother in Black."

BY REV. G. E. CUNNINGHAM.

The above is Rev. Dr. A. G. Haygood's expression. I wish to borrow it. I am sure he will make no objection. I see it is being handed around from one to another with considerable relish. It is the well known title to his book which discusses questions relating to the colored people. For Dr. Haygood it is a happy expression, but perhaps for others unhappy, except when borrowed. The doctor evidently feels constrained, for good reasons to himself no doubt, to "Go Forward." Hence we praise rather than condemn his book. May he reach the "Promised Land" of one universal brotherhood. The title will finally lose its significance. If it helps to educate public sentiment up to the true idea of brotherhood among Adam's family, then I suppose the Doctor will gladly consent for the title to perish, because it is the principle more than the title that Reformers work for. I am opposed to race prejudice; some men are not. The Bible teaches the unity of the race. I, therefore, conclude that I am right. My "likes" and "dislikes" toward a man grow out of the question of character, instead of color. And I am prepared to co-operate with a man according to the question of ability, instead of color. Let us proceed on these two principles. First, I love to see such principles as purity and honesty and truth in one's character; they may exist by the grace of God, through faith in Christ. If a man can measure up to this standard in point of character, then he is worthy of my fellowship. If I fall below him in moral worth and purity then he should be respected and trusted before me, though my skin is white and his may be black, red or yellow. Let character be the uppermost question in your mind in measuring a man's worth and influence. Are all men equal in a moral sense? Hear this: "All men are sinners." Equal at this point. Salvation from sin is offered through Jesus Christ. Men reach a saved state by repentance and faith. Some have reached it. Then they are equal at that point. If there is anything unequal between the point of a sinful state and a saved state it is either because of a man's own personal sins or the consummate wickedness of others. That examples, attaching blame to the one or the other cause, do exist no one will deny. The man who is ignorant of moral light and duty may be an eye-sore to society, but society can not ignore him because he must be treated either as accountable or unaccountable. If he is to blame for his condition then the moral line may be drawn; but if he is not to blame for his condition, then speedy steps should be token to lead him up to the feeling of moral obligation. This later thing must be done before the moral line can be drawn. The white people of this nation have had good advantages. The colored people have had great disadvantages. Since Abraham Lincoln's proclamation of freedom the Methodist Episcopal Church has sought the salvation of this people morally and intellectually. The results are great and highly gratifying. Thank God for such results. Our Church is now providing for the poor whites. Their condition is just beginning to be recognized by the Church, it seems. Special appeals are made in their behalf. This work should awaken no jealousy between the two races. The South needs educational facilities among all its people. Our Church is laying plans for this kind of work. This work will bring a man's standing and moral worth in society up on the question of character. But before this can be reached preparatory school and moral work must be done. Then men must stand on their moral merits. Patience, love and organized labor will hasten the day.

Second. I am prepared to work at the same thing and in the same relation with my brother according to the question of intelligence or ability. As in the first question, character may be lacking either in one or the other. So, in the second question, ability may be lacking either in one or the other. The first is essential to our intimate fellowship; the second is necessary to our work. A man may possess both character and ability; another may possess character only; but they are united in love and faith because such principles spring from character. The first man is called by the Church into larger fields of usefulness. This is done because he is fitted in character and ability for these higher responsibilities. The second man remains at his post in the smaller fields. This does not separate the two men in point of character. Their fellowship remains the same. Purity is a vital principle uniting their hearts. Their work is soul saving. One is a

If a pastor neglects to do his duty to the church he is appointed to serve, he should not complain if the church desires a change of pastors when Conference comes. Churches need pastors that will do the work of the pastorate. This [illegible] and no pastor should think of doing less. Faithful pastors are generally desired by their hearers.

For Wakefulness at night, there is no better remedy. During the change of life no female should be without it. It quiets the Nervous System and gives rest, comfort and nature's sweet sleep.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Alcoholism, Drunkenness and the habit of Opium Eating. These degrading habits are by far the worst evils that have ever befallen suffering humanity. Thousands die annually from these noxious drugs. The drunkard drinks liquor not because he likes it, but for the pleasure of drinking and treating his friends, little thinking that he is on his road to ruin. Like the Opium Eater, he first uses the drug in small quantities as a harmless antidote. The soothing influence of the drug takes strong hold upon its victim, leading him on to his own destruction. The habits of Opium Eating and Liquor Drinking are precisely what eating is to alimentiveness, as over-eating first inflames the stomach, which redoubles its cravings until it paralyzes both the stomach and appetite. So every drink of liquor or dose of opium, instead of satisfying, only adds to its fierce fires, until it consumes the vital force and then itself. Like the gluttonous tape-worm, it cries: "Give, give, give!" but never enough until its own capacity devours itself. Samaritan Nervine gives instant relief in all such cases. It produces sleep, quiets the nerves, builds up the nervous system, and restores body and mind to a healthy condition.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Nervous Dyspepsia, Palpitation of the Heart, Asthma, Bronchitis, Scrofula, Syphilis, diseases of the Kidneys and all diseases of the urinary organs. Nervous debility, caused by the indiscretions of youth, permanently cured by the use of this invaluable remedy. To you, young, middle-aged and old men, who are covering your sufferings as with a mantle by silence, look up, you can be saved by timely efforts, and make ornaments to society, and jewels in the crown of your Maker, if you will. Do not keep this a secret longer, until it saps your vitals, and destroys both body and soul. If you are thus afflicted, take DR. RICHMOND'S Samaritan Nervine. It will restore your shattered nerves, arrest premature decay, impart tone and energy to the whole system.

Women everywhere use Parker's Ginger Tonic, because they have learned by experience that it overcomes despondency, indigestion, weakness in the back and kidneys and other troubles of the sex.—Home Journal.

Mr. Barnum, the great showman has been making a temperance speech in which, among other things, he says: "Alchohol is indigestible. There is no more nutriment in it than a pound of ten-penny nails. It is just as sensible to drink the glass itself as to drink what it contains. Some people think it is a fine social thing to say when they meet their friends, 'How are you my boy? Let's take a drink.' It would be a more sensible thing for a man to go out with his pockets full of baked potatoes, and say, when he meets a friend, 'How are you my boy? Let's take a potato.'" Upon the subject of total abstinence the head of Mr. Barnum is level.

"You are as full of airs as a music box," is what a young man said to a girl who refused to let him see her home. "That may be," was the reply, "but I don't go with a crank."

A WONDERFUL and SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.

These Glasses are chemically treated in the process of manufacture, and possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analyzed by American and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and can in some cases restore the sight if used in time, but in no case can the eye become impaired by their use, for the following reasons:

1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye, completely doing away with that tiresome sensation that is usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours' use.

2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.

3. The chemicals keep the glasses cold, and the result is that the optic nerves are always cool, doing away with any feverish sensation to the eye.

4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, with no distressing or tiresome sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.

assigns as causes the facts for which man and man alone is responsible.

1. It tells us that men are lost because they make no effort to secure salvation at all corresponding to the importance of the subject. Christ tells us that many would be shut out of heaven at last because they would not "strive to enter in at the straight gate." They would "seek" in a half-hearted, careless way and fail; fail for the want of effort such as the evil to be shunned and the good to be secured demanded. The "man who built his house upon the sand" (Matt. vii: 26, 27) wanted the benefits of a house, but he chose for a site the place where the digging would be easiest. He wanted to be religious, but in the easiest possible way. It is no wonder the flood swept him away. Earnest, persevering effort is the price of anything worth securing. The conditions of salvation do not encourage a half-hearted, easy-going style of life. The Christian cannot consult his ease, nor wince at self-renunciation, nor shrink from self-denying toil. He has business on his hands to which all else is and must be secondary.

2. Men lose their souls through sins of omission. They "neglect the great salvation." (Heb. ii: 3) They bury their talents, that is, neglect to use them. (Matt. xxv: 27.) They "call not on the name of the Lord." (Ps. xiv: 4) They neglect to "put on the wedding garment." (Matt. xxii: 3 11) They did not feed the hungry and [illegible]

they rejected the light, and the things belonging to their peace were hidden from their eyes. (Luke xix: 42) The young ruler had a personal invitation from Christ, the Jewish Sanhedrim heard Stephen's sermon and Felix and Agrippa heard Paul. They did not improve their privileges. Christ speaks not less really to men now. His Providence, His spirit, and His messengers are at work. Hundreds are passing through times of special visitation, to yield themselves to God or to fall back into a deeper and more confirmed darkness. To many it may well be said, "Yet a little while is the light with you." (John xii: 35.)

8. And some are lost through apostasy, (Heb. vi: 4 6; x: 29,) the beginning of which is in a cold, worldly, backslidden state.

Plainly enough, the causes which are soon to end in heaven or hell are mightily at work in us now. They will produce their legitimate results. Wishing for a place in heaven when we are dead, will amount to little while we live on in neglect of Christ on earth. We shall reap that which we sow. Every man has a friend in God, but a terrible enemy in himself. The surest prophecy of what a man is to be is what he now is. To what is he devoted? Where are his affections? What is his supreme object? Thither he is going.—Northern Christian Advocate.

West Texas Conference Seminary.

The West Texas Conference Seminary has just closed a successful session. On account of the inability of the Freedmen's Aid Society to render the necessary help, and the crop failure crippling home support, school was not opened last fall. At the last session of the Conference, the presence and promises of Dr. Rust and Dr. Hartzell imparted new life, and so revived their flagging courage, that over $5000 was pledged by the preachers in less than an hour for the purpose of erecting buildings for their school. It was also determined to resume school work, and Dr. Rust secured the re-appointment of Rev. G. O. Richardson as principal. This appointment displeased some of our influential preachers, as they felt that Bro. Richardson had forsaken them in the hours of deepest distress. The facts, however, were these: Prof. G. O. Richardson had labored five years for the school; rented buildings, hired teachers, met all expenses, including furniture, fuel, printing, and every thing from the tuitions, with less than than $100 a year from the Freedmen's Aid Society, and nothing from Conference. He gave notice that his personal resources were exhausted, and that unless some reasonable assurance of support could be given him he would have to look elsewhere. Nothing definite being presented, Bishop Haven's advice was sought. His reply came in the shape of a transfer and appointment in the Texas Conference. Prof. Richardson [illegible] spent the summer vacation in canvassing and lecturing in behalf of the school. Many students came, and being disappointed at not finding him at the head of the school, went to Tillotson Institute. This is an institution of the Congregational Church, supported by the American Board of Missions. Their building was just completed, furnished, and ready to garner the harvest we had been years cultivating. Some felt that the demand for our school had been supplied, but when adult members of our Church and children of our Church, boarding in Tillotson, were allowed to attend no services and Sunday-school outside the Congregational services of the Institute, it became evident that the American Board of Missions was intent on reaping a harvest for their denomination while diffusing general intelligence. This consideration roused many members of the Wesley Chapel M. E. Church, and they received Prof. Richardson and family with cordiality. Not so with the preachers, [illegible]

[illegible] property contributed not a little.

The school gained friends to the last, and the closing exercises surpassed the most exalted expectations of our friends. They were pronounced a success by competent judges. By the blessing of the Lord, sixty-nine pupils were enrolled, and good feeling prevails on the part of patrons, students, and teachers. It is our opinion that all interested would be pleased to have Prof. Richardson re-appointed. *

For the Southwestern.

From Jeffersonville, Ind.

The District Conference, Indianapolis District, R. W. S. Hammond, P. E., was held here May 30th to June 2d, and was a perfect success. The excellent programme prepared by the elder was pretty well carried out, and the attendance was pretty general, when the extent of the territory is considered; besides, the brethren from the charges in Louisville came over as visitors. The quarterly meeting for Jeffersonville, Rev. S. S. G. Turner preacher in charge, took place the preceding Saturday and Sunday, and was attended with happy results. Gen. Jas. A. Ekin, commandant of the great military depot, quartermaster's department U. S. A., situated directly in the neighborhood of Bro. Turner's church, sent to the body a written invitation to attend the decoration services at New Albany, six miles below here, and also, at their convenience to visit the quartermaster's depot. This was acknowledged by vote, and a written acceptance sent to the General. Thursday, June 1st, led by Elder Hammond, the body paid their respects in person and were cordially received by General Ekin who responded in an encouraging speech to the one made by the elder, referring to incidents in the past. After viewing the beautiful grounds, inspecting the immense storehouses of Uncle Sam, visiting the museums, engine rooms and offices, they returned and gave a [illegible] song, which was also handsomely received by the General in words of commendation, wishing them glorious success in their work of saving souls and advancing their race, when he asked that the good old doxology, "Praise God," etc., might be sung. This was done with a will, and Bro. Hammond pronounced the benediction. It was an event to the brethren which will not soon be forgotten.

The high schools of our city have just graduated ten white and three colored students. The Democratic press, even, acknowledges that H. F. Taylor, a young colored student, had the highest general average, nearly 100, of the class of thirteen, and delivered the best oration that came from the high schools. The colored students in their examinations and graduating services proved they had brains, outstripping the pale faces. Rev. Bro. Hammond, being present at the commencement on Friday night, was called out and recited his original poem, "Ethiopia's Hope," which was rendered with thrilling effect, every one pronouncing it a fine production. More anon.

Truly yours. W. H. O.

Prevention of Disease.

An old saying, but a true one for all time, is: "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." We live in an age of progression and discovery, and when persons devote their time to originating or perfecting any system or mode of living that will ward off or prevent disease they may justly be considered benefactors of the human family.

My attention was some months ago called to the claims of the "needles" or tops of Florida pines for bedding, and, being impressed favorably with the idea, I investigated, becoming satisfied as the outcome of inquiries, that the use of this substance in mattresses, pillows, etc., has had a beneficial effect on all who have made the experiment of introducing such articles so made into their homes. These pine needles act in the mass as a preventive of disease, also eradicate it when it has fastened itself upon the system. I have called upon persons who have used the mattresses in cases of rheumatism, kidney difficulties, nervous afflictions, weak lungs and other forms of disease, and have uniformly found a universal expression of gratitude for the benefit received from the use of this material as bedding. I have tested it in several instances, one being a case of restlessness, and have found good results to follow from its use, and consider it superior to other materials for mattresses, on the ground of its dryness and electrical properties, as well as its durability. It contains the pine fragrance in a great degree, which is medicinal in its effect. I predict that the mattresses will, in the near future, come into general use in hospitals, hotels and families.—Dr. A. S. Heyward.

The Tariff Commission.

The following is the text of the tariff commission bill:

Be it enacted, etc., That a commission is hereby created to be called the "tariff commission," to consist of nine members.

Sec. 2. That the President of the United States shall, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, appoint nine commissioners from civil life, one of whom—the first named—shall be the President of the commission. The commissioners shall receive as compensation for their services each at the rate of $10 per day when engaged in active duty and active travelling and other necessary expenses. The commission shall have power to employ a stenographer and a messenger, and the foregoing compensation and expenses to be audited and paid by the Secretary of the Treasury out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Sec. 3. That it shall be the duty of said commission to take into consideration and to thoroughly investigate all the various questions relating to the agricultural, commercial, mercantile, manufacturing, mining and industrial interests of the United States, so far as the same may be necessary to the establishment of a judicious tariff or a revision of the existing tariff upon a scale of justice to all interests; and for the purpose of fully examining the matters which may come before it. Said commission, in the prosecution of its inquiries, is empowered to visit such different portions and sections of the country as it may deem advisable.

Sec. 4. That the commission shall make to Congress final report of the results of its investigation, and the testimony taken in the course of the same, not later than the first Monday of December, 1882, and it shall cause the testimony taken to be printed from time to time and distributed to the members of Congress by the public printer, and shall also cause to be printed for the use of Congress 2,000 copies of its final report, together with the testimony.

The following is the commission appointed by the President:

Wheeler, of New York; Hayes, of Massachusetts; Oliver, of Pennsylvania; Garland, of Illinois; Ambler, of Ohio; Phelps, of Missouri; Underwood, of South Carolina; Porter, of the District of Columbia, and [illegible], of Louisiana.

From Our Mission Rooms.

Rev. Thomas Craven, superintendent of the Lucknow Press, North India Mission, arrived in New York with his wife and four children, May 20, by the City of Rome. He left Bombay, March 10th, having spent some time on the continent of Europe and in England. Mr. Craven comes home after ten years service in excellent health, partly to accompany his family, that he may place his children at school, and hoping to further by his presence here the interests of the mission. He will probably return to his field of labor in December, and meanwhile holds himself in readiness for any work which may be required of him among the churches for the cause. Any letters sent to him at 805 Broadway, New York, will be forwarded. He expects to be present at the commencement exercises of the Northwestern University, Evanston, Illinois, June 10–20. He will also render service at Chatauqua in the latter part of July and early in August.

Mr. Craven is full of zeal and hopefulness concerning the mission work in India, and has much to say of its progress. He is particularly interested in the Sunday-school and press work. The necessity for the latter is constantly growing, as the activity of the Hindoo and Mohammedan press is unabating and is flooding India with a pest tide of influences hostile to Christianity. The reports of special progress in our North India Mission during the past year are confirmed by Mr. Craven. He agrees with others in believing that there are strong indications of the early and general conversion of the whole Chumar caste to Christianity. He gives the following distinct reasons for this belief: 1. The increasing spirituality of the converts of this caste. 2. The bold manner in which several of the number have recently renounced Hindooism. 3. The fact that the great body of the caste has by this time been thoroughly penetrated by the pastoral visitations of the missionaries and their assistants. The native preachers and helpers have been very faithful and persevering in this work. A great multitude of families have now each some relative, near or distant, connected with Christianity. It has been the policy of the mission thus to persistently follow up the advantages gained within a given social strata, and so avail itself of the very power of caste influences to break the spell of heathenism.

An essential demand of the mission now is that of trained men to take care of the number of native converts which may be expected. The school work therefore comes into special prominence. The Centennial School, at Lucknow, under the efficient direction of Rev. B. H. Bodley, is progressing finely. It has over 150 pupils. As already reported in these columns, a new and much larger school building will soon be erected, with liberal government aid, Rs. 5000, with an additional Rs. 5000 of local contribution. It is to be hoped that Mr. Bodley's earnest desire will be realized of developing the institution into a fine Christian college through the awakened interest and vigorous support of the people of India. The government is tending toward a policy of larger attention to primary education, leaving the higher education to be conducted by private and mission enterprise.

Rev. A. G. Cheney, who has been pastor of the English church at Nynee Tal, North India Mission, arrived at New York, May 17. He will render excellent service to any church or assembly which may secure his services for an address on the subject of the Indian Missions.

Key-Note.—Trinity M. E. Church, Chicago, made a magnificent advance last year. They were so well pleased with the result, that in the collection just taken they have made another advance of twenty-five per cent, giving over $2500 for missions that year.

The House Committee and Prohibition Memorials.

Perhaps there never has been a time in the history of Louisiana when there was a more general interest in the cause of Temperance than now. Petitions from all parts of the State have been sent to the Legislature asking that body to propose an amendment to the Constitution of the State prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors, except for medicinal purposes. The House Committee on the Constitution has reported unfavorably on these numerous memorials, and asserted that the experience of the State of Maine proves that legislation on such a matter is a failure. With this conclusion all the liquor dealers in the State will rejoice, and say to the Committee "Well done, ye good and faithful servants!" But the friends of humanity, who are seeking the general welfare, and the removal of positive and costly evils to society, are disappointed. We have a few documents at hand to test the correctness of their statement.

Special reference is made to Maine. An examination of the facts in the case will show the folly and fallacy of such utterances, and afford a striking illustration of the truthfulness of the statement that it is almost impossible for the advocates of the whisky traffic to tell the truth on the subject; almost as impossible as it is for certain jurors and witnesses not to perjure themselves.

Judge Clifford, of the United States Supreme Court, recently deceased, speaking of Maine, says: "...the operation of the prohibitory law there has been a great diminution of crime." Judge Woodbury Davis, of the State Superior Court, says: "The Maine law is enforced far more than ever a [illegible] law was." Ex-Governor [illegible] says: "There is not a distillery or brewery in all the State. [illegible] of all kinds has been greatly [illegible], in many places there is [illegible] use for jails or for poorhouses."

We have plenty of evidence of [illegible] of a prohibitory [illegible]. Governor [illegible], in his [illegible] in 1880, [illegible] sale of the prohibition of intoxicating liquors.

In Kansas, four counties have already given notice that their jails are empty. The commitments to the penitentiary in Kansas in 1880 were 290, in 1881, under prohibition, 183, a good beginning, certainly, for the first year. Greeley, Colorado, was founded on prohibition. Their present population is over 3000. There is not a place where liquor is sold. They have no paupers, no criminals, and no police. Happy Greeley! Vineland, New Jersey, has over 10,000 inhabitants, but not a saloon; absolute prohibition prevails; they have no crime, criminals, or poverty; but instead they have twenty school-houses, twelve churches, and one of the most prosperous communities in the United States. In Georgia, a large number of counties have adopted local option and are under prohibition. The grand jury of Carroll county in a recent presentment says: "The prohibition movement in this county is a grand success."

Breabrook, Ireland, has over 4000 inhabitants, but no dram shop, poor-house, pawn-shop or police station. Lord Hamilton wrote of Tryone county, Ireland, in 1870, "No public house is allowed, there is not a single policeman in the district, the poor rates are not half what they used to be, and the magistrates testify as to the great absence of crime." The county has a population of over 11,000.

In 1880 the Brewers' Congress of the United States held its session at Buffalo, N. Y. President Betters in his address said that "only seven barrels of beer were produced in the State of Maine the previous year, and that Maine had now disappeared altogether from the list of beer-producing States." And he might have added, almost from the list of beer-consuming States. The fact is Maine has a less number of convicts or criminals in proportion to her population than any other State in the Union. Taking criminals of all classes, high and low and she has 25 per cent. less than New Hampshire or Massachusetts, 50 per cent. less than New York, New Jersey or Maryland, and not one-seventh as many as California or Louisiana. The experience of Maine and all other places where it has been tried proves that prohibition has been, and is now, a great success. One of the prominent speakers of the last Brewers' Congress, held recently at Chicago, said that "the prohibition movement had been a history of success," and the Congress was called upon "to use all the means which God and nature had put in their hands to thwart its adversaries"—referring to the prohibitionists.

These facts from Maine and elsewhere as to the success of the prohibitory movement are clear-cut, and cannot with the least degree of success be controverted by our [illegible], who, forsooth, would [illegible] the gates of death and hell [illegible] here in Louisiana because prohibition has been a failure in Maine. Had this wonderful committee reported non-concurrence, that would have been a little unfortunate for them in this age of the world, but when they report [illegible], and assign as a reason a statement which every well informed person knows there is not a single grain of truth in, they [illegible] not expect intelligent temperance people to be satisfied with [illegible] conduct. It is almost impossible to imagine upon what source [illegible] committee drew for its information, if it was not near the spigot [of] a beer cask or from an attorney [of] the distillers and brewers.

Temperance for July 2, 1882.

Dr. Vincent, as Secretary of our Sunday-school Union, and the Bishops have designated Sunday, July 2, 1882, as a Sunday Temperance Day in all the Sunday-schools of our Church in the land. And while a temperance service is to be prepared for the occasion the regular lesson on "Home" need not be omitted. It is earnestly hoped that all of our preachers, superintendents and teachers will co-operate in making this a memorable day in all of our Zion. The editor of this paper has been in the active ministry over thirty years. During this time he has given many of his leisure hours to the investigation and discussion of the temperance question, and publicly and privately in the villages and cities of New England, where he has lived, and in the South, he has contended for temperance, and whatever has looked an advance in this direction he has hailed with doxologies. July 2, 1882, is a sort of new departure, a step in the right direction. If the "ministers, superintendents, teachers and scholars everywhere co-operate" on that day they will make it "thunder all around the horizon in the interest of temperance." There is need for immediate and persistent action in this direction. All over this land there are hundreds of little waifs whose ways are now so crooked that they can hardly find the straight and narrow path. The land is filled, and badly defiled with bad liquor now. Drunkard makers are having things pretty much their way, and never were more successful in making drunkards than at present. It is high time for the people of God to hurry up and hurry on in this work of saving the young. During the past year sixty thousand sixty full regiments have completed their course, and now lie in the drunkards' grave, and to-day there is another army fully as strong marching on in the same direction. From whence do all the recruits of this mighty host come? To this question there can be but one answer. They are recruited from our children. We pause for a moment to look at the sixty thousand who have been sacrificed during the past twelve months, at the sixty thousand homes filled with shame and sorrow, at the twice sixty thousand hearts upon which there has settled an awful weight of darkness, to say nothing of the crime, the poverty, the pauperism, the worse than beastly brutality, the wild waste of vital and financial resources, and cannot resist the conclusion that there is no question before the American Churches of to-day that in any way compares in importance with the temperance question, and that calls so loud for united and persistent action. Let, then, the friends of Christ, ministers, superintendents, teachers, and scholars, of whatever race, family, or color, all unite, put their hands to the temperance plow, and take no look back. The times are auspicious. The things of earth and the things of eternity unite in calling for honest and earnest action.

Assaults and Reprisals.

The New-York World, on hearing that President Arthur had appointed Hon. Duncan F. Kenner, of Louisiana, on the National Tariff Commission, remarked, with the taste and discretion usual among partisan journals: "Mr. Kenner showed in the Returning Board of Louisiana the reckless indifference to national interests which he is expected to exercise in behalf of the sugar interests." It will be some time, undoubtedly, before the explanation can reach clear round the World's circle of readers that the World slandered the wrong man on this occasion. The Times-Democrat calls it a "very funny error." The World now knows there are two Kenners.

About the same time, the Chicago Inter Ocean was paying its compliments to Henry Watterson's great paper in this fashion:

When the Courier-Journal intends to crush somebody it should always be sure to light on the right man. Referring to Congressman Mackey, of South Carolina, who has just been admitted to a seat in the House of Representatives, it says:

[illegible]

It so happens that there are two [illegible] in South Carolina, one a [illegible] man, who never [illegible] Nebraska in his life, and has been given a seat in the House of Representatives, of which he has been twice defrauded by Democratic bulldozers and ballot-box stuffers.

The instances above mentioned go to show that the public should be slow in accepting as true personal assaults upon public men, as they are too often injudiciously made; and while serving party ends momentarily, they re-act by forcing honorable men out of active politics and useful public service.

Owing to race prejudices the State of Louisiana has attempted to run two State Universities—the lion's share of patronage going to the one for white people, at Baton Rouge; a small pittance to go to one for people of color, located at present nowhere. The negro is thus virtually defrauded of his share of higher education from the public treasury. Nor is this all; the university for whites suffers for want of funds because it receives its appropriation in depreciated warrant. How long is this farce to be kept up? Why not consolidate the funds, and support one university of the highest class, in accordance with the laws of this country, instead of this sickly attempt to divide a household that should be united in the favors and enjoyment of citizenship?

Editor Gilmore, of the Sugar Bowl, says: "We rode almost the entire length of Bayou Sale, St. Mary parish. Stores were closed, and it was the most quiet Sunday we have seen in the country in Louisiana. No crowds of noisy people, no drunken men were seen quarreling or racing. It was indeed a day of rest for the people. The change was brought about by one or two of the plantation stores being closed, and others seeing the effects followed the example. Some of the planters who have stores sell no liquors, either on pay-day or Saturday." The above well illustrates the effect of closing business places on Sunday, and is commended to our legislators at Baton Rouge.

The memorial services in New York on Decoration Day were very elaborate and impressive. The President, Gen. Grant, Gen Hancock, and many other distinguished people participated. Col. R. G. Ingersoll pronounced the oration which was of course very eloquent. But nothing could be more inappropriate than to invite a man chiefly known as a blatant and blaspheming infidel to speak over the graves of our dead soldiers. The surviving relatives of those departed heroes could take no pleasure in the words of a man who does his utmost to rob the world of its faith in the consoling and seeming truths of religion.

The Ecumenical Conference held in London September 1881, recommended that one day in each year be observed as Children's Day throughout the Methodist world. This day was started during the Centenary year. Since that period the Educational Board of the Methodist Episcopal Church has distributed over $65,000 for assisting needy students and Sunday-school scholars. In 1882 the Board has put to use $10,000. We hope that all of our preachers and Sunday-school superintendents have remembered this day. Let the collections be used to enlarge the Children's Fund of our Educational Board.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Bishop Foss continues to gain strength slowly.

—Rev. N. G. Cheney's address is 29, Columbus Avenue, Somerville, Mass.

—Gen. Grant did not lose heavily in Wall-street stocks. He did not invest in them.

—It is stated that Rev S. F. Craver, of our mission at Guanajuato, Mexico, is dying of consumption.

—Gen. John C. Fremont walks the streets of New York, lithe and erect, though showing his 70 years in his white hair and beard and sadly wrinkled face.

—Mrs. T. J. Scott, of Bareilly, India, arrived with two children, in New York, by the steamer Anchovia, May 31. Her address is Bridgeport, Belmont Co., Ohio.

—In the death of James Vick, the Methodist Episcopal Church of Rochester, N. Y. has suffered a severe loss. He has for 25 years been superintendent of the Sunday-school.

—R. E. Bentley, Esq., of the Donaldsonville Chief, sailed this week by steamer for New York. He will visit Philadelphia, Washington, and relatives in Ohio, and expects to enjoy a pleasant vacation.

—Hon. James Jackson, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Georgia, a well-known Methodist, has [illegible]. His sickness prevented his [illegible] at the General Conference [illegible] May 28. He [illegible] at the Eureka Springs, Ark. [illegible] is an ardent friend of [illegible].—N. Y. Ad[vocate].

—John Bright, at the opening of the Birmingham Central Library, recommended the study of American poets, especially Whittier, the best gifts of whose genius were on the side of freedom. He also recommended a study of Bancroft's History of the United States.

—We have seen the statement repeated and re-repeated that Atticus G. Haygood, D. D., of the M. E. Church South, who declined to be ordained a bishop, was the youngest man that was ever elected to the Methodist Episcopacy. There is but one serious difficulty with this statement, it is not correct. Wilbur Fisk, D. D., when he was elected was but thirty-six, and Bishop Janes but thirty-seven when he was ordained a bishop.

—The following is a touching admonition in the will of the late Judge Wm. B. Spencer, of Louisiana: "I desire to impress upon my son Walter that when I am gone he ought to be the prop and mainstay of the homestead. To do so, however, he must make a man of himself, and this he can only do by study, labor, and perseverance, coupled with sobriety and integrity. I lay upon him my earnest prayer that he will not disappoint my hopes."

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

Wade Hamilton, Pineville: "We are getting along very well with our church and Sunday-school; though the times are hard, and people have little to eat or drink. Have received two dollars for pastoral support."

Thomas Kennedy, Algiers: "Our church was surrounded by water for over two weeks. This sadly interfered with our protracted meeting, and caused me some personal suffering. The people are impoverished because of high water."

J. J. Richardson, Centreville: "I have had a hard time. Last month a protracted meeting of two weeks, and two joined the church. On May 28 I received five into the church. The overflow broke up one of my Sunday-schools. The one in Centreville has 85 pupils enrolled."

A. J. Ford, Houma: "I arrived here on the 1st of Feb. I found 75 members and 10 probationers in the church. I was pleased to find a faithful few such as will be found in every church, and I entered into the work. Since that day the Lord has manifested himself in our midst. I am able to let your many readers know that our membership is as follows: 104 full members, 15 probationers. Total 119. The financial state of the church is also improving. On Sunday May 28, I baptized 19, and read 25 in the Church. We had a grand time. Few charges are blessed with the educational facilities that this has. I have never met a better class of people in my life, than the people of Houma in general. The church is largely attended at every service. The young men believe in our Church. Our Sabbath-school that numbered about 150 on my arrival, numbers at present 200. We have a very efficient Brother for our Superintendent, viz: M. O. B. Mason. Our people are wholly devoted to temperance. We anticipate raising on Children's Day the $50 appointed to this charge for the Gilbert Haven School of Theology. The Albert Total Temperance Society presented the Church with a sofa and table. Pray for us."

First Street, under the pastorate of Bro. Montgomery, is enjoying a year of marked prosperity. The Sunday-school is strong and vigorous. The congregations at the regular church services are always large, and frequently people go away because there is no room for them. The ladies have bought a nice set of pulpit furniture, all in the most modern style. The report of the stewards at the last quarterly conference showed that the annual expenses were promptly met, with over $350 in the treasury. The report of the classes is the best we have ever had at any point on the district; Class No. 1, members 50, average attendance 30, class collection $14 50; class No. 2, members 30, average attendance 19, class collection $10 35; class No. 3, members 50, average attendance 30, class collection $7 30; class No. 4, members 41, average attendance 18, class collection $7 40; class No. 5, members 51, average attendance 20, class collection $8 85; class No. 6, members 55, average attendance 25, class collection $16 15; class No. 7, members 51, average attendance 20, class collection [illegible]; class No. 8, members 36, average attendance 18, class collection $7 90; class No. 9, members 17, average attendance 12, class collection $3 15; class No. 10, members 36, average attendance 18, class collection [illegible]; class No. 11, members 48, average attendance 22, class collection $7 45. It is not for us to make any unfavorable comparisons; but [illegible] of these classes have done much better than [illegible]. Let us provoke each other to love and good works."

TEXAS.

Robt. Weaver, Fairfield: "I have had a hard time at this place, but thanks to the Lord I have made a start at last."

W. McKenzie, Moscow: "We have a good day school with 24 scholars, and as soon as the people gather their crops we will go on with the church building. Elder Pullman was with us, and helped us greatly."

R. K. Whiting, Jewett: "The church here is slowly increasing, despite the hard times. Our conference was held by Bro. Harmon. I report three converts and two probationers."

H. W. Wilson, Cold Spring: "Elder W. B. Pullam held our second quarterly, May 13 and 14. We had a good time. There was a goodly number that partook of the Lord's Supper. There were about eighty came forward for prayer. We are moving onwards slowly."

Lee Reed, Waelder: "I have suffered from sickness, but have recovered and had remarkable success in my work. Many converts have been brought into the church. We will commence a camp meeting at Peach Creek, July 24, and will be able to take care of all who come. Those coming to Waelder will inquire for Mat. White, and Oliver Bowens."

A. Foster, Port Sullivan: "Our second quarterly conference was held May 20-21 by S. Gates, presiding Elder. We had a good time. The Elder preached at 11 o'clock Sunday morning, and the sermon had its desired effect. 70 met around the communion table, and thus renewed their vows. The doors of the church were opened and three from the A. M. E. Church joined. We gave the Elder $18 30. In the evening he preached again, and 3 were converted. Four joined as seekers of religion. Our Sunday schools here are alive—good teachers—school well attended. Pray for us."

A letter from Louisa Cole, a general agent of the Woman's Home Missionary Society, Texas Conference, says that Mrs. Annie Cole, under the appointment of the district conference organized three societies in Houston and one in Hockley. The one in Galveston has 2[illegible]5 members. The work has been standing still since conference waiting on the Conference Board and the parent society at Cincinnati to accept it and advance it. They have failed to do so. Pastors are reminded of their pledges to sustain it, and Bro. Thomas Cole is commended for efficient service in establishing the work.

MISSISSIPPI.

J. P. Freeman, Rosemeath: "We are pleased with our pastor, Rev. P. Harris. He stood by us during the floods."

John Mayo, Central Grove: "Rev. Miles Proctor administered the sacrament; a good many of our Baptist brethren participated. Collection $4 25. Elder Shampert held our quarterly and preached. His collection was $12."

The writer did not give his name or residence, but we suppose this occurred at Grenada: "At an early hour last Saturday evening, human forms were seen darting into the church; and at about half past eight o'clock a grand procession was formed and moved quietly toward the parsonage. One might hear from the neighboring children and inmates of the parsonage, what are they going to do? Some body in the crowd answered, they are going to pound 'em. Into the reception room came the procession every one carrying a pounder. But instead of pounding our bodies with the pounds, they gently placed them on the table, chairs, and floor, and after the long and pleasant procession had retired, we had an hour of busy work, stowing away the trophies which the procession brought. This is by no means the first of these visits, and we extend many thanks to these kind visitors."

TENNESSEE.

A. Phillips, Murfreesboro: "Elder Key held our third quarterly meeting at Lawrence Chapel. He is an energetic man, and sticks to the discipline. His sermon edified the people. Collected $8 15."

T. Woods, Cedar Grove: "The Sunday-school institute, the second quarter, resulted in great good. We have nearly finished a parsonage with two rooms, a smokehouse, and three other buildings on the ground, valued at $500. We have raised a part of the benevolent money."

H. Friend, Murfreesboro: "My second quarterly meeting was held March 3, by Elder H. W. Key. Rev. O. E. Alexander, from Central Tennessee College, gave one of his best sermons Sunday night. The people will not forget him soon. In a meeting continued for three weeks, 20 were converted and 10 joined the church. Our class and prayer meetings are all good, and we have not forgotten our benevolent collections. Among those who helped us were Revs. H. W. Key, B. James, W. Lillard, A. Phillips, P. F. Brooks, G. W. Marsh, and Rev. M. Darby of the A. M. E. Church."

ARKANSAS.

Wm. Pope, Caddo Gap: "I want to build up a school and church. The people need books and tracts.

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

Woman's Mission Work.

DEAR EDITOR: In the course of my reading I meet with some things I cannot understand, as for instance, one of your correspondents (some time since) opposing those who are doing what they can to get us cheap literature for our schools. We are teaching the people to read, and if we do not place good books in their hands the Devil will get some one to give them bad books, and thus our efforts will be in a degree frustrated. If we each do our duty, try to cultivate the taste for reading in the young people around us, and recommend to them such books as in our judgment will suit them best, there need be little fear about our Book Concern. I believe the more cheap books are read, the greater will be the desire for higher-priced ones. I may be mistaken, but such is my humble opinion. Another correspondent in criticising the "Salvation Army" seems to forget that only those who have been drawn from the ranks of the degraded outcasts can fully understand the difficulties that have to be overcome before favorable impressions of the blessings of the gospel can be made upon the mind. I have no opportunity of judging their work, but the criticism seemed a little too severe.

Please request the friends interested in Woman's Home Mission Work to address me at Washington, Washington county, Texas.

Several of the brethren have failed to answer my inquiries. I have written about forty letters and postal cards since the annual conference, and am willing to give all the information I am able to through the mail if the friends will write to me. If each preacher will send me the name of a working sister, they will be conferring a great blessing on their own family as well as on those of their neighbors. Something must be done to raise the standard of female virtue before the preaching will accomplish the amount of good that it is designed to. The Woman's Home Mission will accomplish more in that direction than any agency working at present in this State. I am somewhat aware of the delicacy of the subject, but we must face the evil or suffer the consequences of our neglect.

Yours faithfully,

MRS. ISABELLA HOWELLS.

He Wants to Work.

MR. EDITOR: I must do more for colored people than give them my money. Will they accept me as a preacher among them, or will they refuse me because I am a white man? I am aware of the prejudice against color caused by the sinful slave trade. Yet let it be remembered that the colored people themselves were slaveholders a few thousand years ago. I call attention to this fact that we may learn that human nature is the same among all people. Christianity puts all on a level. There is neither Greek nor Jew, barbarian, Scythian, colored nor white, but they are all one in Christ. Who knows how soon the righteous Judge may say, "I will no more be entreated for this people." Brother, do not say in your heart, "Lord, thou shalt not send by whom thou wilt. Let my people rather perish in their blood than be saved by the writer of this card." I can truly say, the spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he has called me to preach the gospel to the poor. I would like to have any reader of the above write to me concerning my acceptance. Please address me at Berlin Heights, Erie County, Ohio.

Yours in Christ, R. J. SMITH.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

SECOND QUARTER. Lesson xii. June 18. THE CHILD-LIKE BELIEVER. (Mark ix, 33-50.)

Jesus came to Capernaum in company with his disciples; from the scene of casting out the demon from the child in the region of Cesarea Philippi, after an uninterrupted passage through Galilee. He knew of the dispute of the disciples, and when he asked them what it was, they were conscience struck. He taught them, by placing the child before them, that he who would be greatest in the kingdom of heaven must serve even the least, and the affectionate reception of one of the children is considered as service to Christ.

It is morally impossible for one who has attained to faith sufficient to work a miracle to change in a breath to a reviler and blasphemer. If he retained a vile nature he could not possess such faith; if he had the faith it involved the change of nature also, which could not in short time be changed. Now to prevent self seduction and thus prevent seducing others we had better destroy those organs without which indulgence would be impossible, thus preserving our own faith, and that of others also. The command to cut off hand, etc, is not to be taken in a literal sense, but as rhetorically impressing the supreme importance of keeping faith that others may not be offended.

"If the salt has lost its saltness wherewith shall ye season it," implying the extreme difficulty if not impossibility of it. That is, if the disciples lost their gracious power because on them, how should they hope at the critical moment to be among those acceptable sacrifices to God. To avoid such a calamity they are exhorted to preserve the wisdom and grace bestowed, and not jeopardize by their unseemly contentions about who is greater. It can be kept, but how regained if lost?

Mr. C. E. Young, of Allegheny City, Pa., writes: "Disease and suffering had completely discouraged me. I took no pleasure in [illegible] I found no comfort in living. I [illegible] my mind bordered [illegible] Dyspepsia and urinary diseases troubled me. I tried Brown's Iron [illegible] and now thank God, I feel myself [illegible] of any man. A demonstration in memory of Garibaldi took place in Rome. There was an immense procession, in which a large number of societies with banners, etc., took part. The bust of Garibaldi was borne on a car drawn by six white horses. The procession left the Piazzo Del Popolo, and passed through the corso and forum to the capital, where the bust was received by the Municipality. An enormous crowd lined the streets and filled windows, balconies and house tops along the route of procession. The entire route was draped in mourning.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the Freedmen's Aid Society, held June 2d, a committee, consisting of Bishop Wiley, Dr. Hoyt, and Dr. Rust, was appointed to report a plan for next year's work, including the salaries of teachers, the erection of buildings, and the subject of annuities. It was decided to erect a new college building for the Shaw University at Holly Springs, Miss. Aid was voted to the amount of $300 in erecting a new seminary building for Powell's Valley Seminary, in East Tennessee, which has lately been destroyed by fire. As the society is vigorously prosecuting its work, it is absolutely necessary that all pastors should be faithful and prompt in raising and forwarding moneys to the treasurer.—Western.

The lines of suffering on almost every human countenance have been deepened, if not traced there, by unfaithfulness to conscience, by departures from duty. To do wrong is the surest way to bring suffering; no wrong deed ever failed to bring it. Those sins which are followed by no palpable pain are yet terribly avenged, even in this life. They abridge our capacity of happiness, impair our relish for innocent pleasure, and increase our sensibility to suffering. They spoil us of the armor of pure conscience, and of our trust in God, without which we are naked amid hosts of foes, and are vulnerable by all the changes of life. Thus, to do wrong is to inflict the surest injury on our own peace. No enemy can do us equal harm with what we do ourselves whenever and however we violate any moral or religious obligation.—Channing.

Christ has wiped away your tears forever;
Ye have that for which we still endeavor;
To you are chanted
Songs which yet no mortal ear has haunted;
Ah, who would not, then, depart with gladness,
To inherit Heaven for earthly sadness?
Who here would languish
Longer in bewailing and in anguish?
Come, oh Christ, and loose the chains that bind us!
Lead us forth and cast this world behind us!
With Thee, the Anointed,
Finds the soul its joy and rest appointed.

Thus a view of the greatest of natural curiosities, marvelous and wonderful beyond description, can be enjoyed with little expense or detention, if Through Tickets are secured by the Louisville & Great Southern. The Mammoth Cave is situated eight miles from Cave City, which is eighty-five miles South of Louisville on the Louisville & Great Southern Railway Line. McCoy's Concord Stages run to and from all passenger trains. The Cave Hotel is under the management of Wm. Miller, Esq., and is first-class in all its appointments.

Hon. BAYARD TAYLOR said of the Cave: "It is the greatest natural curiosity I have ever visited, Niagara not excepted, and he whose expectations are not satisfied by its marvelous avenues, domes and starry grottoes must either be a fool or a demi-god."

A visit to Mammoth Cave at any season of the year is delightful. The temperature, 55°, being the same the year round, the most delicate can visit it without fear of cold, heat or exhaustion.

ONLY $94 FOR 10 DAYS

SPECIAL TEN DAYS OFFER TO THE READERS OF THE SOUTHWESTERN.

I desire the following described Pipe-top Beethoven Organ introduced among the readers of the Southwestern Christian Advocate without a moments delay, so that all can see and appreciate its wonderful merits and stop combination effects. Now, if you will REMIT ME Ninety-four ($94) Dollars I will ship you this organ immediately, and send you a receipted bill in full for $109.75, which is the regular and only price at which this organ is sold. The price will soon be advanced to $144.75, on account of the increase in the price of labor and materials used in its construction.

I desire this instrument introduced without delay, and make this special offer so you may order one now. I look to future sales for my profit, as the Beethoven makes me thousands of friends. I regard this manner of introducing it better than spending hundreds of dollars in newspaper advertising. The organ speaks for itself. Often 50 sales have been traced from the first sold in a new neighborhood.

The following offer is positively good for only ten days from date of this week's Southwestern. This newspaper must be returned to secure this special price. If mailed from your post-office within ten days from this date, it will be received, not otherwise, or you may accept by telegraph on last day. I shall POSITIVELY refuse all orders under $109.75, unless accompanied with this paper, and payment must be mailed within ten days as specified.

As this special offer is limited and will not be repeated, if you have not all the money in hand, it will pay you to borrow a part from your friends, and thus secure the best organ that can be offered, at a less price than an ordinary organ by other makers is usually sold at.

Very truly yours,
DANIEL F. BEATTY.

EARS FOR THE MILLION!

Foo Choo's Balsam of Shark's Oil

Positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness Known.

This Oil is abstracted from peculiar species of small White Shark, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as Carcharodon Rondeletii. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist Priest about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal that for over 300 years no Deafness has existed among the Chinese People. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1 per bottle.

HEAR WHAT THE DEAF SAY!

It has performed a miracle in my case.
I have no unearthly noises in my head and hear much better.
I have been greatly benefited.
My deafness helped a great deal—think another bottle will cure me.

"Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, as the writer can personally testify, both from experience and observation. Write at once to Haylock & Jenney, 7 Dey street New York, enclosing $1, and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. You will never regret doing so."—Editor of Mercantile Review.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

A. George, Springfield: "Our pastor held our first quarterly. The water was so high that few could attend. We shall do all we can to aid the Missionary Society this year."

Z. T. Gayden, Whitehall: "Financially we are doing well. Those not prevented by high water from attending church have done their whole duty. Sunday school has 90 scholars, and is a missionary society. We meet with much opposition, but our protracted meeting resulted in 41 converts. There is much work to be done in this section, and more missionaries wanted to uproot erroneous doctrines. A great many believe there is a Baptist Bible."

TEXAS.

S. Smith, Belton: "My work is in a very good condition. Have built a parsonage worth over $300.

G. W. Townsend, Oakland: "Elder Richardson and wife were here. His collection was $15 95. Mrs. Richardson lectured to a large number on temperance, and all were well pleased. We took up the cause of the Conference Seminary, and secured $50. I had ten converts this quarter."

W. W. Brown, Brenham: "Misfortune has overtaken us. A storm visited our church, Saturday morning May 6, and blew the church flat, leaving only the brick basement standing. It was first wrecked by a storm in March. The last storm blew several houses off their blocks, and fences down. The brethren are not discouraged yet."

Thousands of millions of rays from the sun fall upon a flower garden in a single day to be transformed into the varying hues of bloom and leaf. Without this lavish expenditure of luminous vitality there could be neither brilliant flower nor restful tint of foliage, and beauty would be impossible. The Sabbath school is a kind of flower-garden in which superintendent and teacher may shed forth healthful and beautifying light. And the result will be proportioned to the quality and the quantity of the light thus shed forth.—Our Bible Teacher.

What are the desirable qualities in a whisker dye? It must be convenient to use, easy to apply, impossible to rub off, elegant in appearance, and cheap in price. Buckingham's Dye for the Whiskers unites in itself all these merits. Try it.

The Pittsburg Colored Citizen, Rev. T. J. Smith, editor, is a new paper, with a good appearance.

Overworked men and women, persons of sedentary habits, and others whose system needs recuperation, nerves toned, and muscles strengthened, should use Brown's Iron Bitters.

FARMERS' WIVES.

It is an evident fact that farmers' wives are afflicted with many diseases which are the result of overwork. They are constantly on one ceaseless routine of toil from daylight at morning until late at night. No change no relaxation, no rest! Farmers should note this fact, and be forewarned before it is too late. It is astonishing what an amount of labor the wives of farmers perform. Many of them get up and have breakfast ready before their husbands are out of bed. Then it is work, work, work until near midnight, their minds during the time being constantly occupied with their duties, and with thinking of how the food is to be supplied, when the washing and ironing is to be done, when time can be spared to scrub the floor, how the children are to be clothed and kept tidy, and innumerable other things not necessary to mention, all of which combine to overwork and break down the strongest woman in the land. In no case is it safe to be continuously thinking upon any one thing, and in cases where the brain has been weakened by too great a strain upon it, thereby producing insanity, epilepsy, vertigo, hysterics, female weakness, general debility, and a multitude of other diseases, the remedy is Rest and a few bottles of Dr. S. A. Richmond & Co.'s Samaritan Nervine. It acts directly upon the nervous centres and invigorates and strengthens the whole system. Many ladies have refrained from using Samaritan Nervine on account of an existing prejudice against advertised medicines. Let us ask a question: Are you prejudiced against sewing machines because you have seen them advertised, or can you doubt the ingenuity and skill required in their invention? Again, would you refuse to insure your house because the company advertised that it had paid millions of dollars in losses and yet had a capital of several millions left? Do such advertisements shake your confidence and create prejudice? Then why refuse to credit the testimony of those who have found Samaritan Nervine to be all that is claimed for it in overcoming those ailments peculiar to your sex? The following statement speaks for itself:

Fairfield, Lenawee Co., Mich., April 25, 1881.

Dr. Richmond—Dear Sir: This is to certify that my wife had fits for thirty-five years. They would last her for about one ... and sometimes longer. I happened to hear of your medicine, and sent for some of ... had no more fits after she took the ... She is now permanently cured ... is a great deal better than ...

SAMARITAN NERVINE.

Samaritan Nervine

Cures Epileptic Fits, Spasms, Convulsions, St. Vitus Dance, Virtigo, Hysterics, Insanity, Apoplexy, Paralysis, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all Nervous diseases. This infallible remedy will positively eradicate every species of Nervous Derangement, and drive them away from whence they came, never to return again. It utterly destroys the germs of disease by neutralizing the hereditary taint or poison in the system, and thoroughly eradicates the disease, and utterly destroys the cause.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Female Weakness, general Debility, Leucorrhœa or Whites, Painful Menstruation, Ulceration of the Uterus, Internal Heat, Gravel, Inflammation of the Bladder, Irritability of the Bladder. For Wakefulness at night, there is no better remedy. During the change of life no female should be without it. It quiets the Nervous System and gives rest, comfort and nature's sweet sleep.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Alcoholism, Drunkenness and the habit of Opium Eating. These degrading habits are by far the worst evils that have ever befallen suffering humanity. Thousands die annually from these noxious drugs. The drunkard drinks liquor not because he likes it, but for the pleasure of drinking and treating his friends, little thinking that he is on his road to ruin. Like the Opium Eater, he first uses the drug in small quantities as a harmless antidote. The soothing influence of the drug takes strong hold upon its victim, leading him on to his own destruction. The habits of Opium Eating and Liquor Drinking are precisely what eating is to alimentiveness, as over-eating first inflames the stomach, which redoubles its cravings until it paralyzes both the stomach and appetite. So every drink of liquor or dose of opium, instead of satisfying, only adds to its fierce fires, until it consumes the vital force and then itself. Like the gluttonous tape-worm, it cries: "Give, give, give!" but never enough until its own rapacity devours itself. Samaritan Nervine gives instant relief in all such cases. It produces sleep, quiets the nerves, builds up the nervous system, and restores body and mind to a healthy condition.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Nervous Dyspepsia, Palpitation of the Heart, Asthma, Bronchitis, Scrofula, Syphilis, diseases of the Kidneys and all diseases of the urinary organs. Nervous debility, caused by the indiscretions of youth, permanently cured by the use of this invaluable remedy. To you, young, middle-aged and old men, who are covering your sufferings as with a mantle by silence, look up, you can be saved by timely efforts, and make ornaments to society, and jewels in the crown of your Maker, if you will. Do not keep this a secret longer, until it saps your vitals and destroys both body and soul. If you are thus afflicted, take Dr. Richmond's Samaritan Nervine. It will restore your shattered nerves, arrest premature decay, impart tone and energy to the whole system.

DEAR EDITOR: I wish to inquire for my daughter Mary Ann. I was sold from her in 1846. At that time we both belonged to Daniel Priest, who lived in ——, Montgomery county, Ky. I was sold to Daniel Balus, who lived in Bourbon Co., Ky. Afterward I was sold to a trader named Pierce Griffin. He carried me to Louisiana, on Bayou Plaquemines, twenty-five miles below Baton Rouge. My name at that time was Emily Priest; now it is Emily Wilson. The last time I heard from my daughter she was in Natchez, Miss., living with a doctor whose first name was John, last name I never heard. Address me at Topeka, Kansas, 504 Monroe street. 21-m6

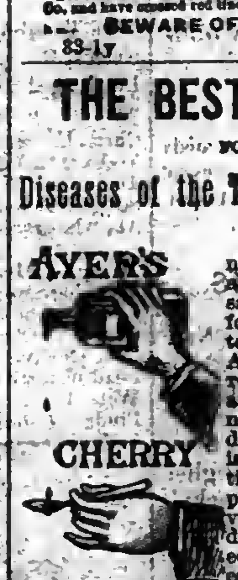
THE BEST REMEDY FOR Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.



Diseases of the pulmonary organs are so prevalent and fatal, that a safe and reliable remedy for them is invaluable to every community. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is such a remedy, and no other so eminently merits the confidence of the public. It is a scientific combination of the medicinal principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs, chemically united, to insure the greatest possible efficiency and uniformity of results, which enables physicians as well as invalids to use it with confidence. It is the most reliable remedy for diseases of the throat and lungs that science has produced. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt and certain relief, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it without difficulty. In the treatment of ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Clergyman's Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, and Catarrh, the effects of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household, for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy so efficacious, soothing, and helpful.

The marvellous cures which AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has effected all over the world are a sufficient guaranty that it will continue to produce the best results. An impartial trial will convince the most sceptical of its wonderful curative powers, as well as of its superiority over all other preparations for pulmonary complaints.

Eminent physicians in all parts of the country, knowing its composition, recommend AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL to invalids, and prescribe it in their practice. The test of half a century has proved its absolute certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.

A WONDERFUL and SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.

These Glasses are chemically treated in the process of manufacture, and possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition; as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analysed by American and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and can in some cases restore the sight if used in time, but in no case can the eye become impaired by their use for the following reasons:

1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye, completely doing away with that tiresome sensation that is usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours' use.
2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.
3. The chemicals keep the glasses cold, and the result is that the optic nerves are always cool, doing away with any feverish sensation to the eye.
4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, with no distressing or tiresome sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.

TUNE—"Jesus, lover of my soul.
Jesus, Savior of my soul,
Thou, who once for me did'st die,
Teach me now and make me whole,
Now to Thee for health I fly.
Plunge me 'neath the crimson tide,
All my sins behind Thee cast,
Let that stream so deep and wide
Cover all the guilty past.

Other help I seek in vain,
Thou hast bid me come to Thee,
Precious Lamb for sinners slain,
From my sins now set me free.
Wilt Thou cast the sinner out
Who now comes to Thee for peace?
No, I can no longer doubt,
Thou will give a sweet release.

By Thy death my life I claim,
Now I grasp by faith Thy Word,
I am saved in Jesus' name,
Thro' the merits of my Lord.
Now my heart is filled with joy,
Christ hath set my spirit free,
Gives me peace naught can destroy,
Peace, which naught can take from me.

The Education of the Masses a Necessity.

Speech Delivered by Rev. E. D. Miller, at the Laying of the Corner Stone of a New Building for Rust University, at Holly Springs, Miss., June 6, 1882.

Mr. President of the Board of Trustees, Faculty, Friends of Rust University: Let me congratulate you, that after your patient, laborious, and to some extent, successful effort, in educating the children of our colored fellow-citizens during the last few years, a still brighter prospect is before you to-day, seemingly without limit. Enlargement is s[u]ccess. I am aware that your present position has not been reached without difficulties, may be even at times discouragements. I will not say that there are not still difficulties before you; but I will say that you have reason to be hopeful. You are not, either, alone in your arduous work. Already there are near forty similar institutions of learning in the South, in which are gathered hundreds of students of both sexes. Some of these college buildings are costly, imposing structures, as at Nashville, Richmond, Washington, New Orleans, and other cities, costing in the aggregate hundreds of thousands of dollars. These institutions were founded and are controlled by influential evangelical denominations of Christians—a circumstance that, in my judgment places them far above State institutions of learning in moral influence and ultimate destiny for good. [illegible] faculties are not only cultured [illegible] men and women, but their [illegible] is deep toned and confident. These institutions, too, have the [illegible] of the friends of Christian education and the well-wishes [illegible] every where. Added to [illegible] a number of Peabody State [illegible] the training of young [illegible] women for teachers in our [illegible] schools, giving them a [illegible] training in what, it is [illegible] be their life calling. [illegible] is done in all these [illegible] of learning is a neces[sity] [illegible] in which it can be [illegible] the material prosperity [illegible]? Are [illegible] [illegible]? Are person[s] [illegible] be held sacred? [illegible] of enlightened [illegible] of vicious ig[norance] [illegible] ignorance [illegible] every man out of [illegible] ye here? [illegible] the will of the All-wise Crea[tor] [illegible] the highest destiny. Aye, more [illegible] enterprising and ambitious of [illegible] highest type of civilization, make [illegible] industries, and literature of the [illegible] culture in the arts, sciences, [illegible] Christianity, endowed with [illegible] these feelings, controlled by [illegible] and take care of themselves. [illegible] prepared are any people to [illegible] the more enlightened the [illegible] it, we must educate! or short will be our race from the cradle to the grave!"

Our education, however, should be symmetrical. That is, our moral faculties should be equally educated with the intellectual and physical. We should be as familiar with the ten commandments in everyday life as with the multiplication table. We should know as well how to decline a mean act as how to decline a noun or pronoun. We should know that a wilful, deliberate fraud or lie, that perils the property or reputation of another, is as deadly a poison as arsenic or prussic acid; that a healthy body is necessary to a healthy mind.

Mr. President, as I stand here there is constantly impressed on my mind as an illustration of the scene before me the almost sublime scenery of what is called our National Park. It is a region of wonder, situated on the crest of the Rocky Mountains. We are told that it is equaled by no other natural scenery in the world by one who was familiar with both the Alps and the Andes. There are mountain peaks lifting their heads high in the region of eternal frost, thousands of boiling springs, and numerous geysers, some of them lifting their jets hundreds of feet in the air. This is the beginning—the home—of the mighty rivers that drain our continent. There, in a few feet of each other, these vast rivers begin their courses in almost opposite directions, till they commingle at last their floods with the oceans that wash our widely separated shores. So, I fancy, that I am standing to day at the source, putting a part for the whole, of moral and intellectual influences which are to swell the river of human thought and moral power as it sweeps onward and onward down the coming ages. Nor do I believe, sir, that America is destined to be the chief theater upon which the moral and intellectual powers of this and kindred institutions of learning will display ultimately their greatest influence. For the universal dissemination of this power we can most devoutly sing—

"Flow thou to every land,
Nor in thy richness stay."

I may be alone in this thought; but as I view it here, in the very nature of things it must be limited and local, and this condition of things will continue, so far as I can see, for all time to come. Are we, then, to see no design of Providence in this? No divine hand pointing to a fatherland? A continent surprisingly rich in natural resources, containing more than two hundred millions of human beings, and yet almost destitute of native civilization of any kind! Is the fair continent of Africa, rich in climate, rich in broad and fertile valleys, capable of supporting almost the entire population of the earth, rich in vast river systems and beautiful chains of lakes, in mineral wealth, and vast untouched forests, and in harbors in which the navies of the world can ride at anchor in safety from the storm, to be doomed forever? I think not. I do think, however, that I am standing amid the springs that are to form the mighty current on whose bosom is to be borne the redemption of that benighted continent. I do not mean that there will be a great exodus from America. Not at all. Nor is such an event necessary either, so far as the result that I have indicated is concerned. Numbers are not the things for great reformations. Principles, living, heaven ordained and heaven-directed, are what we want. One Paul was enough to shake the pagan world, one Luther to revolutionize Europe morally.

There is in every enlightened human heart a strong race pride, a desire for the broadest possible liberty in which to work out the destiny of his people. Visions of fame, wealth, and national greatness will be constantly rising and floating across his field of view, and when restrained may break forth in acts of violence, as at this hour in unhappy Ireland, and in distracted Russia. The more enlightened the better prepared are any people to defend and take care of themselves. But these feelings, controlled by vital Christianity, endowed with broad culture in the arts, sciences, industries, and literature of the highest type of civilization, make men enterprising and ambitious of the highest destiny. Aye, more [illegible] the will of the All-wise Creator [illegible] ye here? [illegible] every man out of [illegible]

We may see but little evidence of such an influence, of such an ambition to-day. But remember, we live in an age of wonderful and astonishing transitions; and that the possibilities of human nature in its progress and accomplishments, are still in the category of the Unknowable.

It is true, sir, that we have a vast amount of illiteracy in our midst, especially among the adult population. But this very fact causes anxiety, is looked upon as a menace to our free institutions, as warranting greater effort in educating the rising generation, as a public good, for the public welfare. Leading men in all sections of our common country, of all political creeds, both in and out of Congress, are advocating national aid for our free public schools in view of this fact, which are open alike to the youth of both races and on the same conditions. In our last Presidential election more than 1,100,000 freemen in this Southern land could not read the names on the ballots which they deposited for Presidential electors! More than 800,000 of these were colored men. There is doubtless an equal amount of illiterate females. What a multitude! More than double the entire population of the State of Mississippi. In the Northland there are nearly 450,000 voters just as illiterate. Strict[ly] in view of this appalling fact such men, a few of whose appeals and declarations you will pardon me for detaining you to read in this connection, turn to the national legislature for help.

Mr. B. G. Northrop says: "But far above all business interests, it is our duty and privilege as a nation to rescue the South from the 'barbarism of ignorance.' The South asks this aid, and needs it and now deserves it."

Senator Brown, of Georgia, the day before his election to the Senate of the United States, before his State Legislature, uttered the following: "What, then, should be done in this state of things? My opinion is, that the Government of the Union should assume the burdens of aiding in the education of the people."

Ex-Governor Winthrop, than whom we have none purer, in his Yorktown address, reviewing the growth of his country during a century, spoke thus concerning the present duties of the Nation: "And there must be aids and appropriations and endowments by cities and States and by the Nation at large, * * * compared with which the gift of George Peabody, munificent as it was for an individual benefactor, is but as the small dust of the balance. * * * But let us beware of subjecting ourselves to the ineffable reproach of robbing the children of their bread and casting it before dogs, by wasting untold millions on corrupt and extravagant projects, and starving our common schools. The whole field of the Union is now open to education, and the whole field of the Union must be occupied. Free government must stand or fall with free schools."

The following resolution was unanimously adopted by the Connecticut State Teachers' Association after an address of Hon. J. L. M. Curry, general agent of the Peabody Educational Fund, in October, 1881, and it was subsequently "heartily approved by the State Board of Education:" "Resolved, That in view of the necessity of education to the perpetuity of free institutions, and of the great and disproportionate burden which adequate provision for universal education would impose on some of the Southern States, this Association expresses its conviction that it is the imperative duty of the National Government to extend to those States in which the burden and danger of illiteracy are greatest such pecuniary aid as shall enable them to provide that all the children and youth within their borders shall receive at least an elementary education."

The late President Garfield used this language in his inaugural, which has been read again and again all over our common country: "All the constitutional power of the Nation and of the States, and all the volunteer forces of the people, should be summoned to meet this danger by the saving influence of universal education."

President Arthur, in his message last December, recommends: "All that can be done by local legislation and private generosity should be supplemented by such aid as can be constitutionally afforded by the National Government. I would suggest that if any fund be dedicated to this purpose it may be wisely distributed in the different States according to the ratio of illiteracy, as by this means those localities which are most in need of such assistance will reap its special benefits."

Our free schools are the little springs of knowledge at which the multitudes drink. They are not what they ought to be, but they are as good as our limited means can afford, and, upon the whole, are doing good work. But when I remember that these schools furnish the only opportunity for an education that a vast majority of our youth will enjoy, I can not be very hopeful as to the intelligence of the next generation. Our free school curriculum is long, requiring ten years to complete it. Nor would I abridge it; rather increase it. Our people are an agricultural people, but in the schools they are taught nothing concerning atmospheric influences, the nature and adaptability of soils to the production and growth of plants, of the use and economy of improved agricultural implements, of the variety and comparative value of agricultural products, or of care for live stock. Their life work is left to chance. This, sir, is a grave mistake, and one, too, that runs through our whole educational system. We have not grown about everything of the past but our school curriculum, and this is just as it was 500 years ago. Is it so, that our only fossils are those in the hands of the faculties of our colleges and universities? Our free schools are modeled upon the idea that they are preparatory for college classes. Whoever keeps up with his life calling must make it a special study. We can hardly charge the State with a want of interest in the education of her children, when we know that, according to her ability, her free school fund about equals that of any other State in the Union. In 1883 her free school fund will aggregate more than $1,000,000. But this is not sufficient to accomplish the great work to be done in the State. This will require that our scholastic year be lengthened. We, too, must increase the pay of our teachers. These are difficulties that will take money to remove. For this purpose we, with others, have petitioned the General Government for aid. I referred a while ago to the speech of Hon. J. L. M. Curry, at Hartford, let me now read an extract from that speech: "Grandly as the Southern States have done, it is impossible for them to supply sufficient funds for the daily multiplying demands. The South has a school population of about 5,000,000, and pays annually for common school education over $7,000,000. To educate universally and properly would require an annual tax of $30,000,000 or $40,000,000, and it is absurd to ask the South to raise for free education three times as much as Connecticut or New York. * National aid is indispensable."

It may be necessary to have a modified compulsory as well as free system of education, if the entire school population is to be educated. Now at least one-fourth of the educable children in our State are not enrolled on our school registers. Still more, we must improve the teachers, and that in the very ground-work of education. Until this is done our work of education must progress slowly. We must have teachers thorough in the elementary branches, well trained in approved methods of teaching, and in school management, and of high moral character—those who both love and appreciate their profession. Then the broader their culture the better. But where are those teachers to come from?

Mr. President, as you depend largely upon our public schools for students, so are our eyes turned here and to the State Normal for our best teachers; and we must continue to look to these halls, who can tell how long? It seems to me, therefore, that your greatest work now, and for years to come, is to supply this demand for teachers. There is no one element of success we need more. You must supply this want. Thus, as the springs upon the mountain commingle in a common stream in their course to the sea, so we, in a common influence, must go to direct human thought, human morals and human destiny in its onward course to the shoreless sea. We must go forward or, finally, "Apparent rari nantes ingurgite vasto." How vast the multitude that lies out before us to greet our coming! How it stretches away in the rising ages! And what a volume of influence is it destined to become when, under God, it shall have received its hundreds of tributary influences from virtuous and well ordered families, from intelligent and economical citizens engaged either in the many and remunerative industries of life, following learned callings, or filling professors' chairs.

But, I will venture to suggest, that, in my judgment, many subjects not now found in ordinary text-books, must be carefully taught here and in kindred institutions before the scene I have pictured will be realized. The plan of work in our institutions of learning needs recasting. It is now a kind of Procrustean bed that all must be shaped to, regardless of capacity or bent of mind. This is as unnatural as it is unphilosophical. Both the State and the world need the keenest intellects in the widely separated yet mutually dependent departments of varied life. The schools must find these varied gifts, and train them. We must teach that education is not an end but a means of enlightened and industrious employment in society building, in State building, in church building, and in subduing and controlling the powers of nature and making them subservient to the wants of man—that the tiller of the soil is brother to the professional man, the factory operative and miner to the princely merchant, the machinist and engineer to the salaried magnate, and he who carries the commerce of the world, the friend of mankind—that economy, industry and virtue are the conditions of pleasant homes, that the Bible, pure and holy, is the basis of all true greatness and an unfading crown of glory. With a full knowledge, therefore, of the great work to be accomplished and of the principles that underlie and pervade it, we lay to day the corner-stone of the new building of Rust University, soon to rise in stately proportions to greet the sunshine of coming years, and, if need be, to weather the storm, sacred to learning, sacred to the best interests of the State and religion—sacred to the world's greatest good. A noble end is thus proposed; one worthy the generous donations it has received from benevolent strangers, and of the great Christian denomination to whose fostering care it is committed. It will stand a monument, but, unlike the proud shaft that marks the spot where some hero fell in sanguinary strife, or where contending armies settled the late of States that had appealed to the arbitrament of the sword, it will be one of "good will to man," and a prophecy of an enlightened prosperous future. We have referred to some of the noiseless forces at work in what must be a grand regeneration; we have pointed out, too, some of the difficulties in the way of rapid success; we to-day look with increased confidence to the future. But, in the meantime, we crave the indulgence of the friends of education, and the "charity of the silence" of its enemies, if it has any, that they do not over anxious as to immediate results. Remember that we have poverty and improvidence to contend with, moral character to build up, and other things to discourage in addition to the ordinary work of education. Your impatience may cause you to forget these and unprepare you to judge correctly as to what results ought to be even at the end of the first score of years. This impatience reminds me of the African chief who had often heard of written language that some people could talk on paper, but did not believe it. An opportunity offered one day for him to test the truth of it. After a number of experiments, some quite amusing, he became thoroughly convinced of its truth. Then he became impatient to learn to write too. The missionary must commence at once to teach him. He gave him four or five letters on a piece of paper and went over them with the chief. He soon had these so he could repeat them. He was anxious to know it there were any more. His teacher made as many more on the paper. The chief soon became confused, in trying to learn the new ones he forgot the first ones. His patience gave way, he tore up the paper, exclaiming, "I knew you couldn't teach me; I know I couldn't learn to write." Thus ended his education—all in about an hour.

Come, at the end of a quarter of a century, after three or four thousand young men and women have even been but partially educated within these halls, and ask what results. We think the answer will be "Satisfactory." But should you defer your visit till the end of fifty or a hundred years, when not only thousands, from this and other like institutions, but three or four generations shall have been trained in these institutions, then we will point, as the answer to "what results," to pleasant homes, prosperous, intelligent communities adorned with beautiful churches and school-houses, to the hum of busy machinery, and to enterprising citizens.

I cannot close without reminding you, my colored friends, that the success which I have ventured to predict depends as much, yes more, on what you resolve to do for yourselves as on friends and their money. You hold these issues in your hands, and you say they shall or they shall not be. These can but provide opportunities. You must determine to reap the offered benefits. Remember, such opportunities are offered but once in the life-time of any. Your teachers are all that you could ask. Indeed, your President, as I have reason to know, with other suitable qualifications for the position he is called to fill, is unusually blessed with administrative ability. There is wanting, if any thing is wanting, but your determination to crown these efforts with success.

Young men and women of Mississippi, let it be your pride as your honor to be students of Rust University. Deny yourselves that you may be able to sustain yourselves here. And, finally, to those of you who complete the course of study here and take your degree, may your Alma Mater be honored in honoring you, and, by and by, as the years glide away, when likenesses of once familiar faces may hang in these halls, may they be the synonyms of lives well spent.

American Bible Society.

The stated meeting of the Board of Managers was held June 1st, Fredrick H. Wolcott, Esq., Vice President, in the chair.

Upon recommendation of the Committee on Distribution appropriations of funds were made to the German Mission of the Methodist Episcopal Church, amounting to $5,868; to the Russian Agency, $125 for the purchase of Scriptures for Hebrew emigrants; and to the Evangelical Association of Geneva, $2,000 for Bible colportage.

Grants of books were also made to the value of about $13,400, including twelve pulpit Bibles to churches located in eight different States, and grants to Sabbath schools in nine States.

Secretary Hunt made a statement concerning his recent visit to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Nashville, Tenn. That body took advanced action upon the Bible cause, and adopted a report from which we take the following: "The multiplication and distribution of the Bible until it shall be printed in every spoken language and dialect, and a copy placed in every family throughout the world, is an undertaking superlatively grand in its conception, and worthy of the united prayers and labours of all churches, the full accomplishment of which would thrill earth and heaven with joy.

The American Bible Society has this work in hand. It may be truly called the greatest of all missionary movements foreign and domestic, in our land. We rejoice in its past history, and pray that God may bless its future a thousandfold more. One Bible society in Ohio, and another in Texas, were recognized as auxiliaries.

The total receipts for May were $39,754 62. The issues for May were 97,331.

Women and Wine.

Of the worst foes that women ever had to contend with wine stands at the head. The appetite for strong drink in men has spoiled the lives of more women, ruined more homes for them, scattered more fortunes for them, brought to them more shame, sorrow, and hardship than any other evil that lives. The country numbers tens of thousands, nay, hundreds of thousands of women, who are widows to-day, and sit in hopeless weeds, because their husbands have been slain by strong drink. There are hundreds of thousands of homes scattered all over the land, in which women live lives of torture, going through all the extremes of fear and despair, because those whom they love, love wine better than the women whom they have sworn to love. There are women by the thousand who dread to hear at the door the step that once thrilled them with pleasure; that step has learned them to reel under the seductive poison. There are women groaning with pain, while we write these words, from bruises and brutalities inflicted by husbands mad with drink. There can be no exaggeration in any statement made in regard to this matter, because no human imagination can create anything worse than the truth. The sorrows of a mother with a drunken son, are as near the realization of a hell as can be reached in this world. The shame, the indignation, the sorrow, the sense of disgrace for herself and children, the poverty, and not unfrequently the beggary; the fear and fact of violence, the lingering life-long struggle and despair of countless women with drunken husbands, are enough to make all women curse wine, and engage unitedly to oppose it everywhere as the worst enemy of their sex.—Atlantic Highland Herald.

BY BISHOP WARREN.

Eighteen months ago, a few friends gave $400 to help found a school for our colored people at Morristown, Tenn., and afterward added $100 to aid in supporting a proper teacher. What is the result? They have a property worth $1,500, out of debt. There has been an enrollment of 193 students, an attendance of 90 per cent. of the enrollment at any one time; forty have been converted. The mayor of the city told me that the county superintendent of schools said to him that the school had a higher grade of excellence in the work done than any other school in the county, white or black; and besides, the principal has organized a church among the whites, with thirty five members, and hopes to build a $3000 church next year. Are the donors content with their investment?

There is an increase of 300-fold in money, and an increase of mental and spiritual wealth immeasurable by our standard, measurable only by Christ's valuation of soul and the Holy Ghost's unutterable groanings.

Few institutions can show a better record, even if they have $100,000 worth of property and a faculty of half a dozen professors.

$800 must be contributed toward the erection of other buildings for that school this summer. I could give similar facts about two other schools established in the past year with less help. I need $10,000 to develop other leads equally promising. God says to you, "Behold, I have set before you an open door, and no man can shut it." Walk in. Methodist Advocate.

Material must be secured and the workmen must be paid. May I not hear from every subscriber during the month of June?

The Salvation Army Under Arrest.

The Salvation Army will soon attain all the notoriety in can reasonably desire. For some months it has been attracting a growing attention in this country. It has been attacked and defended by the press and pulpit, and popular demonstrations have been made for and against it. But the few things that have been wanting to make its notoriety complete are just being supplied. Certain citizens of Paterson, New Jersey, have caused the arrest of a detachment of the Salvation Army in that city for marching through the streets and singing a song the refrain of which was "Right, Left, Right, Left; the Lord is Right, the Devil is Left." We say nothing about the peculiar tactics of the Salvationists. In fact we care but little about tactics so long as the drunkard is made sober, the rowdy peaceful, and the brutal humane. We know of men who all their lives have been known as ardent defenders of the most orderly tactics, and to-day they could not beat up a corporal's guard in the kingdom of God. It never takes much grace to find fault. An idiot can spoil the most expensive time piece. Give us something that rescues men from vice and crime. We claim for the Army the protection of American law. This rough and ready fashion of Mr. Justice Lynch, of Patterson, New Jersey, might have done in the year 1682, but it will not do for 1882. High officials who can let Irish Nationalists or Irish Orangemen, Masons, Odd Fellows and such like organizations march through the streets with their bands of music, but assume such undisguised hostility toward the Salvationists are a scandal and an outrage to our boasted civilization. These same officials allow practices which are wholly vicious and immoral to run on without check, but the Salvationists, a band of men who, perhaps, in a very singular way labor to promote the purity and peace of society, are arrested. The case is down for a hearing, and the Christian opinion of America will be on the side of the Salvation Army. The English Bishops, at a late convocation at Canterbury, spoke in high terms of the wonderful work the Army is accomplishing among the most desperate classes in the larger cities of England, and to the evident sincerity and Christian deportment of the officers.

The world is not suffering now either for show churches or show men. There is a full supply of these. But we do need men who can forego the praise of men for the honor that comes from above, long enough to take us out of some old ruts of monotony and put us on a more vigorous and aggressive mode of conquest. We are ready to co-operate with such an "army."

Holiness People.

Sometimes it is presented as an objection against the doctrine of entire sanctification that so many who profess its attainment are so inconsistent in their lives. Certainly it can be no objection to the doctrine of justification by faith or of regeneration that so many who profess justification are unstable and unsteady in life and character, loose in morals and in manners vain. Justification, regeneration are not responsible, are not to be blamed for the unsteadiness of the life and character of any particular class. And for ourselves we have never been able to see how that so-called inconsistencies of men and women professing entire sanctification could be urged as an objection against the doctrine. Holiness is a subject of conscious and confessed experience, and should not be the object of cold indifference or contemptuous sneer. We do not like a mere hot-house religion, and yet we know that where the subject of holiness is only named to be denounced, people who need kindly aid and sympathy will soon wither and die, but who is responsible? Nor have we any special sympathy for religious gad-abouts, tramps, vagrants—we hardly know what to name them. But for real, old-fashioned holiness people, who fully trust God and go out and do and work for Him, and have but little to say about themselves, but a great deal about Christ and His [illegible] and power to keep, we have the most perfect admiration. We know of some such. They are always in the Sunday-school, prayer and class meetings, and do not take their service out [illegible] song. The Lynchers in Jail.

All friends of law and order should rejoice that Judge Fontelieu has denied sixteen men the benefit of bail, who are now in custody for the lynching of Jenkins and Azor, in the parish of St. Martin, La. The Sugar Bowl, of New Iberia, says the decision has caused much feeling in that whole section, for it is believed the sixteen are not more guilty than some two or three hundred other participants; besides, some say that if Judge Fontelieu had always been so anxious to punish crime, there would have been no resort to lynch law. The counsel for the accused will apply for a special term of court to try the prisoners, and prevent them from lying in jail all summer.

The practice of lynching should at all times be discouraged. One of the victims in this case was lynched without any attending circumstance to establish even a plausible excuse. We refer to the young colored man Eugene Azar, innocent of murder, and then under bond, whom the crowd concluded to take up on their route with a real murderer. We do not know, and it is immaterial, what Judge Fontelieu's administration has been heretofore; the question of concern to the public should be, has he correctly enforced the law in the present case? It is not charged that the Judge has transcended his duty; but it is alleged, forsooth, that because some two hundred others, equally guilty, have succeeded in evading like arrest and commitment, therefore the Judge should have been more lenient to the sixteen.

We have no doubt that the whole affair was the result of rash counsel, and the strong impulses of a moment, under the specious plea that righteous ends to be subserved justified the means. This is the usual logic of lynchers, but with due regard to social safety it can not be accepted in atonement for violated laws. If there are two hundred others, let them frankly step forward, confess their transgression, throw themselves upon the mercy of the court, and accept uncomplainingly a nominal punishment. This would equalize the burden now borne by the sixteen, and besides would be brave and chivalrous, an act recognizing the majesty of the law and the highest duty of citizens to society. Such a course would be commended by right-thinking people all over the country, and go far to remove the taint of lawlessness which has adhered to St. Martin parish since the unfortunate occurrence, and which her best citizens deplore.

Schools for Agriculture.

There are now about fifty agricultural colleges in the United States. They are doubtless doing much for the science of farming. We wish them the greatest measure of prosperity. Perhaps we are a little old fogyish. We think, however, that men seldom become real practical farmers through such institutions. The students there have so delicate a time that they will not feel much like facing a northwest wind when it blows from seventy-five to one hundred and twenty miles per hour. Nor will they like to chop wood up in the New England States when the thermometer is from ten to twenty degrees below zero. It would be a little tough on them to work on the sugar cane and cotton plantations of Louisiana or Texas with the thermometer ninety degrees above zero. We think that the most successful farmers are those who in boyhood rise at early dawn, help milk the cows and get them out to pasture, eat a little corn cake, with some good fried pork and baked or boiled potatoes, and get off to the field to their work before one half of the people have come to their last morning's dream. The best farmers in the best farming regions of the world have come down in the regular farmer's line of succession. Their fathers, their grandfathers, and their great grandfathers were farmers who never read a single book on phosphates and subsoiling. They dug up with two brawny hands the science of successful farming out of the middle of sugar-cane, cotton, corn, and wheat fields. We approve the science of farming as taught in our agricultural colleges; but let no young man suppose that he can keep his soft hands and untanned face and be a successful farmer. We have a boy who is anxious to be a farmer. He has not much money to expend in experimenting with cows, pigs, and chickens, and an unheard of rotation of crops. His grandfather and great grandfather were successful tillers of the soil. They were never seen plowing or hoeing with their gloves on. We propose to send our boy North, where callous hands and a tanned face are not a disgrace, and put him in the furrow and there with his own hands learn the science of agricultu[re.]

Imitating.

This is an age of queer things, but the queerest thing in Methodism that we have seen is the fact that our brethren of the African Methodist Episcopal Church evince so strange a love for high sounding titles. We see by the published minutes of some of their annual conferences that they give their Bishops the high sounding title Right Rev. Bishop. As we have no title, and never expect to have one to show even to our most intimate friends, we may be condemned as envious, but this is a mistake. Some of the most learned and efficient ministers have lived and died and gone home to glory without a single suffix to their names. Then we have known scores of men, innocent of theological attainments and mental power, covered all over with A.B., A.M., Ph.D., D.D., L.L.D. In the name of suffering humanity we enter our solemn protest against this great waste. It is an awful thing to put a clergyman of moderate attainments in a position which shall compel him to be always learned, great, profound and imposing like the title Right Rev. Bishop D.D., L.L.D. This may do for some heavy, pompous theological dignitary, but it is an unreasonable burden to impose upon any ordinary man, and, unless our African brethren mean to kill off their bishops, we ask them to lighten up a little in this direction. After the conflict is all over, things merely cooling and refreshing will be in order, but while the battle is raging give us a diet that amounts to something.

A Swindle Exposed.

Having called the attention of the United States Manufacturing Co., at 116 Smithfield street, Pittsburg, Pa., to the fact that every particle of advertising done for that firm, by its own order, or through an advertising agent, had never been paid for; and that no answers were made to business communications addressed to it or agents; the following reply has been received:

The present U. S. Manufacturing Co., has nothing to do with the advertising in your paper, as it bought out the old firm some three months ago. U. S. Mfg. Co. per H. O.

Our bill was not large, but the principle of fair dealing does not depend upon the amount of dollars and cents involved; hence we thought some of our Northern friends would like to know something about the singular way the firm adopts to repudiate its debts.

We have had the pleasure of a call from the Rev. B. Wood, Superintedent of South American Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, stationed at Montevideo, Uruguay. This mission embraces the Republics of Uruguay, Argentine, Bolivia, and the adjacent provinces of Brazil. This mission was organized in 1836, by Rev. John Dempster, but nothing was done in the Spanish language till 1867. It now has 500 members and about twenty preachers, all of whom but two, have been raised up on the ground, only six of whom receive any thing from the Missionary Society. There are connected with the Mission, over twenty appointments. Bro. Wood is also editor and publisher of a weekly paper in the Spanish language, which has a circulation of 500. The work in Mexico, he represents in the most glowing terms. The Church has seized upon the great centers of population and of social and political influence, and is evidently doing a more vigorous work than in South America. It is hardly possible to conceive of a mission more perfectly organized or aggressive than our mission in Mexico. Bro. Wood spent last last Sabbath with us, preaching at Ames in the morning and at First Street in the evening.

"May we raffle for charity?" asked a brother the other day. It is not good for charity to raffle; in fact, it requires a good deal of charity to understand why Christian men and women should want to raise money in this way. It is too much like the advice of an old man to his son when he said; "Do not go a fishing on Sunday, my son," but he quickly added, "if you go, be sure and do the best you can, and bring your fish home; we shall need them." One standard of morals seems about as elevated as the other. Both are full a thousand miles too low for the Christian.

The Des Moines Register says: "The ten thousand school ma'ams who go down the highways of Iowa every morning with linen aprons on and with the love of liberty and truth in their hearts have made Iowa what it is more than any other dozen forces in it—would take any State in the South and make its citizens liberal, intelligent, progressive and refined in ten years."

The Mississippi Republican of Jackson, has been revived for campaign duty.

The liquor dealers of Boston have an awful job on their hands. they have united to oppose prohibition, and to make the liquor business respectable. It is not difficult to oppose prohibition, but is quite another thing to make the liquor traffic respectable. Men never combine against what is harmless and ineffective. The objects of this union, as stated by the liquor dealers themselves, are proofs stronger than holy writ, that prohibition does restrict, and that for some cause the liquor traffic has become odious. There are now and then glorifying indications that people are fast coming to look upon the making and selling of liquors as odious. Not long since we read of a young man living in Tennessee who is a distiller and wealthy. He asked of a young lady the liberty to visit her with the view to marriage. Her reply was "No, sir, I can never accept the visits of a gentleman engaged in the business you are engaged in. I have nothing else against you, but this is enough." If all women would thus emphatically pronounce their verdict of disapproval against this most infamous business the day of its abandonment would be greatly hastened.

Our Presbyterian brethren North are having a good degree of success in their work among the Chinese in this country. In California they have two ordained missionaries, two churches, six native helpers, and 137 communicants, twenty-nine of whom have been received during the year. In Portland, Oregon, they have a Chinese night school with an attendance of twenty-four. In New York and Brooklyn, last year they reported six Chinese Sunday-schools, this year twenty-one. Others have been formed in the adjacent cities of New Jersey, while at Bradford, Pa., and Indianapolis, Ind., their work is full of promise. In the Second Presbyterian church, at the latter place, fifty-one have learned to read short sentences, and twenty-three are now able to read the Bible. Five have been converted and received into the Church during the past year.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Prof. H. A. Clifford, of N. O. University, had a pleasant trip to St. Louis and visit there.

—Hon. Wm. Dennison, first of Ohio's war-Governors, died in Columbus, on the 15th.

—Prof. Milo Parker Jewett, the first president of Vassar College, died in Milwaukee, June 9.

—A postal from J. M. Shumpert, presiding elder, informs us that H. H. Wilbourn, of the Columbus circuit, Mississippi conference, has been expelled.

—Special Agent J. D. Kennedy, of the U. S. Postal Service, is frequently heard from in the right way in the efficient discharge of his official duties.

—Dr. W. F. Warren, of Boston University, has gone to England as the fraternal delegate of the Methodist Episcopal Church to the Wesleyan Conference.

—Dwight L. Moody, the evangelist, is in Glasgow, where his son is at school. Mr. Sankey is traveling in Germany with his son for the benefit of the latter's health.

—The Mississippi Methodist announces that it has secured the services of Rev. R. S. Porter (Gilderoy), of Verona, as one of its editors; also that an enlargement is contemplated.

—We can merely announce this week the death of Rev. Scott Chinn, a superannuate of the Louisiana Conference, which took place in this city on Saturday evening last. An extended memoir will be given hereafter. It was for some weeks apparent that his earthly career must terminate, and no doubt the dear old father is now at home in glory.

—According to the newspapers Rev. R. A. Young, D. D., the new Missionary Secretary of the M. E. Church South, stands six feet seven inches high in his socks, and weighs 225 pounds, without any surplus flesh. He is fifty years old, and by birth a Tennesseean.

—Governor Cornell, of New York, has nominated for one of the city physicians of Albany, Mr. Thomas Elkin, a well-known colored doctor of that city. Mr. Elkin is a native of Albany, sixty-five years of age, and has had the advantage of travel in Europe, Asia, and Africa.

—We believe in woman's rights, so we believe that Miss Belle Braden acted just right when she accepted of the position of treasurer of the Waynesburg and Washington Railroad, Pa. It is said that she is the only lady in the country who is a railroad officer. She is also paymaster, and on payday makes her regular trips over the road in the paycar. All the employees on the road are delighted with Miss Braden.

—We learn that the president of the Nebraska Conference Seminary is about to resign, and that an effort is being made to induce Rev. W. S. Fitch, A. M., principal of Baldwin Seminary, to accept of the presidency of the former institution. It would doubtless be a grand thing for our brethren in Nebraska, and perhaps a going up a little on the part of Bro. Fitch; but we fear that it will be bad for Baldwin Seminary and for our cause here in Louisiana. We do not like to change men quite so often.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

W. E. Hill, Clinton: "I organized a society about eight miles from Comite, in the midst of sinners. The number is increasing, converts 15, from other churches 4, on probation 23. Sunday-school is getting along well but it needs books. We are trying to secure a lot on which to build a church."

Rev. T. Gates, writes from St. Martinville: "I found a debt of $300 and a membership of 80. Ten have joined since I came here. I found a Sunday-school numbering 15 we now have 35. The people are poor, and need schools there is but one in the church who can write his name. Mrs. Gates has a day school with 24 scholars in regular attendance."

Edward Richard, New Iberia: "Our presiding elder was with us Sunday night and preached a sermon that will never be forgotten. Rev. Wm. Davis has been a powerful instrument in building up the cause of Christ in this town. The Sabbath-school is prospering. Rev. Davis has organized a temperance society numbering 75. He is also about to buy a piece of land for a church, seven miles from here".

W. E. Hill, Clinton: "I visited a country place, and found a lot of young men and women, and they agreed to become Methodist people. I preached to them and organized a church and Sunday-school. Have had a number of converts. We are trying to get up a library for the Sunday-school."

W. Carr, Terrebonne: "We hope to ceil the church this year but will not contract a new debt. There are now 138 in Sunday-school, 11 have joined on probation. We raised $45."

TEXAS.

S. Smith, Belton: "The elder visited us, held our second conference, and found our protracted meeting going on. Collection $10-60. Two or three have been converted."

C. Young, Columbus: "We have just closed protracted meeting with 73 conversions, baptized 25, 59 joined the church. Rev. G. W. Richardson held the quarterly conference; collection $12 30. Sunday-school is improving. We are going to try to build a new church on this circuit."

M. Wilson, Midway: "Have closed a protracted meeting. Eight souls were converted and received into the church, second quarterly conference was held June 10. I am now completing my new church at Midway, and will open a protracted meeting there. Total membership of the circuit 148."

E. Lee: "The Navasota and Millican charges are both doing good work in winning souls and improving the church property. We added 60 at Millican to the church 50 at Navasota; 20 conversions at Millican, 8 at Navasota; Total 28. We expect to commence our new church at Navasota in a few days."

A. C. Culbreath, Huntsville: "We had a grand pic nic May 25. The children, parents, teachers and superintendents all went into the woods and had a nice time. The Sunday-school is in a growing condition. On the 28th we had a grand time; a missionary sermon was preached and $4 collected for church extension."

H. Christmas, Hondo: "I have just closed my second quarterly meeting Thirty partook of the sacrament; collection for presiding elder $12. 50. Raised a subscription for the church of $152. It is in a prosperous condition, as is also the Sunday-school. On July 9th I expect to begin a camp meeting, and I desire the assistance of brethren; another will begin at Fredericksburg, Aug 20."

Robert Williams, Frost Chapel and Pittsville: "The second Quarterly Conference was held on May 28th 1882. Rev. M. H. Nichols presided. The charge is in a good condition, the Sunday-schools are progressing fine, with an average attendance of 50 at Frost Chapel and 35 at Pittsville. There was 40 communicants at the Lord's table on Sunday. I have had no conversions this quarter, but a good many anxious seekers."

I. B. Scott, Houston: "We have just closed our protracted meeting in which we were faithfully assisted by Rev. Paul Douglas of Mineola, who was visiting our city at the time. Other brethren of the city assisted us also. We were blessed with eleven conversions; twenty additions to the church, three of whom have not been converted. In our last report you made the trustees collection $17 50, instead of $117 50. Pray for us."

Peter Morgan, Marshall: "In a recent protracted meeting at Ebenezer church, continuing four weeks, the church was crowded to its utmost extent. The final result was the accession of 50 souls. Presiding Elder Molloy was with us a good part of the time, and preached effectively. During the year 75 have been added to the church. The Sabbath school has an average attendance of 80. We are doing all we can for the missionary cause."

A. R. Norris, Austin: "I am working very hard to raise money to build a new church. Have raised about $700 since conference. Protracted meeting continued three weeks, and resulted in 52 conversions; 48 joined the Church. The closing exercises of our conference school May 31 were a grand success. Prof. G. O. Richardson has done a hard and efficient year's work. A few of the best scholars acquitted themselves nicely. There were speeches by Prof. W. E. Brooks, of Tillotson Institute; C. L. Madison, presiding elder of Austin district; Mr. Filmore, county judge of Travis county. The church was filled to the utmost capacity. Let some good friend of the colored people make a liberal endowment, so we can put up the Seminary building."

W. H. Jackson, Patterson: "The Sunday-school had a fine pic nic. Miss Malinda Pugh was crowned May queen by Mr. P. E. Jennings with Misses Georgia Asbury, Ruthia Smith Martha Byries, and A. Pierson, as maids of honor. After a short address by the writer and the queen, Revs. Daniel Adkins and Wm. Josey followed, on the value of Sunday schools. A well spread table was enjoyed, as was also the evening concert. The proceeds of concert were $4.85. We wish you could have witnessed it."

S. W. Harvey, Caney: "I have 7 converts, 6 on probation and 3 Sunday-schools. We will have a camp meeting June 22."

MISSISSIPPI.

J. D. Brandon Smithville: "Our second quarterly conference held by Elder Shumpert. The reports showed a rapid ingathering of souls, and the general propensity of the church. Received during the quarter for minstr $57 30, of which $5 30 was paid to elder. The Sunday-school collection in addition to this was $4 45. Rev. R. Snell is a live minister, and under his charge we anticipate prosperity throughout the entire circuit. The next conference will be held at Quincy."

R. Hays, State Line: "Elder Dunn held our second quarterly conference. We had a good time, On Sunday he preached to a large congregation. Have had 4 conversions, 8 on probation. There are two good Sunday-schools."

TENNESSEE.

G. W. Marsh, North Lebanon Circuit: "We are having good meetings and a good many converts. The times are hard and the the people are suffering. At one of my churches all the members save twelve have moved West. It once numbered fifty members. They are paying me about five dollars a month. I fear I shall soon be without support."

A. Fisher, Danville: "I took this work the first of April, have two appointments, and have one church house deeded to the M. E. Society. I have two fine Sunday-schools with 75 children enrolled. I have had one protracted meeting. During the time of our meeting the Presiding Elder, W. B. Pullam, held his quarter with me and preached four rousing sermons, and we have had 18 souls to come and join the Church, also some converts The Presiding Elder gave the children and old people a fine lecture on education, and a famous school teacher from Walker county came over and brought his children and joined with us for the day. He took his seat with the children, and while they sang he played the organ. The day passed off nicely."

Letter From Luling.

DEAR EDITOR.—We have just finished a protracted meeting and can report that in five days 27 have been converted, 30 have joined on probation, have baptized 13 children and 2 adults. Our Quarterly meeting followed immediately. It was children's day and, appropriate to the occasion, Prof. G. O. Richardson, of the West Texas Conference Seminary was with us as Presiding Elder pro tem. Bro. Richardson is no stranger in our community, and was cordially received

Dr. Neal, a graduate of Meharry Medical School, Central Tennessee College, addressed the Sunday-school. His words were fitly spoken. We are glad he has located here, and expect him to build up a good practice.

At 11 a. m. Bro. Richardson gave us a rousing sermon on education, which was heartily endorsed by the people. The Presiding Elder's collection, $9 15, had been raised by the envelope system and was out of the way. So when Bro. Richardson had finished his discourse he called for a collection for the Conference Seminary. The people responded heartily, and, considering the hard times occasioned by last year's crop failure, gave a large collection, $5 10. Many expressed their regrets that they could not give more, and promised to give of the first of their fruits liberally at our next quarterly meeting. Our communion service and love feast were blessed meetings. Indeed it was a field day for Luling Circuit. Our camp-meeting will commence the last Thursday in July and continue over two Sabbaths.

Letter From LaTeche.

DEAR EDITOR—No doubt you would like to hear a little tiding from this part of God's vineyard. We are moving on slowly but surely. We have every reason to believe that God is on our side despite the opposing influence.

Through the untiring energy of our people the church has been repaired and comfortably seated. On the 11th of June, being the children's day, the church was beautifully decorated by our missionary, Miss Isabelle, and our Secretary, Miss Patty, to whom we tender our thanks, through you, for the taste so artfully displayed The day was ushered in with a peculiar brightness, and as the children took their seats under the floral bowers, an expression of cheerfulness could be seen depicted upon every countenance. Bro. Wells, the Superintendent, whose voice they have learned to love, opened the exercises of the day. They were then examined with marked precision, to which they responded with equal accuracy, upon the Life of Moses, the giver of the moral law, and the catechism. On the whole the children did well, and we seldom see such a spirit of delight and satisfaction as was manifested by old and young. The day closed with addresses by Bros. Francis, Patty, Anderson and Alexander.

Pray for us that we may continue to abound in grace.

Freedmen's Aid Society.

In times past several troupes of colored singers have been in the field with a view to obtain money to assist in the erection of buildings for institutions of learning in the South, or for the support of such institutions. The Freedman's Aid Society for a time gave its indorsement to one or more of these troupes. But it has been found, after experience, that the effect upon the society's interests has been any thing but beneficial. The society therefore some time ago took formal action declining to give any such indorsement in the future, and the executive committee requested that this fact be announced in all our Church papers. The society took no action, as a matter of course, either for or against any particular troupe. This is a land of freedom, and any numbers or set of individuals have a right to organize and travel through the country to obtain patronage for their orchestral or vocal efforts. But it should be understood that they act on their own responsibility, and that the patronage bestowed on them is in no way solicited by or in any way a benefit to the society named.

Another matter was also recently voted upon by the executive committee. Requests have often been made to the committee to employ persons as special agents to collect funds, and in the great need of more liberal contributions to meet the pressing needs of the society there has been a strong motive to listen favorably to such requests. But with a view to avoid expense as much as possible, and to foster in the Church the principle of systematic benevolence, it was voted to refuse all proffers for paid special services in collecting funds, and rely upon the pastors, as in the missionary and other departments of Church benevolence.—Western.

The Boston correspondent of the Washington Bee says: The feeling of indignation rife in this city, occasioned by the refusal of the proprietor of the Revere House, the home of Rebeldom, to accommodate General Robert Smalls during his recent visit to this city, has by no means subsided. MISSIONARY CONCERT PROGRAMME, JULY, 1882.

Subject—The North India Mission.

1. Scripture reading—Isaiah xliv.

2. Hymn 930.

3. The general interest of the theme—India as a Whole—may briefly occupy attention. Let one or two persons be specially prepared to present to the meeting some thoughts on this topic—one, perhaps, on the false religions of India; another on the general progress of missions there. India is a country of remarkable interest in the history of mankind. The control of its commerce, the possession of its territory, has been, in ancient and modern times, a stimulus for the greatest nations. It was this impulse which led to the discovery of the New World. Our race, now dominant here, is closely allied in blood and language to the Brahman, being of common Aryan stock, the progenitors of both having migrated from Central Asia, the one part westward, the other eastward. Some of the so-called sacred writings of the Hindus, in their purer form, date probably from an early period, perhaps as early as Moses; and, though the religious system which professes to revere them became a corrupt idolatry, similar to that of Greece and Rome, these writings themselves seem akin to a primitive revelation. The course of degeneracy in departing from the true God, as described in such passages as Rom. i. 18-23, is well illustrated here. Yet the superior intellect of the race, however darkened by religious error, manifests its vigor and kinship with our own, ascending all the heights of mental and moral problems with the European. The providential dominance of England over India only adds immensely to the obligations which we owe to the Hindus, on the score of affinity, on the score of profoundly allied human interests, and by virtue of our special welcome as disinterested philanthropists, to urge upon them the message of the Gospel.

The extent of India has been estimated at nearly 2000 miles in extreme length from north to south and [illegible] to west. The population [illegible] an average 215 to the square [illegible], while in the neighborhood of [illegible] Madras, and Calcutta it [illegible] density to from 400 to 800. Though Buddhism had [illegible] in India, the sect is now [illegible] mainly to Burmah, Nepaul [illegible] Himalayas. There are the [illegible] of the Punjab and Jains of [illegible] India; but Brahmin[illegible] supposedly based upon the [illegible] teaching the worship of [illegible], Vishnu, and Siva, and en[illegible] the system of caste is so[illegible] is the prevalent religion. The number of the so[illegible] gods is indeed incalculable; [illegible] is the figure sometimes [illegible]. Whatever of pure teaching [illegible] inculcation of virtue there may [illegible] certain parts of the "sacred [illegible]" or in the discourses of the [illegible], so dark and foul have [illegible] of Hinduism, [illegible] its dominion over the [illegible] society, so cruel its rites [illegible], that Dr. Henry M. now seen in public view. Caste exists. If it has any value as a system, its hideous deformities are recognized, and it will go down. Vast preparatory work has been done. The Bible has been translated into nearly all the considerably extended languages of India, and for some of the languages a fair beginning in general Christian literature has been made.

Inspired by the missionaries with some just sense of its obligatons, the British Government is at last working along with gospel effort for the real good of India. The country is being covered with railroads, canals are dug, agriculture is aided by extensive irrigation, native manufactures are fostered, a better style of living pervades the mass of the people, and it has now become the study of government officials how most widely to extend the system of primary education. The face of the better class of Hindus no longer wears a stolid air. The light of intelligence, in sympathy with the modern and Christian era, is on the countenance. Newspapers in the vernacular, or language of the country, are multiplying. Knowledge of the English language is spreading rapidly; the Bible in English and English literature are increasingly demanded. "India," says Max Muller, "seems to me riper for Christianity than any nation that ever embraced the gospel."

But the earlier age of missionary toil in India was one of the severest trials to faith. The London Society labored thirty years in a portion of the Madras Presidency without a convert. The American Baptists at Nellore had only twenty-three conversions in twenty-one years. We hardly reach more than the preparatory stage, according to Sherring, before 1830, when, including Ceylon and Burmah, there were seven societies at work, and 47,000 nominal Christians. Now, there are thirty-five societies. The progress of missions in India since 1850 is well illustrated in the following table, prepared by the Rev. B. H. Badley, of Lucknow, in 1880:

Foreign missionaries	339	479	623	689
Native preachers	11	97	225	369
Native Christians	91,092	38,731	224,258	340,623
Communicants	14,661	42,976	52,616	103,444

The 340,623 Christians signifies those who are baptized. Besides these Mr. Badley reckons 150,000 adherents—persons who are "almost Christians" in the sense of meetness for baptism. The "adherents" of the several missions are therefore now reckoned at 500,000. It has been said on good authority that, at least in our North India field, including the outlying circle, who are more or less imbued with Christian sentiment, the figures for "adherents" might be trebled.

4. Prayer for God's blessing on India—on the British Government there, that its administration may be more and more controlled by Christian philanthropy; on all the missionaries and missionary societies, and that a wide-spread awakening may speedily make the whole land Christian.

5. Hymn 932.

6. The geographical position of our North India Mission can be easily presented by enlarging upon the blackboard the map found in Dr. Reid's History, or the Manual for January, 1882. The latter is in the hands of every pastor, at least, and should not fail to be brought into use for this occasion. See a general description of the territory occupied by us in the January Manual, p. 17, and in Dr. Reid's History, vol. 2, pp. 106, 107. It will be easy for some person to be ready to point out the principal stations on the map, and give the names of the missionaries, the numbers of Church members and of Sunday-school scholars in each. For this resource must be had to the last report, which the pastor possesses. Let the location of the orphanages and schools for higher instruction, both of the Parent and Woman's Society, be remembered. (See January Manual, pp. 27-30, and April Manual, pp. 192, 193.) Let the woman's work in zenanas and the medical department be also called to mind. (January Manual, pp. 31-33.) For the outline history of the mission we have again but to refer to the January Manual, where twenty pages are occupied with it. The main points should be recalled—the date of Dr. Butler's opening the Mission, (1857,) the founding of the Mission press, (1859,) organization of the Conference, (1864,) beginning of the woman's work, (1870,) new impulse to the Sunday-school work at Lucknow, (1871,) founding the Theological School, (1872,) the Memorial School, (1878,) the Centennial School, (1877,) the development of the native preachers and the setting off of the first native presiding elder's district, [illegible] in which the [illegible] occupied, special parts of the work; for particular missionaries; for God's blessing on their preaching, that it may be followed by numerous conversions; for the native Christians and the native preachers.

8. Hymn 920.

9. While the foundation of the whole work is the preaching effort of the missionaries, conducted in various ways, certain prominent interests of the Mission which come into view at the present day should be particularly remembered. See the report for 1881, and the January Manual, pp. 190, 191. We here call attention—

(1.) To the Sunday-school work. This is the most rapidly developing element in the Mission. Our Church has decidedly led the way in India in bringing the non-Christian native children into the Sunday-school. This is the great object for which the Rev. T. Craven and others have labored, beginning at Lucknow in 1871. It is a wonderful success. The Hindoo and Mohammedan children take to it; they sing Christian hymns and Bible texts with zeal. The number of scholars has grown from 8,958 (1880 Report) to 13,111 the past year, and the advance for the current year bids fair to be still greater. The schools are conducted much as at home. The returned missionary brings a picture of some of his scholars, as having passed a perfect examination for first-class certificates for reciting Golden Texts and selected verses. Four are the chief singers of the school. Above them is the banner with the inscription, Rastbazi ki dhundho—("Seek after righteousness")

(2) The educational work, especially in the higher grade, is becoming more and more an essential part of the Mission. The special need of it, to which we here refer, is the training of teachers and preachers to guide and instruct the people who will soon, it is expected, come out from Hinduism in large numbers. Well-trained native men are the great want of the times.

(3.) The press is doing a work of incalculable importance—a most indispensable force in the Mission. It has now to supply the Christian reading which the spread of education demands for the people; and it must work with all the resources at its command to counteract the increasing productions of the Hindu and Mohammedan presses, for these are not idle. Readers multiply on every hand for them, also. Books of all sizes are being made by them. There are 31 anti-Christian presses in Lucknow. One employs 720 men, and issues hundreds of publications; 14 editions of the Koran, and 9 editions of the Ramayana, the popular Hindu poem, recounting the adventures of the god Ram. Millions of tracts issue from these presses yearly—tracts on the professed miracles of the heroes or gods, or on the worship of Monkadev and other deities, or appeals to sensual passion. The worst of the latter are abundantly printed, and publicly circulated. Now to meet all this, we have our one Christian press at Lucknow, and it is doing a grand work. It issues thousands of different publications yearly—Sunday-school papers and attractive picture-books. For Theological students it has translated parts of Whedon's Commentary and other like works; it has tracts for general circulation setting forth the nature of the Hindu gods in a true light, and the evil results of superstition and idolatrous teaching. Speaking the languages in which our press prints (the Hindi and Urdu) are 100,000,000 people. What, then, is the one Christian press "among so many?" Still "the harvest truly is great and the laborers are few." This is a heavy burden the Mission feels to-day. The press must be strengthened; it must be enlarged greatly.

10. Pray, then, earnestly for God's blessing on our Lucknow press, its tracts and its books as they go out, that help may somehow come to it for an expansion of power. Pray for the training schools and their work, and their enlargement. Pray that benefactors of these schools may be raised up in India, in England, in America, and that help may come to them speedily. Pray for the glorious Sunday-school work, that God may be pleased to prosper it more and more, and that so, out of the children's mouths, he may "ordain strength" for a divine "conquest of India." Massih ki jai! "Victory to Christ!"

11. Hymn 908.

12. Benediction.

The subject for the next month will be "The South India Mission."

The last mentioned number devotes ten pages to a notice of books on India.]

SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

SECOND QUARTER—REVIEW, June 25th.

In the first lesson we were taught that in actual labor the disciples of Christ are trained for duty. In the second, the death of John the Baptist showed the hatred of the wicked for the reproving servant of God. In the third, by the feeding of the five thousand, Jesus illustrated the hunger and thirst for righteousness. In the fourth, Christ walking on the sea, exhibited his power over the elements. In the fifth, obedience to the word of God, in spirit and in truth, was shown to be of more importance than mere forms and ceremonies. In the sixth, was exhibited His sympathy with the sorrow and sickness of the people. The seventh, explained the leaven of the Pharisees. In the eighth, he prophesied about his death; and rebuked Peter, who objected to his dying thus, while he possessed power to prevent it. In the ninth, the general principle was taught that whoever follows Him must take up his cross. In the tenth, the transfiguration is a decisive testimony to the divinity of Jesus. In the eleventh, the malignity of demons is made very apparent, in the long continued and fearful manner in which this child had been treated, and especially when the demon was commanded to depart. In the twelfth, the child-like believer illustrates who is the greatest in the kingdom. It is he who becomes humble and charitably useful.

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

Rust University.

This school has just closed its twelfth year as a chartered institution. The class examinations, exercises of the Literary societies, musical entertainments, and religious meetings were all well attended and much enjoyed.

A comparison of these exercises with similar ones of former years would convince any one that those attending the school have made quite an advancement in scholarship, culture, and moral sentiment. The attendance during the year has been larger than could well be accommodated, but a new building is now in process of erection which, when completed, will more than double the facilities of the school. The most noteworthy occurrence during commencement week was an act of the Board of Trustees, by which the name of the school was changed from the Shaw to the Rust University. The following are the resolutions passed:

Whereas, it was the original design of the Rev. James Shaw, for whom our University was named, that the money given by him should be used for the support of a chair of Natural Science; and,

Whereas, the time has come when the interests of the institution demand that such a chair be established, therefore,

Resolved, that we do hereby establish such a chair to be known as the Shaw Professorship of Natural Science, and that all moneys realized from the gifts of said James Shaw be placed to the credit of such chair.

Resolved, further, that,

Whereas, The Rev. Doctor R. S. Rust, of Cincinnati, O., was the leader in the establishment of this and many other similar institutions in the South, and has given to their support the labors of the best years of his life,

We do hereby change the name of our institution from the Shaw University to the Rust University, and appoint a committee to secure the necessary legislative enactment.

The vote was unanimous and hearty, and the news of the change is every where received with rejoicing, for all hold Dr. Rust in the highest esteem.

With a new building and a new name we predict for the University a grand work in the future. Thousands will be taught within her walls, and hundreds of thousands will be blessed and led to higher places of life through the labors of those who go out full of the knowledge, culture, and enthusiasm received from her instructors.

W. W. HOOPER.

The President appointed to be members of the Board of Registration and Election in the Territory of Utah—Alexander Ramsey, of Nebraska; ex-Senator Paddock, of Minnesota; G. F. Godfrey, of Iowa; Ambrose B. Carleton, of Indiana; James [illegible], of Arkansas.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

From the International News Company, New York, we have received "Something to Read," an English journal containing novels and a chromo, with a monthly part. Price 25 cents.

The Edinburgh Review for April (New York; Leonard Scott Publishing Co.) gives papers on the Fall of the House of Stuart, Rosetti's Poems, the Empire of the Chalifs, the Comedies of Terence, Origins of English History, the Panama Canal, the life and writings of Edward Frisco, the late Lord Tweeddale's Orinthological Essays, Sir Thos. Brassey on the British Navy, the Haigs of Bemersyde, and Lord Beaconsfield's Speeches and Literary Works. The Quarterly teems with literary and general information most welcome to students and others with leisure hours on hand. Price, 75 cents per copy.

The Boston Musical Herald for June describes the New England Conservatory of Music, has four pieces of music, and an abundant miscellany.

Mr. Froude, the biographer of Carlyle, has written a short preface to go with Carlyle's posthumous "Reminiscences of My Irish Journey," when they appear in book form, the serial publication being completed in the fourthcoming July number of The Century Magazine. Mr. Froude adds, in part: "The Irish problem has not been solved since Mr. Carlyle's visit, nor has it been made more easy of solution by the policy of successive ministries, which has been precisely opposite to what Mr. Carlyle would have himself recommended. His remarks, rough and hasty as they are, can not be injurious and may possibly be useful." Mr. Froude quotes from Carlyle's journal of November 11, 1840, in which the latter sums up his Irish experience: "Ugly spectacle: sad health: sad humor: a thing unjoyful to look back upon. The whole country figures in my mind like a ragged coat; one huge beggar's gaberdine, not patched or patchable any longer; far from a joyful or beautiful spectacle."

The Original Chatterbox for June (Boston: Estes & Lauriat) with its charming tales and illustrations, is on our table. Price 10 cents per copy. Subscription price $1 per year.

The Little Folks Reader for June tells about Jumbo and Uncle Jack's story. D. Lothrop & Co., Boston; 75 cents a year.

NEW BOOKS.

VIGNETTES FROM NATURE. By Grant Allen No. 33 of the Humboldt Library of Science. J. Fitzgerald & Co., Publishers, 30 Lafayette Place, New York. Price 15 cents.

Of the twenty-two essays of which this volume is composed, there is not one which does not bear the impress of original thought and intimate knowledge of natural history. The author possesses that genuine feeling for Nature which makes a man find unfailing delight not only in what is grand and imposing, but in the lowliest objects that meet the eye in a ramble afield. The work affords most delightful summer reading. For sale by newsdealers.

"Ten Nights in a Bar Room," the famous book by T. S. Arthur is now sold by the Revolution Temperance Publishing House, Chicago. For $1 you get one copy and thirty-nine extra copies thrown in. It will be sold in no other way, say the publishers.

Feverish Colds

are very prevalent, and can be cured by Dr. Pierce's Extract of Smart-weed. This is a diaphoretic, and cures rheumatism and neuralgia. It is the best liniment for sprains and bruises. Sold by druggists.

The good people of Maryland are moving for a prohibitory amendment to their constitution. Already two-thirds of the counties have prohibition, and it is believed the amendment will soon be adopted.

Druggists say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the best remedy for female weakness that they ever heard of, for it gives universal satisfaction. Send to Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, 233 Western Avenue, Lynn, Mass., for pamphlets.

Miss Bell Bladen has recently been elected for the second time treasurer of the Waynesburg and Washington railroad in Pennsylvania. She is also pay master, making regular trips over the road in the pay-car. She is probably the only lady in the country who is a railroad officer.

Insist upon obtaining Floreston Cologne. It is preeminently superior in permanence and delicacy of odor.

The debt of thirty thousand dollars, which has been on St. Paul Church, Cincinnati, for several years, has been fully provided for. Less than forty persons subscribed the entire amount.—Western.

Social Success

can never be effected by the sufferer from catarrh. The symptoms, so unpleasant to others as well as to the sufferer, can be quickly removed by Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. Applied with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche it is certain. Sold by druggists.

The Chicago Advance points out the absurdity of the United States government shouting in one breath. The Chinese must go! and in the next, humbly beseeching the czar of all the Russias to please let the hated Jews stay.

The countenance of mortal man or woman cannot be celestially radiant and pure but with Dr. Benson's Skin Cure, it can be made smooth and free from tetter, scaly eruptions, freckles and climatic discoloration. A lovely toilet dressing.

Beware of mutual benefit associations run by white men under colored men's names.

For the relief and cure of the distressing affliction take Simmons Liver Regulator.

Biliousness.
One or two tablespoonfuls will relieve all the troubles incident to a bilious state, such as Nausea, Dizziness, Drowsiness, Distress after eating, a bitter, bad taste in the mouth.

Mr. B. B. Bruce, of Cleveland, O., writes: "I felt generally unwell. Not desiring to get into the clutches of some rapacious doctor, I stepped into a drugstore and inquired if they had a remedy that would cure anything and everything. The clerk promptly handed me a bottle of Brown's Iron Bitters. I said 'is it good for dyspepsia?' He replied 'There's nothing better.' I said 'My urine isn't just the right color, I guess my kidneys are out of order.' 'Just the thing,' said he, for kidney disorders, you will find it strengthens all parts of the body, and very refreshing to the mental faculties.' 'Just the thing I want,' thought I, and it suited my complaint precisely. I never before believed in 'cure-alls,' and now I make Brown's Iron Bitters the only exception, for I really believe it will relieve any disease that human flesh is heir to."

J. H. Henderson, a young colored lawyer of Okalona, Miss., agent for the Colored Mutual Benefit Association, of Verona, Miss., was in the city this week, and informs us he intends locating an agency for the association in Cairo. It is composed of some of the staunchest men in the state, spiritually, morally and financially, and we believe is destined to result in much good to the colored race, encouraging as it does pure, legal and holy marriage, giving each member thus married a handsome start in cash. The association did well to secure the services of such a high toned, Christian, sensible young man as Mr. Henderson. He left for St. Louis Thursday evening, on a short visit, and will return in a few days.—Cairo States.

Satisfaction for Ten.

In our family of ten for over two years Parker's Ginger Tonic has cured headache, malaria, and in fact all other complaints so satisfactorily that we are in excellent health and no expense for doctors or other medicines.—Chronicle.

Three colored men have been elected members of the City Council of Vicksburg.

Arkansas Democrats nominated Judge James H. Berry, for Governor; C. B. Moore, attorney general; D. W. Carroll, chancery judge; W. P. Campbell, commissioner of State lands; Jas. L. Denton, superintendent of education; C. B. Breckenridge, for Congress at large.

All the Gold and Diamond Mines of the earth are of less value than one healing Spring. The Seltzer Spa is worth all the treasures of California and Peru, and it has this advantage over them. Chemistry can produce it. In TARRANT'S SELTZER APERIENT its remedial ingredients are all present—while every useless element is omitted. The effect of this delicious effervescent preparation in dyspepsia, sick-headache, heartburn, biliousness, constipation and nervous weakness, are among medical marvels which must be experienced to be believed.

A Philadelphia correspondent of the Boston Commonwealth praises Mr. Plumer's American Hotel, opposite Independence hall, "where," he says, "a black man is presumed to have a white soul whether he be the 'renowned pilot' of Charleston or the poor negro by whose heroism the young girl was saved from the devouring element at the recent fire in New York. Wonder if the tavern-keeper of Boston would prefer to perish in the conflagration of his hotel rather than be saved therefrom by a son of Ham? Rather guess not! It was a great mistake of Ferrin, and I doubt not he has repented ever since. We have had the Fisk Jubilee Singers here twice within as many years, and nobody objected; certainly the landlord did not."

Prof. James A. Sewell, A. M., M. D., Of Medical Faculty Laval University, Quebec, states: "I have found Colden's Liebig's Liquid Extract of Beef and Tonic Invigorator particularly useful in advanced stages of consumption, weakness, dyspepsia and nervous Afflictions. In pregnant women it has been retained while every other article of food was rejected. I can recommend it as convenient, palatable and easy of digestion. (Remember the name, Colden's—take no other.) While a colored man, Lewis Lowry, was plowing in his field, six miles east of Opelousas, his plow struck something which, on examination, proved to be a ten gallon jar filled with Spanish silver coins of 1779 bearing the imprint of Charles III. The amount found is estimated at $8,000 or $10,000. One of the coins, a dollar piece, was brought to town, and it appeared almost like a new piece. It is said by those who saw the money that all of it was of this description, and none of it less than a hundred years old.

The best and safest way to increase the appetite, assist digestion, cause the food to assimilate properly, and the absorbents to take up nourishment, induce full and regular evacuation, produce easy expectoration, and stop decay of the lungs, heart, liver, urinary and digestive organs, is by using Brown's Iron Bitters. It has given satisfaction in more than a million instances.

"Where do people go who deceive their fellow-men?" asked a Sunday school teacher. "Sometimes to Canada; but mostly they goes to Europe," was the reply of the youngster whose uncle had recently been a trusted officer in a local bank.

Esthetics is the science of the beautiful. The meed of merit for promoting personal esthetics is due to J. C. Ayer & Co., whose incomparable Hair Vigor is a universal beautifier of the hair. Harmless, effective, agreeable, it has taken rank among the indispensable articles of the toilet. To scanty locks it gives luxuriance; and withered hairs it clothes with the hue of youth.

The Social Problem.

Dr. Ure, of London, has said, "I see the time coming when less than 100,000 men will perform all the work of England, now requiring 12,000 of men." That the introduction of labor-saving machinery is revolutionizing almost all constructive processes is patent to every person. What is to be the result upon our social system is the great problem of the day. The establishment of a Republic in lieu of a monarchical government is the very limit of political action, but it scarcely touches the question of social changes. The introduction of a machine that displaces a hundred men upon whose daily toil one hundred families are depending for support, is a fact of more than political import, for it is a matter of life, instead of one of rights. What can society do in the face of this great problem, to remain stable and peaceful? The question deserves profound consideration.—Forney's Progress

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Alcoholism, Drunkenness and the habit of Opium Eating. These degrading habits are by far the worst evils that have ever befallen suffering humanity. Thousands die annually from these noxious drugs. The drunkard drinks liquor not because he likes it, but for the pleasure of drinking and treating his friends, little thinking that he is on his road to ruin. Like the Opium Eater, he first uses the drug in small quantities as a harmless antidote. The soothing influence of the drug takes strong hold upon its victim, leading him on to his own destruction. The habits of Opium Eating and Liquor Drinking are precisely what eating is to alimentiveness, as over-eating first inflames the stomach, which redoubles its cravings until it paralyzes both the stomach and appetite. So every drink of liquor or dose of opium, instead of satisfying, only adds to its fierce fires, until it consumes the vital force and then itself. Like the gluttonous tape-worm, it cries: "Give, give, give!" but never enough until its own rapacity devours itself. Samaritan Nervine gives instant relief in all such cases. It produces sleep, quiets the nerves, builds up the nervous system, and restores body and mind to a healthy condition.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Nervous Dyspepsia, Palpitation of the Heart, Asthma, Bronchitis, Scrofula, Syphilis, diseases of the Kidneys and all diseases of the urinary organs. Nervous debility, caused by the indiscretions of youth, permanently cured by the use of this invaluable remedy. To you, young, middle-aged and old men, who are covering your sufferings as with a mantle by silence, look up, you can be saved by timely efforts and make ornaments to society, and jewels in the crown of your Maker, if you will. Do not keep this a secret longer, until it saps your vitals, and destroys both body and soul. If you are thus afflicted, take DR. RICHMOND'S Samaritan Nervine. It will restore your shattered nerves, arrest premature decay, impart tone and energy to the whole system

Is a compound of the virtues of sarsaparilla, stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, with the iodide of potash and iron, all powerful blood-making, blood-cleansing, and life-sustaining elements. It is the purest, safest, and in every way the most effectual alterative medicine known or available to the public. The sciences of medicine and chemistry have never produced so valuable a remedy, nor one so potent to cure all diseases resulting from impure blood. It cures Scrofula, and all scrofulous diseases, Erysipelas, Rose, or St. Anthony's Fire, Pimples and Face-grubs, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scald-head, Ringworm, Ulcers, Sores, Rheumatism, Mercurial Disease, Neuralgia, Female Weaknesses and Irregularities, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver, Dyspepsia, Emaciation, and General Debility.

By its searching and cleansing qualities it purges out the foul corruptions which contaminate the blood, and cause derangement and decay. It stimulates and enlivens the vital functions. It promotes energy and strength. It restores and preserves health. It infuses new life and vigor throughout the whole system. No sufferer from any disease which arises from impurity of the blood need despair, who will give AYER'S SARSAPARILLA a fair trial. Remember, the earlier the trial, the speedier the cure.

Its recipe has been furnished to physicians everywhere; and they, recognizing its superior qualities, administer it in their practice.

For nearly forty years AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has been widely used, and it now possesses the confidence of millions of people who have experienced benefits from its marvellous curative virtues.

A WONDERFUL [illegible]d
SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.

These Glasses are chemically treated in the process of manufacture, and possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analysed by American and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and can in some cases restore the sight if used in time, but in no case can the eye become impaired by their use for the following reasons:

1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye, completely doing away with that tiresome sensation that is usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours' use.

2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.

3. The chemicals keep the glasses cold, and the result is that the optic nerves are always cool, doing away with any feverish sensation to the eye.

4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, with no distressing or tiresome sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.

EARS FOR THE MILLION!
Foo Choo's Balsam of Shark's Oil
Positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness Known.

This Oil is abstracted from peculiar species of small White Shark, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as Carcharodon Rondeletii. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist Priest about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal that for over 300 years no Deafness has existed among the Chinese People. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1 per bottle.

HEAR WHAT THE DEAF SAY!

It has performed a miracle in my case.
I have no unearthly noises in my head and hear much better.
I have been greatly benefited.
My deafness helped a great deal—think another bottle will cure me.

"Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, as the writer can personally testify, both from experience and observation. Write at once to Haylock & Jenney, 7 Dey street New York, enclosing $1, and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. You will never regret doing so."—Editor of Mercantile Review.

AN ANSWERED PRAYER.

"Oh give me a message of quiet,"
I ask in my morning prayer;
For the turbulent trouble within me
Is more than my heart can bear.
Around there is strife and discord,
And the storms that do not cease,
And the whirl of the world is on me—
Thou only can give me peace.

I opened the old, old Bible
And looked at a page of psalms,
Till the wintry sea of my trouble
Was soothed by its summer calms,
For the words that have helped so many,
And the ages have made more dear,
Seemed new in their power to comfort
As they brought me my word of cheer.

Like music of solemn singing
These words came down to me—
"The Lord is slow to anger,
And of mercy great is He;
Each generation praiseth
His works of long renown,
The Lord upholdeth all that fall,
And raiseth the bowed down."

That gave me the strength I wanted!
I knew that the Lord was nigh;
All that was making me sorry
Would be better by and by;
I had but to wait in patience,
And keep at my Father's side,
And nothing would really hurt me
Whatever might betide.

The Care of Young Converts.

BY J. O. PECK, D.D.

Thousands of young converts have been added to the Church the past winter. The spring conferences are meeting, and pastors are being changed. The point that strikes most severely the effectiveness of the itinerancy is the relation of new pastors to the nurture of young converts. The new minister has before him the problem of keeping them alive or killing them off. Some do one and some the other thing, equally effectively. Then the first class of ministers report the work of their predecessor a thorough work, and the latter class report the work of their predecessor a superficial and trashy [illegible] The predecessor may [illegible] the same persons in different [illegible] followed by the above [illegible] successors making the [illegible] reports; and how [illegible] the logical conclu[illegible] the different results are [illegible] difference or indiffer[illegible] successors? Mak[illegible] allowance for all exceptional [illegible] every careful observation [illegible] years in a pastorate [illegible] familiar with New En[illegible] the West, the South, and [illegible] has clearly con[illegible] writer that keeping or [illegible] converts of a pre[illegible] largely on the [illegible] work of the successor. [illegible] some places the [illegible] Mr. Harrison noto[illegible] small percent[illegible] Christian life af[illegible] three years. I could [illegible] but will not [illegible] like Meriden, [illegible] Park Church [illegible] pastors, en[illegible] and faithful is [illegible] three per [illegible] Bishop Wiley de[illegible] Conference [illegible] the same, his [illegible] work the [illegible] the same in [illegible] difference [illegible] to the [illegible] act opposite of the pastor who has led many into the Church. It needs the same kind of pastoral care (though gifts may differ) to nurse and bring to maturity converts that led them to Christ. Yet when they are orphaned of that care, and feel the chill and loneliness of their orphanage, the charge is made that their conversion was not thorough. It is the lame apology of those who let them die of neglect! The blame is largely at their doors. How many children born into this world would "hold out" if they were not cared for and nursed during tender years? It is the nursing of young converts that keep them faithful. And it is the first and greatest duty of a Methodist minister to feed and nurture the lambs of the fold. The saving of souls is his only business. This involves, first, securing their conversion; it involves, second, instructing and confirming them in Christian living. Not only is he to preach for this, but visit from house to house, become personally acquainted with each soul, know its needs, difficulties and dangers, and by warm sympathy and personal counsel and indefinite hard work, save those souls to the Church and to Christ.

Rhetorical sermons, splendid oratory, may dazzle the people popularize the preacher; but pastoral work, warm prayer meetings and class-meetings, and vigilant personal care of each convert, are ten times more effectual in nurturing souls—and it is as much a minister's duty to nurture souls as to secure their conversion, to be a pastor as to preach, to feed the lambs as to feed the sheep. He will imitate the Divine Shepherd—"He shall feed his flock like a shepherd: he shall gather the lambs with his arm, and carry them in his bosom."

In our Discipline (page 95) pastoral visitation is made our chief work. Let me quote:

¶ 142. But it is objected:

§ 1. "This will take up so much time that we shall not have leisure to follow our studies." We answer, 1. Gaining knowledge is a good thing but saving souls is a better. * * * But, 4. If you can do but one, let your studies alone. We ought to throw by all the libraries in the world, rather than be guilty of the loss of one soul.

This is strong language, but forms the keystone of the arch of our success. From the beginning it has been the secret of the most spiritual and effective of our pastors. Mr. Wesley, at the age of fifty-five, writing from Colchester, where he found the church had decreased, though they had had good preachers, but not pastors, declares;

By repeated experiments we learn that though a man may preach like an angel, he will neither collect, nor preserve a society that is collected, without visiting from house to house.

At seventy-one he writes:

I began at the east end of the town to visit the society from house. I know no branch of the pastoral office that is of greater importance than this.

Now let me formulate the care of young converts.

1. The pastor must shepherd them. He must know them by name. He must become personally familiar with their needs, and minister to them. He must make that interest felt. Seeking them out at home and in all the meetings of the Church, he must shake hands with them specially and warmly, speaking a timely word, inquiring as to their Christian life, cheering and encouraging them, "line upon line, line upon line; precept upon precept; here a little, and there a little," and, in all a good deal of shepherding he must give them.

2. The pastor must teach them specifically. Not only pulpit instruction, but special meetings must be held for them. A monthly meeting for instruction in the doctrines and duties of the church is sure to give them vertebrate strength. It grounds them in the truth as we hold it. They become intelligent Methodists. The older members of the church have often asked to attend, and greatly enjoyed and profited by this service.

3. The pastor must carefully classify them. To get them to attend class with delight is a great art. He must know the qualities of his leaders, and classify the converts so that there will be a fitness of [illegible] Many converts are assort[illegible] Some leaders ought to [illegible] in their resigna[illegible] possible better [illegible] is [illegible] godly women, for young ladies and children, and even boys of fifteen, the best leaders I have ever known. Then let the pastor frequently visit the classes and speak cheering words. Leaders and members are quickened with new interest and zeal.

4. The pastor must endeavor to make the older members nursing fathers and mothers. Alas! too many of these never attend class, or speak in prayer-meeting, and need to be converted over again. They are social icebergs and spiritual Greenlanders. They do nothing to help young converts, but are quick to condemn them as not genuinely converted if they become as lukewarm and neglectful of duty as themselves. But there are many living, loving Christians who are ready to help. Many even crave something to do. One of the most excellent methods I know of I claim as a personal invention.

Suppose there are three hundred converts. Select with care, with nice adaptation, three hundred of the best members of the Church, and assign to each one of these a young convert. This member is to be the guardian angel of that convert, to see the convert once a week at least, to know him, to encourage him, to counsel him, to see that he is at all the meetings, to visit him if sick, to seek him out and lead him back if he wander. This was originally the class leader's work, but they cannot or do not do it in our large classes. The above method promotes three good things: 1. Social intercourse; 2. Benefits the members; 3. Saves many converts.

In conclusion, the care of young converts is the pastors most Christ-like work. The brightness of the firmament is the glory of the minister who is instrumental in saving souls.—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

Mississippi Teachers.

At a meeting of the colored teachers of East Mississippi, held at West Point June 8, 1882, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

1. Resolved, That we, as colored teachers assembled, heartily endorse the Teachers Institute now in session here under the supervision of our worthy Superintendent of Education, T. B. Dalton, and that the thanks of this Institute be, and are hereby, tendered to him for the interest he has shown in our advancement and improvement as teachers.

2. That in the selection of professors, J. G. Dupree and G. W. Turner, by our Superintendent, as lecturers, he has displayed much wisdom, as their exemplifications of the latest and most approved methods of instruction have been of incalculable benefit to us.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be furnished the West Point Leader and SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication, and a copy be forwarded to Hon. John F. Slater, Norwich, Conn.

Letter from Texarkana.

MR. EDITOR: Please say in your paper that the Colored churches M. E. of Texarkana, Arkansas, are pushing ahead and doing all they can for the cause of Christ. Our city is on the line of Arkansas and Texas, and is a beautiful little town of about 7000 people. We have one colored Baptist church and one African Methodist church. Both these churches throw every obstacle in our way they can.

I remember that Mr. Wesley had eight or ten followers when he first commenced to teach the truth as it is in Christ. We at this place did not have that many. Since the 19th of last March we have added to our little band thirty-five or forty members, and are determined to push the good cause on. Now, after great trouble and the loss of time in finding some one able and willing to preach and instruct us and at last we find in one Bro. W. M. Fuller a man of good character, and fully competent in all things to point us to heaven.

We have purchased a lot that cost us one hundred dollars. We paid fifty dollars cash, and fifty will be due in six months. We thank God we are getting along as well as we are. Rev. G. Sams was here on the 24th of April, and examined our work and found it good.

Our Sunday-school will be organized on the fourth Sunday of this month. Brethren, pray for us that we may come to Christ and be sincere in all things. Lord bless the M. E. Church, is our prayer. Push the great cause through the world.

ROBERT ROBERSON.

[illegible], June 20, 1882.

The Iowa Battle.

The proposed amendment to the Iowa Constitution is good, brief and to the point. It reads as follows: Section 26. No person shall manufacture for sale, sell or keep for sale as a beverage, any intoxicating liquors whatever, including ale, wine and beer. The General Assembly shall, by law, prescribe regulations for the enforcement of its provisions herein contained, and shall thereby provide suitable penalties for the violations of the provisions thereof." And it seems to be heartily supported by the best elements of the population in that State. The Des Moines State Register, published at the capital and the leading paper of Iowa, supports it with vigor and directness, and throughout the counties it has a large following among the smaller papers. The churches are as a unit in the matter, radical and determined, and the temperance associations, led by Hon. Aaron Kimball, are announcing a long list of prominent speakers for the coming contest. The election promises to be non-partisan, Republicans, Democrats and Greenbackers giving it earnest support. Judge McHenry, of Des Moines, and one of the leading Democrats, and Col. Haper, prominent in the Greenback ranks, are with and in favor of the movement, and friends anticipate a large majority. If it prove true, the moral impetus to prohibition can scarcely be anticipated. If men of acknowledged standing in political circles, if the churches, if the papers there can stand radically for an amendment absolutely prohibiting the sale of liquors, if the election shows how possible such an amendment and such a victory really is, it is not too sanguine a hope to entertain that prohibition may at no distant day, become the belief and practice in the majority if not all of the States. Yet still Wisconsin sleeps!—Christian Statesman.

The Colored People of Kentucky.

W. H. Ongley, Esq., of Jeffersonville, Ind., has favored us with the following clippings from the Indianapolis Times, of 16th inst.:

The colored people of Kentucky met in convention at Lexington on Wednesday, and passed resolutions demanding their rights as citizens, the full protection of the law and the abrogation of all discriminations, against them on account of race or color. The resolutions are well framed and evince the spirit of earnest, honest men, who ask nothing more than their rights. Among the speakers at the convention was an old colored man named Lewis G. Clark, of whom the Louisville Commercial says:

He made a speech that reminded one of Demosthenes. Half a dozen reporters for as many Louisville and Cincinnati papers started to take his speech down, but found themselves listening to him with open mouths. Everything was forgotten in the magic of his oratory. An old white-haired man, with wrinkled visage and deep set eyes, his gestures were inimitable. He kept the convention spell-bound for an hour, and when he concluded the audience stormed for ten or fifteen minutes.

The Louisville Commercial thinks the address and resolutions of the recent convention of colored citizens of Kentucky were "were couched in fine temper, and will produce a fine impression over the State." There is no doubt about the first part of the proposition, nor about the second either, so far as just and fair-minded men are concerned. But, unfortunately, there is a large class in Kentucky who are neither just nor fair-minded in anything relating to the colored people. We mean of course the Bourbon Democracy, and upon these, we fear, the temperate and manly address of the colored convention will have little or no effect. Time works wonders, however, and even the Bourbon Democracy of Kentucky will eventually have to yield to the progressive spirit of the age and to do justice to the blacks. If not this generation, some other.

We are indeed surprised that a public official should thus openly violate the law by dueling. It is sadly true that our new Constitution, unlike that of 1867, does not disfranchise those who fight duels, but the law nevertheless regards as a murderer a man who kills another in a duel. It is murder in the eyes of God, and we believe is so regarded by nine tenths of our people. The custom, instead of being an honorable one, is but a relic of barbarism. A real gentleman, if he has wronged another, will readily make amends, and he who is not willing to wright a wrong is no gentleman, and a good man should not risk his life in combat with such an one. Thus we place the question on high grounds, and ere long hope to see public opinion crystalized into wholesome law on the subject, which will forever stop dueling.—Sugar Bowl.

Something to Ponder.

The closing of A. T. Stewart & Co.'s business, which is now fixed for June 30, suggests much thought.

Alexander T. Stewart was a great shop-keeper—perhaps the greatest shop-keeper the world has ever seen. But outside of this line his mind appears to have been narrow, his thoughts scattering, and his plans characterized by indecision. from his death till to-day his schemes have languished. Their fate is a graphic illustration of the ancient words, "In that very day his thoughts perish."

The mausoleum built for his body is supposed to be empty, and greater uncertainty from this side the dark river may be felt concerning the condition of his soul. Over his palace on Fifth Avenue, his great hotels and greater store, over his factories, his villages, his churches, and his lands, might with propriety be written, "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, * * * but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, * * * For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also."

When his secular confessor, who entered so woundrously upon his possessions, barred out the Jewish banker, Seligman, and all other Jews from the Grand Union Hotel, Seligman, with the wrath of a Mordecai of old against Haman, declared that the house of A. T. Stewart & Co. would not last five years. His prophecy is in substance fulfilled, though there may be no connection between that act of arrogance and the end. Yet there may be.

On the whole, the toppling of overgrown fortunes and the disintegration of enterprises of portentious dimensions bodes no ill to the people.—N. Y. Advocate.

Homes Needed.

Amid all the efforts made for the elevation of the masses, very little or nothing has been done towards giving them the first great necessity, a clean, well-ventilated home, with plenty of good water. Nearly all the murders and suicides committed in New York City the past year have had for their theatre miserable tenement rooms, whose heat, filth and discomfort might almost tempt a well-disposed man to "drink and forget his misery," and being drunk to be reckless both of his own and every ones life, where life had so little to make it desirable Poisoning with filth ought to be as unlawful as poisoning with prussic acid, and the same laws that condemn bad fish and meat and unwholesome fruit, should also condemn all dwelling-houses unfit for pure and healthy existence. Landlords have complained very bitterly of late at what they term the "exactions" of the sanitary and health committee; but they ought to consider themselves mercifully treated in being compelled to do right; for if fines and imprisonments could atone for fever-slain tenants, there are many rich who ought to be poor, and many far too free for their deserts. Preachers may sow the seed, but it falls on bad ground in these wretched houses. A man must have a home before he will become a good husband, father and citizen.

Our brethren beyond the "border" have held their General Conference and now are to address themselves to a quadrennium of doing, in respect to which they have good grounds for encouragement and hope. This, however, applies chiefly to their regular and executive church work, while it is evident that their wise ones do not see an open sea and plain sailing before them ecclesiastically. A sign of this is seen in the movement made just before the final adjournment to change their denominational name, and in the debates upon that question. The suffix "South," (not "prefix," as the speakers persisted in calling it) though awkward and ungrammatical, is descriptive of the peculiar character of the body, as differentiated from that out of which the new organism was derived, and the condition of things which that name indicated was the chief reason to be of the new body. The word "South" at that time had a definite and distinctive meaning, which was felt and confessed in all the land in respect to a well ascertained portion of the country, with its political, ecclesiastical, and, above all else, its social affairs. But that "South" has ceased to be, and "reconstruction" has become inevitable. Some, probably old men, who seemed not to have learned anything from the events of the last twenty years, plead for maintaining the original name and position; and others, with something of the foresight of statesmen, declared that the logic of the proposal for change of name was "simply to go bodily back to the M. E. Church." The subject was at last referred to the annual conference for consideration, and memorials to the next General Conference, during which interval "time, the avenger," will continue its work.—The Methodist.

The Sermon That Accomplishes.

A sermon that is to accomplish an end and to be worth listening to, must embody real thoughts, thoughts that have some connection with the interests and issues of life, and must be instinct with the living convictions of the preacher. To be such a sermon, it must come from the preacher's mind and warm heart, with the very life blood of his soul at the moment of its delivery. But how a preacher can stand up before an audience and proceed to read as a message to living men a sermon which he wrote thirty, twenty or even ten years ago, I cannot understand When written, the sermon doubtless was a real transcript of the writers thoughts, convictions and emotions. But during the rush of intervening years, what changes, if there has been a soul within him, have passed over his spirit? To write that sermon now would be simply impossible. And yet he tries to put himself into it, and in that guise presents himself to an audience of thinking people. An old coat that he wore twenty years ago might be aired, and the dust whipped out of it, and he presents himself in it with much more propriety than in that old sermon. No treatment of the sermon can relieve it of its smell of age. Like an old bouquet of flowers, its once delicate fragrance has sunk into a sickening odor.—President Robinson.

Heart Treasures.

A wealthy nobleman who died some years since had an iron safe or chest all locked up, but marked, "To be removed first in case of fire." After he died his friends opened that chest, supposing of course that some valuable documents or deeds of property, rich jewelry, or costly plate would be found. But what was their astonishment when they found nothing but the toys of his little child, who had gone before him. Richer to him were they than all the world's wealth, richer than his coronet, brighter than all the jewels that sparkled on its crest. Not his estate, nor his jewels, not his equipage, nothing great and glorious in this world, but the dearest objects to him were the toys of his little child.

Once in a while we still hear the old croak that religion has lost its hold on the general public; that the church and its pulpit are no longer a power in the world; and that religious reading has given place to the daily newspaper. To this venerable fiction there is no better answer than that given by the annual statistics of the number of books in the several classes of literature published published in America and England. From the figures of the English book-trade for the last year, it appears that, 'as usual, theology heads the list with nine hundred and forty-five works; educational and classical publications are second, with six hundred and eighty-two,' etc. Publishers issue books to sell, and they are not accustomed to put forth year by year that which nobody buys; so that the regular publication and sale of religious books is a perfectly fair test of the general demand. That little coterie of readers which no longer cares for religious books, makes the ostrich's mistake of measuring the capacities of other heads by the situation of its own.—Sunday School Times.

The normal temperature of the body is 94.4 to 98.8. There are two scales, one on that of collapse, when the temperature will run down to 92.3, which is the fatal limit in that direction. Moderate fever is from 101 to 102 in the morning and 103 in the evening; considerable fever, 102 to 103 in the morning to 104 in the evening; high fever is above 103 in the morning and above 104.9 in the evening, dangerous fever, 104 to 106; fatal high temperature is 107.6, except in certain classes of fever.

Submission and Trust.

There is a story narrated in the classic history of Augustus Cæsar that a troublesome pirate, who had destroyed many of the Roman vessels, and Cæsar, having hunted him in vain for some time, offered a reward of ten thousand talents for the pirate's head. Now, the pirate, knowing the case to be hopeless, and perhaps somewhat relenting, came himself to Cæsar, and laying his head down before him in the dust, he said, "Ten thousand talents; I have brought the pirate's head." Cæsar looked at him with astonishment, but said, "You have trusted the generosity of Cæsar, and no man shall trust him in vain. You are pardoned; there are the ten thousand talents too." Poor, guilty, trembling sinner, "Go thou and do likewise."

The Wife.

Let a man have a cheerful and confiding wife, full of the love of Christ, and one that will help and encourage him when trials and adversity come, one that will not complain and frown because she cannot have all her wishes gratified—let a man have such a wife and he will be strong. Though clouds may hang over his life for a time, he will yet see them dispersed, and success will crown his labors. Such a couple will be happy notwithstanding all their discouragements and trials.

Dr. J. G. Holland and five other well-known citizens formed a corporation under the name of The Metropolitan Coffee-House Company of New York, "to establish, maintain and carry on coffee-houses for the use and enjoyment of the public generally, and especially of the working classes; and in connection therewith to establish, maintain and operate reading rooms, libraries and halls in which lectures, concerts and entertainments, and secular and religious meetings may be given and held; and in more particular terms, the nature of the business of the said corporation is to be the compounding, preparation, sale and supply of such refreshments, foods, drinks and beverages, as shall not be of an intoxicating nature, and of tobacco, and to provide, by purchase or otherwise, and fit up stands, stalls, rooms, halls, shops and other buildings, either of a permanent or temporary nature, and to supply the same with books, newspapers and publications generally, and to contract for, arrange and operate lectures, concerts, entertainments and secular and religious meetings, and to do all such other things as incidental and conducive to the attainment of the above objects."

We want our schools taught by men and woman who understand teaching in its true sense, not by those who are teaching to get a little money to go into the grocery or some other business, but by those who, being fully conscious of the responsibility of the work, go into it with a determination to live and to die. When this is done the public will begin to realize that teaching is an important work, and that those engaged in it will be looked upon with respect.—Ed. Review.

All church members ought to be active in keeping things up. One of the great faults in churches is that so much is left to church officers and other officials of societies. Whereas each member ought to be personally active in that in which he is interested; and he ought to be interested in every work. The way to make healthy and useful church officers is to back them. Do not make it necessary that officers in the church and societies should drag you along. You were not designed to be dragged, but to walk and to run, with a voluntary glad step.—Christian Intelligencer.

Some fallacies about the prosperity that comes with high wages were very well made plain the other day by Senator Vance, of North Carolina, when he spoke of the boy who boasted that he had sold his hen for one hundred dollars and had taken his pay in two fifty-dollar puppies. "The law of wages," said Prof. Summer, "cannot be better stated than it was by a working man, who said: 'I know when two bosses are running after one man, wages are high; when there are two men running after the one boss, wages are low.'"

Teacher asked of a little boy: "What is a reptile?" "Don't know," said the boy. "Oh, yes, you do, something that crawls." "Oh, a baby."

The following estimate is made of the damage done by the cyclone in the various counties of Iowa: Boone $20,000, Story $30,000, Jesper $50,000, Powarhiek $10,000, Keokuk $100,000, Henry $1,200,000, $Pochantas $10,000. George Bennett, an Iowa farmer, was accused of criminally obtaining money by contracting to deliver grain which he did not possess. He protested that he knew nothing whatever about the matter, but the evidence against him convinced a jury, and a year ago he was sentenced to three years in the Penitentiary. The man who personated Bennett has now been detected, and the convict's innocence is made clear. The Governor has pardoned him, and will ask the Legislature to vote him $5,000, besides a parchment on which the facts in the case are officially inscribed.

The French Protestants propose to raise a monument to Admiral de Coligny, whose murder by the Guises was the preface to the massacre of his coreligionists on the night of Aug 24, 1572. After the massacre of St. Bartholomew, Coligny's corpse was decapitated and dragged to the gibbet of Montfaucon, where it was hanged amid those of the malefactors executed there. It is proposed to erect a tomb to him in the space between the Protestant Church of the Oratoire and the Rue de Rivoli, and a Committee has been formed which includes many Roman Catholics as well as the elite of Protestant society.

The platform adopted by the Tennessee Democrats, and upon which Gen. W. B. Bate was nominated for Governor, declares the recent settlement of the State debt at 60, 63, 54, 65, 66 as unwise, because it is not in accord with the views of the people, also that there is a portion of the State debt, such as the bonds issued for building our Capitol, for the purchase of the Hermitage, Capitol, etc, with accrued interest, the validity of which has never been disputed by any portion of our party, we consider a valid and sacred obligation of the State and favor the payment of the same in full; that we tender to our creditors a settlement of the remainder of the State debt by paying one half of the principal and accrued interest by issuing the bonds of the State, bearing interest at the rate of 3 per cent per annum. The State Credit Democrats, who withdrew from the convention because of the adoption of the foregoing platform, held a conference, and decided to call a convention, to be held in Nashville on July 11, to nominate a candidate for Governor. They are very hopeful of success in the coming campaign.

Whitefield and Prayer Meeting.

Whitefield, it is said, was preeminently a man of prayer. He loved the prayer meeting. It was his bethel. Frequently he spent the entire night in prayer. It was his custom to preach three or four sermons during the day, and then spend as many hours in social or private prayer at night. Doubtless, his wonderful powers of eloquence had much to do with his success; but to us not half so much as the time he spent in public and private prayer. There were times when his heart was so full that he would break over the established rules and lay aside the prayer book, and rush to a throne of grace and pray without the book as the Spirit gave utterance. Red Cross street, London, was a place where the Wesleys and Whitefield frequently spent the entire night in prayer, and where the power of God came down so mightily upon them that many fell to the floor and cried out for exceeding great joy. Praying and preaching, these men went on from strength to strength doing the work of their Master.

Rev. Dr. Phillips says that "the prayer meeting was to Whitefield what the third heavens were to Paul, the finishing school of his ministerial education, the school of his spirit." If he was indebted to Pembroke College for his learning, it was the "praying meeting," as he calls it, that gave him his unction. "Here," he says, "I found spiritual strength." Here he caught the holy heroic fire, the overflowing, the all-pervading baptism that enabled him every where to preach the word, and warn sinners to flee from the wrath to come. "In these praying meetings," he says, "God gives me heaven upon earth, and makes my heart leap for joy almost continually. Here I have often seen persons overwhelmed with the divine presence and crying out, 'Will God indeed dwell with men upon earth?' How dreadful is this place! This is not other than the house of God and the gate of heaven." It was till after he heard John Wesley "expound the word and exhort" in one of these praying meetings that he overcame his scruples and ventured to preach in the open fields. It has been said that "God often hangs the greatest weights on the smallest wires." To Whitefield these prayer meetings were the strongest wires in all the machinery of the moral universe. It was the ten days prayer meeting that fired Peter's heart and gave him the unction to preach that Pentecost sermon that resulted in the conversion of three thousand souls in one day.

Shall They be Educated?

In most of our churches throughout the southwestern portion of our country, we have a few young men and women who have formed a high estimate of the importance of a thorough, a liberal education, and they have resolved to obtain it. They intend to give some years to the study of mathematics, the languages, natural sciences, philosophy, and general history, and thus lay a good foundation for a life of usefulness in whatever sphere Providence may place them. To all such we need not say that we approve of their choice, nor that we bid them God speed. We devoutly pray that they may never falter nor become discouraged. The good to be won, and the goal to be attained, will more than a thousand fold compensate for the money, the time, and labor expended. But few of these young men and women have money at command to meet their expenses, but they most uniformly have what is much better, they have health, and vigor of body, and can easily acquire the necessary money to meet all of their expenses, and thus thrown upon their own resources they feel the responsibilities of life, and become more devoted to their country, the Church, and God.

But while we write, we think of the thousands of another class. A few in this class are debating the question, and we fear a wrong decision. We know their surroundings and that the probabilities are six to four in favor of the wrong conclusion. And upon this class who read the SOUTHWESTERN we press this important matter. We ask for immediate decision. We care not what inviting opportunity of a more worldly nature is before [illegible], not how large the remunera[illegible] promised. We ask you to [illegible] to spend from four to six [illegible] in preparatory study. Do not [illegible] advisers, to men [illegible] you that a liberal ed[illegible] will be of no advantage [illegible] the needs and necessities of the Church or world. We look out on this great harvest field and this cry rings in our ears: "Educate, educate, qualify these young men and women for the accumulating work of these and future years." The Methodist Episcopal Church needs one hundred thousand educated young men and women in Southern fields to-day. She needs and must have an educated ministry. To place an ignorant man in the pulpit would be as great a folly as to clothe a fool in the ermine of a judge. Every man's common sense tells him he who would teach must first be taught. Sermons can no more flow from empty brains than meal from mills without supplies of corn in their hoppers. In this age of the world there can be no rational plea for an ignorant ministry. Methodists universally believe that every man who undertakes to preach the Gospel should be more or less educated. But we do not address ourselves particularly to this class.

All of our young men and women need by education to qualify themselves for usefulness and to fill any station in society and the Church. As a Church we are not a whit behind any other religious organization in providing ample facilities for the education of the young men and women connected with our church and congregations. The opportunities have been furnished, and we say to all of our young people, educate yourselves as thoroughly and as liberally as you can. Take for this great object all the time you need. Time thus spent is time saved, and money thus expended is money saved. All through the South we have our schools, and we say to our young people most emphatically go to them, let your scholarship be as broad, exact, and complete as these institutions can furnish. Remembering that your aim is future usefulness rather than present pleasure. Lay then a good foundation. Study, study, study, and in coming years you will never regret the time and money spent in securing your education. No barren and empty head has any thing to give to another. Let young people think of these things and turn their attention to the seminaries, colleges, and universities of learning and seek the highest preparation possible to their circumstances.

Knowledge is power, the time spent in getting an education is amply repaid by the increased force it gives both to heart and brain.

Never be in haste to get away from school. Time spent here is not time lost, it is a grand investment making sure returns in increase of power, position, and usefulness.

Bourbon Tactics.

A controversy between Hon. George L. Walton, President pro tem of the Louisiana State Senate, and Hon. David Young, member elect of the House of Representatives, growing out of the unseating the latter on the ground of alleged defalcation while a school treasurer of Concordia parish, discloses some ugly facts. Mr. Young claims that by virtue of the suspension of the Freedmen's Bank, in which bank the money was deposited, an amicable settlement with his successor in office, and a decision of the Supreme Court in his favor, he is not a defaulter. He has been twice elected to the House from a parish where the blacks and whites are in the proportion of eight to one, but the House, which is largely Democratic, has twice denied him a seat, asserting that he is ineligible because a defaulter. Mr. Walton, a Democrat, and member of the Concordia school board, knew all the facts in Young's case, yet entered into an agreement with Young looking to their mutual benefit as candidates, and other Democratic candidates agreed to a compromise by which they were elected by Republican votes. Mr. Walton is now at the head of the Senate, his election due to negro votes, and the representative of those negro votes, Mr. Young, is refused admission to the House on a pretext without apparent fairness. He seems to have the right to complain of the denial of his rights as a member elect of the House, and of bad faith on the part of Mr. Walton and his political friends. Mr. Young rejects the imputation that the settlement with him was a forced one because his bondsmen were "men of straw," as asserted by Mr. Walton, contending they are all responsible and solvent. The sharp practice adopted to deprive a Republican constituency of a representative deserves condemnation, and is as mean as bulldozing with shotguns. If Mr. Walton and other members of the Concordia school board knew Mr. Young to be a defaulter, it is [illegible] duty to proceed at law against [illegible] his sureties. Yet Mr. [illegible] they withdrew suit [illegible] and it is notorious that they afterward affiliated and acted with Mr. Young politically. Such conduct does not tend to good feeling between the two races, or the prevalence of common honesty in public affairs. It is humiliating to think that Mr. Walton, elected in the corrupt manner pointed out, would become acting Governor of the State on the death or inability of Gov. McEnery.

The Methodist Advocate.

The Pittsburg Advocate expresses regret that there is danger that embarrassment may come to the Methodist Advocate, of Atlanta, for lack of money to continue its publication. The General Conference of Cincinnati directed the agents to discontinue it, if the demand to meet its expenses exceeded a specified sum. The amounts appropriated prove to be insufficient, and there is no way but to abandon it, unless help comes from private sources. We believe that all who understand the situation at the South entertain no doubt as to the misfortune that must come to our work, especially among the whites, if the paper that has done such valiant service shall "cease at once to work and live."

We are in the South, and have some personal knowledge of the situation, and entertain no doubt as to the misfortune that must come to our work, not as among the white or colored (we are humiliated when we see our Church papers making these distinctions), should the Methodist Advocate of Atlanta be discontinued. And while we rejoice in the assurance that the paper is not to be strangled to death, we can but think that it is a little out of place for the great Methodist Episcopal Church to make one of her General Conference papers in any way dependent upon private beneficence. Bishop Warren has spent some time in the South. He understands and appreciates the situation, and while some of our doctors differ somewhat in their views and tastes, his opinions are not of a rose-water kind. The discontinuance of the Methodist Advocate would indeed be a misfortune to "the neglected whites of the South," but much more so to "our brethren in black," "who, educated, are destined to come to the front." We are more thankful than we can tell that Bishop Warren is leading on in this matter, and without the least hesitation give it as our opinion, to use a Texas phrase, that he in connection with Dr. Fuller will pull the Advocate through.

The Qualifications.

To a young lady who offered to go as teacher to South America for three years, Miss Whitfield, preceptress of our Female College in Santiago, Chili, sent the following reply:

"We want Methodists of good health, good education, experience, and success in teaching, good disposition, good common sense, not mercenaries, but missionaries, not sight-servers, but soul-savers, by the power of God. Persons wholly consecrated to God, who will honor the marriage relation of their souls with the Divine Bridegroom, who will go with the Man who made the world to help Him save it, and stay with Him in foreign lands till He shall bid them return. We don't send any body for 'three years,' nor for ten years. They must go to do the will of God. If we send any who don't fill the measure, we want them to return as soon as possible. If they are whole-hearted in it, we could not persuade them to return. Any body is at liberty to return whenever they want to, but if they are worth sending, they won't want to, unless duty calls them home. I am not speaking of natural love of home, but of high moral responsibility, and the higher love of helping Jesus in His great undertaking."

We have never seen the needs of our Southren work more appropriately expressed. Of mere adventurers or persons broken in health, coming here as the sick go to some grand hospital, or as an experiment, we have had enough. We need men of conviction and clearness of vision, who can look far enough into the future to see a little of the grand results of their trials and sacrifices, (if we may be allowed to use that word in connection with a work so glorious and full of promise,) as to get strength form present emergencies. Of all fields in the wide world for earnest, loving, Christian workers, to us this is the most promising.

The New-York Times has a carefully prepared forecast of the political character of the next House of Representatives. It gives the Republicans a majority of twenty-one as compared with a majority of fifteen in the present Congress when it was organized.

Local boards of health should be given ample powers to secure frequent inspections of dwellings and places of business; and also to put in operation schemes for better drainage whenever the public health demands it.

The debate in the House of Representatives over the bill for the expenses of the Yorktown Centennial Commission brought out a fact of the most disgraceful character. The original appropriation was $40,000, but the expenses overran the appropriation by $23,000. This was certainly bad enough, but what makes the matter worse, it appears that one of the special items in the expenditures was a bill for $7460 for wines and liquors. It was expected that the members of the commission would act with becoming dignity and propriety; but it appears that they "drank like fish," and acted more like wild men and brutes than like patriots and statesmen. The whole thing was more like a roystering junket carried on regardless of expense than a grand celebration. It was a disgrace to the country.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Rev. Dr. Matlack, of Wilmington, Del., is slowly recovering from a severe attack of chills and fever.

—Rev. E. J. Smith for the third time delivered the Decoration address at Chardon, O. A copy of a local paper containing it has been received.

—Under date of May 31, Rev. J. W. Butler announces to the Secretaries that Brother Craver, of the Mexico Mission, is considered out of danger. There are hopes of his recovery.

—Last Wednesday, Rev. Thos. B. Woods, of our South American Mission, ended his short and pleasant visit to New Orleans, by going to New Mexico, via the Southern Pacific route. He will visit relatives there, and return to the East.

—Rev. J. G. Vaughan, the new pastor for Ames, writes that he will be in New Orleans to enter upon his work as soon as July 20. Mr. Vaughan has had four years experience as a pastor, and is a graduate of Drew School of Theology, Madison, N. J., and of the Syracuse University, Syracuse, N. Y.

—Rev. F. D. Bookman, one of the best men of the Texas Conference, writing to this office and referring to Brothers Moore and Malloy, says, "God grant the day may soon come when we shall have the pleasure of welcoming to our Conference a full score of such Christian-hearted men to labor with us and for us. We need them."

—It is said that Spurgeon, the great Baptist preacher, has the misfortune of being frequently called upon by lunatics. But he shows an uncommon amount of good sense in managing them. One recently called to see him and said, "Mr. Spurgeon, you and I are one. I think the same things that you do, and I wish the same things that you wish." Mr. Spurgeon said, "Is that so? Do you really wish just what I wish?" "Yes," was the answer of the lunatic. "Well I wish that you would go away," and he had sense enough to go.

—On the seventieth birthday of Harriet Beecher Stowe, author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," etc, there were grand festivities at the residence of ex Governor Wm. Claflin, at which were many of the Beecher family and notable literary guests. Among other letters read on the occasion was a graceful one from G. W. Cable, Esq, of this city, as follows:

NEW ORLEANS, June 9, '82.

DEAR SIRS—I thank you most gratefully for the kindness that remembers me at such a distance, and regret exceedingly my inability to respond in person. To be in New England would be enough for me. I was there once—a year ago—and it seemed as though I never had been home till then. To be there again, to join friends in rejoicing over the continuance on earth of one who has earned the gratitude of two races of humanity, is greater than the measure of my cup. I can only send blessings on the day when Harriet Beecher Stowe was born.

Yours truly,
G. W. CABLE.

M. Dale, being at home in Pass Christian, gave his help and labored hard as a faithful minister of God. He did us great good. My second protracted meeting was held at Bay St. Louis, commencing May the 13th, and closing on the 30th. There were 6 conversions, and 4 backsliders reclaimed. Adults baptized 6, and 11 joined the Church and one by letter. On May 28, 16 joined the Church on probation. A. Brown and W. Dillard, of the Sunday school, at Oak Hill: write us that Children's day was duly observed. Rev. B. F. Williame preached to the children, and a collection of $2, 25 was taken up."

M. A. Hedgeman, recording steward, at Montgomery says Children's day was observed satisfactorily. The collection was $5, Rev. A. Adair and Bro. George Galveston conducted the services."

A. C. Culbreath, Huntsville: "Our childrens day was a grand time. We carried out the services in due form. There was music by W. H. Baines, recitations from the bible, collections amounting to $16. A sermon at night was on the subject of temperance, music by Miss Mollie McCoee."

Rev. F. D. Bookman under date of June 15 writes from Prairie Plains, Texas: "Last Sabbath we observed as Children's Day, which proved to be a perfect success. The church was appropriately decorated with flowers and evergreens. The congregation large and attentive. The services consisted of song, prayer, reading the appointed scripture lesson, a sermon by the pastor, and recitation of portions of scripture by the scholars of the Sunday-school. Miss Sallie Carrington recited 52 verses and Miss Bettie Parker 46. It would have done your heart good, Mr. Editor, to have seen the rows of happy smiling faces of our children as they eat ready to be called upon to repeat portions of the Bible they had learned in the Sunday-school. The collection for the children was $5,00. Much of the pleasure and success of this happy day is due to Bro. Thomas Edwards, our superintendent. I desire to express my gratitude to God for the honor he has bestowed upon me. Amid great persecution he stood by me and helped me in organizing and erecting this church. Blessed be his name forever."

TENNESSEE.

J. L. Massey makes an interesting report of his firm stand for temperance, which is most creditable to him. His chief trouble, he says, is not with sinners, but Christians, who indulge in strong drink.

J. B. Bradford, Purdy: "My second quarter was held by elder Price. The church was revived by his presence. One addition, and several at the altar for prayer. We have done something on all collections."

From Our Mission Rooms.

The Rev. I. H. Correll, of the Japan Mission, reported recently at the Mission Rooms in improved health. He has been doing much work in delivering missionary addresses in different places, and was on his way to join the secretaries in their Western tour.

The Rev. J. H. Gill, of North India Mission, has been engaged every Sabbath working for the cause of missions in different towns of the West. The recent collection at Constantine, Mich., amounted to $95, where only $18 were raised last year. Mr. Gill intends to return to India in the fall.

DEATH OF K. KAWAMURA.—The Rev. M. S. Vail reports that Mr. Kawamura, the Japanese student of Drew Theological Seminary, who went out this spring to reinforce our educational work in Japan, died of hemorrhage of the lungs May 3, six days after his arrival in Japan. "He passed peacefully away, happy in the religion of Christ."

The Rev. Joel Osgood, of the Liberia Mission, who has been for some time seriously ill, is expected in New York. During his illness he received much kind attention from the Rev. D. H. Day, of the Muhlenberg Lutheran Mission. The Board of Bishops have determined to send out to Liberia a white missionary with supervising authority.

Every member gave something, and the average per member in a recent missionary collection in the Oak Park Methodist Episcopal Church, Illinois, was $11 84. So reports the pastor. "Every member and probationer in our Church gave something." That is the way to reach a million dollars for missions, and several millions. The total collection for Church and Sunday-school at Oak Park this year is $1,400; last year it was $1,205 35.

NORTH CHINA MISSION.—A movement is on foot in Peking for the co-operation of our mission and the New Connection Methodist Mission in the development of an Anglo-Chinese College, to be entirely self-supporting. It seems likely to meet with public favor in Peking. A course of public lectures was given the past winter before our training school, which was a complete success. It will doubtless become a permanent feature of the work. Lectures were delivered by Dr. Edkins, Dr. Dudgeon, the Rev. Messrs. Owen, Sheffield, Wherry, and Pilcher. Some evenings our large chapel was crowded, and several families of high officials were present.

BULGARIA MISSION—PERSECUTION.—Recent reports from several of our missionaries in Bulgaria represent a disturbed state of society. A season of persecution is upon the mission which demands firmness and courage on the part of the laborers, and sympathy and prayers from the Church at home. At Rasgrad, the former home of the converted priest, Peter Tickcheff, and from which he was expelled a year ago, the mob, stimulated by bigoted ecclesiastical influence, have set upon the kinsfolk of the the priest, and compelled them to leave the town. They number several men, women, and children, and have taken refuge in Rustchuk. Some of them essaying to return to Rasgrad, to see if might occupy their houses, found that the estates were to be sold by the Government. Messrs. Tickcheff and Thomoff applied to the prefect at Rasgrad, but obtained no satisfaction. A lawyer has been consulted, but he gives no hope. The local government in the matter seems to be quite under the influence of the Church authorities. The bishop of Rustchuk and the high priest of Rasgrad are said to be prominent in the proceedings. The political affairs of the principality are in an unsettled state. Our work at Loftcha is for the present hindered. Every thing was in readiness to proceed with the building of the the girls' school. The lot of ground had been purchased by deed, but now the government permit to build is withheld. The latest advices from Superintendent Challis, under date of May 20, are as follows: "The storm of persecution is increasing in violence. Yesterday I received a note from the ministry, saying that Protestant missionaries would not be permitted to open a school in Loftcha, because they would use it as a means of proselytism, which could not be permitted in Bulgaria. This is in contradiction to their order, to the municipal authorities that we be permitted to build. It is hard telling what the next will be, but it seems evident that while the present regime continues, all that is possible will be done to hinder us. The same spirit prevails in the political management, and there is general dissatisfaction among the people. The new mission building at Sistof was to be completed about the middle of June.

Second Round—San Antonio District.

DEAR EDITOR: The second round on the district began May 6th, at San Marcos. Bro. J. Browley is doing a good work—is loved by all. At San Antonio, Bro. J. B Carnes is moving forward in the right direction. His influence is felt in the entire community for good.

Bro. J. T. Jacobs is much more encouraged than at the first quarter. Has had some conversions and accessions. As we could not reach this point, Bro. Jacobs held his own quarterly, and sends in an encouraging account of his work.

Bro. A. J. Turner, at Laredo, is doing all that can be expected of him under existing circumstances. We have no place of our own in which to hold service. Bro. Turner has to rent a building for this purpose, besides paying his own rent, which costs eleven dollars a month. Mrs. Malinda Turner, his Christian wife, is aiding her husband in the work by paying the bills as they become due from money earned by washing, ironing, sewing, and boarding a few railroad hands. She says she knows what is expected of her husband.

May 27th and 28th found us at Hondo. Here Bro. Christmas is toiling on with good effect.

Mr. John H. Bowles, of Uvalde, appeals to me for a minister at that place. I have asked Bro. Frank Pierce, of Hondo City, to please see after them for the present. He is a local preacher; he reads and preaches well. How easy it would have been for Bro. J. W. Robinson to have staid at his post at Brackettville and followed up these openings on the western extension of the G. H. and S. A. Railroad, which would by this time have included Brockettville, Uvalde, Eagle Pass, and Delrio. The U. S. A. chaplain told me on the 30th of May, on the route for San Antonio (Sunset Road), that these places had a population of 5000. While Brockettville might decrease after the military gave up old Fort Clark, the other places would in all probability increase in population. A circuit including the above named points would give us a more accessible one than the Hondo and Fredericksburg Circuit, since it lies along the Sunset and other rail routes and but little staging. On the 29th of May, at Hondo, we raised by subscription $152 to build a church house. A. Mr. G. Harper has deeded two acres of ground for a building site (a beautiful site it is). They have some money and lumber in hand.

At Pleasant Grove (near Livernia, in Wilson county), Bro. D. W. Tucker is doing grandly. The roll was called by the writer, and the June subscribers responded with the cash promptly. But very few had to be carried over to the October list. N. B.—We shall pursue this course with all churches on the district applying for assistance. Many were very anxious to build before aid was granted; but since granted have lost their energy. Lead out, brethren, or I will be obliged to give your names to the public.

Throughout the country crops are flourishing.

Pray for me; I have been chilling it for fifteen days. Am getting better. Yours truly,

MACK HENSON.

A Pic-Nic.

MR. EDITOR—The Sunday-school of the First Street Methodist Episcopal Church held their annual picnic Tuesday, June 29th at Crescent Park. The day was propitious. The arrangements for a grand time for the children, young ladies and gentlemen, and parents were in good order. We marched from the church to Prytania street, took our seats in the cars and were soon at the park, where, under the supervision of our beloved and respected Superintendent, Y. H. Campbell, everything had been put in the most perfect order. Indeed much of the joy of this day came to us through his untiring efforts and energy. Nearly all the officers and teachers, with fully one thousand

...eople were present. The heart of the pastor was filled with joy that is unspeakable in seeing the Superintendent and other officers with the teachers, scholars and parents all entering so heartily into the joys of the day. The exercises of the occasion consisted of singing some of our general Sunday-school melodies, and the usual festivities of such occasions. The entire expenses of the day were $55, and all paid. With Bro. Campbell for our Superintendent the prospects for our Sunday-school are the most promising.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

THIRD QUARTER—LESSON I. July 2d. A LESSON ON HOME. (Mark x, 1-16.)

In going to Jerusalem Jesus had left Samaria, crossing Jordan south of Galilee, and recrossed opposite Jericho. The people resorted to him again. They questioned him in order to ensnare him, "Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife?" He draws their attention away from sophistical interpretations and doctrines of schools to the plain teaching of the law itself, a much superior authority. Moses had given no direct command, and they could only refer to his usage. Jesus knowing this, inducing them to take this step in reasoning to the true answer, already intimates his intention of carrying the question beyond Moses to the highest most absolute authority. The answer of Christ left it sufficiently apparent that, save for one cause, divorce is not proper at all. Her bill of divorcement being null and void in the highest and truest views of marriage, the wife put away is still his wife. This being true with respect to this person, he is an adulterer in marrying another. Mothers present brought their young children to him, because it was believed his touch was efficacious in healing, even those not suffering from physical disorders. His disciples rebuked them, but he was displeased and said that such persons, and those of like moral innocence, simplicity, and humility compose the kingdom of God. He affectionately embraced them.

Mobile Schools.

MR. EDITOR:—On the 12th of this month I visited the public schools about to close their sessions. The school for colored children, on Davidson avenue, B. O. Bain principal, I found in good discipline. On the 15th I visited the girls' school in the same building, and on the same day called at Good Hope School. The teachers have been faithful and done good work. Principal W. M. Colwell deserves special praise.

July gives a collection of articles, nearly every one of which is a competent treatise in brief on some subject on which the general public take a living interest. The opening article is "Plant-Cells and their Contents," by Prof. McBride, of the State University of Iowa. The nature of "Porcelain and the Art of its production," the process of shaping, baking and decorating articles of china-ware, are explained by M. Charles Lauth, administrator of the French National Manufactory at Sevres. In "The Physiology of Exercise" Herr Emile du Bois-Reymond takes the most comprehensive view of the subject, and inquires how and why exercise promotes the development of the muscles, and the various tissues and secretions of the body and of the nervous system, and how every act of voluntary exercise of the body is equally and fundamentally a mental exercise. Lieutenant G. Krietler, a member of Count Szechenyi's Central Asian Expedition, describes a "Curious Burmese Tribe" which he met near the western border of China. The "Problems of Property" are carefully considered by Mr Geo. Iles. The editor's table announces and laments, in common with all friends of knowledge, the cessation of the publication of Mr. Herbert Spencer's "Descriptive Sociology." New York: D. Appleton & Co. Fifty cents per number, $5 per year.

In the North American Review for July, the leading article is a profound and sympathetic study of "Emerson as a Poet," by Edwin P. Whipple. The author has scarcely a word to say about forms and modes of expression, and cheerfully concedes that Emerson had command only of two or three metres; but he brings all the resources of his extraordinary critical acumen to prove that, as a seer, as one who has intuition of the deeper truths of nature and the moral universe, in short, as a poet in the highest sense of the word, Emerson must take rank with the greatest geniuses of all time. In "Hydraulic Pressure in Wall Street," a writer who manifestly is no novice, exposes many of the tricks by means of which fictitious values are created, and the unwary lured daily to ruin. Desire Charnay contributes the eleventh article in the series on "The Ruins of Central America," and records the crowning triumph of his exploring expedition, namely, the discovery of a great ruined city in the hitherto unexplored country of the Lacandones, Guatemala. There are two papers on the civil service question: one, "The Things Which Remain," by Gail Hamilton, who labors to relieve the civil service from the aspersions cast upon it on account of Guiteau's crime; the other, "The Business of Office-seeking," by Richard Grant White, who forcibly portrays the moral ills that come from the perennial struggle for place. Finally Francis Marion Crawford, son of the eminent American sculptor, writes of "False Taste in Art," and indicates certain directions in which art culture might be developed in the United States. The Review is for sale by booksellers and newsdealers generally.

The July Wide Awake opens with an exquisite picture of child-life, called "The Pipers," accompanying a melodious little poem of the same title, by Elizabeth Cuming. Following this comes "The Assistant," a brilliant story by Mrs. M. H. Catherwood, a history of some grown boys and girls, but placing before the growing ones some good ideals of determination in business, sisterly devotion, womanly energy, and broad generosity. Eliot McCormick of the Christian Union has a good short story, "Did Ethel see the Queen?" and Mrs. Kate Upson Clark tells merrily "How Jared saw the Elephant." Sequels to "Their Club and Ours," and "From the Hudson to the Neva" begins in this number, under the titles, "The Trojan War" and "Lost among the Savages;" and the Third Act of the Comedy "No Questions asked" is very amusing. After a feast of beauty and amusement, comes the Chautauqua Reading Course, the most delightful part of the magazine, in fact. Only $2 50 a year. Ella Farman, Editor. D. Lothrop & Co., Publishers, Boston.

NEW BOOKS.

THE LORD'S PURSEBEARERS. By Hesba Stretton. Boston: D. Lothrop & Co. Price $1 25.

The name of Hesba Stretton is too well known in English literature to render it necessary to make special commendation of any work from her pen. No writer of religious fiction stands higher in England, and there is not a Sunday-school library where some of her volumes may not be found. She has the faculty of entertaining and instructing at the same time. In the Lord's Pursebearers the author draws a terrible picture of life among the vicious poor in London streets, and shows by what shifts the professional beggars and thieves of the great Babylon manage to live on the misplaced charity of the pitying well-to-do population. The story is one of intense interest, and the characters, especially those of Isaac Chippendell, his granddaughter Joan, and little Lucky, are forcibly drawn. One can hardly believe that such places exist or that such deeds are perpetrated as are here described, but one who is familiar with London [illegible] knows they are no exaggerations. South Carolina Bourbons.

The Bourbons of South Carolina persist in their schemes to defraud the negro of his rights of citizenship, as the following dispatch to the New York Times, bears witness:

CHARLESTON, S. C., June 19. What State officers charged with the registration will do when left untrammeled by Federal supervision was clearly shown at a precinct known as the "Three-mile House." This precinct is a half-mile above the city limits, and consequently Federal officers only have the rights accorded them at county precincts, but by some strange oversight none was appointed for this poll, and the colored men, who are in a large majority, were left to the tender mercy of Supervisor Horsey, 10 policemen in full uniform, and two Deputy Sheriffs. The Supervisor retarded registration willfully, and when the colored men—many of whom walked several miles in a broiling sun to register—manifested displeasure at their treatment, the policemen pounced upon them and a Trial Justice named Gleason committed them to jail, where they remained until next day, when the same officer bound them over to the next term of court for interfering with the registration. Late in the afternoon United States Marshall Blythe requested one of his General Deputies to investigate the reports brought to his office. The Deputy found the Supervisor with his heels on the table, smoking and chatting, while outside of the building was a long line of colored men, exhausted from long waiting under the burning rays of the sun. When remonstrated with by the Deputy, the Supervisor became angry and abusive, and, having ascertained that the Deputy had in his possession a warrant for the arrest for a former offense, the Supervisor rushed frantically from the building and demanded to be arrested and taken to the city. After every argument to induce the Supervisor to perform his duty had failed, the Deputy complied with his wish, and escorted him to the United States Court-house, where he was released on parole until the next day, when he gave bail.

The departure of the Deputy with the Supervisor was the signal for a general onslaught upon the inoffensive colored men standing in the vicinity of the precinct by the Police. The club was freely used, several were arrested—among them W. H. Parvis, who was formerly Adjutant-General of the State—and the others fled to their homes. The men arrested, without the necessary legal formalities, were sent to jail. To prevent the usual garbled reports of such affairs in the News and Courier, the principal editor, F. W. Dawson, was apprised of the real nature of the outrage. He nevertheless sustained the Supervisor's lawless conduct, stigmatized the Deputy's action as impertinence, and in reply to a remark calling attention to the contemptuous treatment of the State Supervisor by the Federal officers, and the needlessly high-handed conduct of the State officers toward the colored men, he said: "That is perfectly proper; one is a gentleman and the others are d—d niggers." Owing to the action of the State officers only 195 voters—among them 18 white men, who as usual experienced no delay—were registered. At least 100 colored men, working chiefly in the phosphate works, remain unregistered, and as it is an utter impossibility for these men to walk to the Court-house during the brief time the books are open they will be deprived of the right to vote under the State law. This was doubtless the object the State Supervisor sought to accomplish by his behavior.

Nearly every day we read of colored men being shot, stabbed or lynched without judge or jury. God Bless The Women. The best interests of all humanity depend on the good health of our women folk. Woman's best friend for relieving the painful weaknesses with which so many are afflicted, and as a general family medicine for warding off bilious attacks and curing stomach, liver and kidney complaints, is Brown's Iron Bitters. It contains just such life-giving properties as are needed in female diseases, and is superior to all other preparations as a true medicinal tonic, for giving health, strength and vigor to every part of the body. If you are weak, nervous and debilitated, or suffering from dyspepsia, Brown's Iron Bitters will surely cure you.

EARS FOR THE MILLION! Foo Choo's Balsam of Shark's Oil. Positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness Known. This Oil is abstracted from peculiar species of small White Shark, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as Carcharodon Rondeletii. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist Priest about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal that for over 300 years no Deafness has existed among the Chinese People. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1 per bottle.

HEAR WHAT THE DEAF SAY! It has performed a miracle in my case. I have no unearthly noises in my head and hear much better. I have been greatly benefited. My deafness helped a great deal—think another bottle will cure me.

"Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, as the writer can personally testify, both from experience and observation. Write at once to Haylock & Jenney, 7 Dey street New York, enclosing $1, and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. You will never regret doing so."—Editor of Mercantile Review. To avoid loss in the mails, please send money by Registered Letter. Only Imported by HAYLOCK & JENNEY (Late Haylock & Co.) GRANDPA AND LITTLE MAY.

...sits in his easy chair,
Holding our baby, May,
...talks, and often sleeps,
But not many words does he say.
...sometimes says: "A story do tell,
Of the days when you were a boy;
...you went to drive the cow with a bell,
Along with your sister Floy."

...the cow is dead, and her bell was sold,
In the days long, long ago;
...Floy, she sleeps the last long sleep,
Under the drifts of snow.
...little May she takes her place,
And comforts my lonely lot.
Thank the Lord for her sweet young face,
And the joy that her love has brought."

The old man leaned in his easy-chair,
Lost in slumber deep,
...May, she patted his silver hair,
And tried awake to keep.
...after the little story was told,
...again, and it made me weep.
...silver hair and May's curls of gold
Lay mingled together, and both were asleep.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate

In Liver and Kidney Troubles.

Dr. O. G. Cilley, Boston, says: "I have used it very extensively, and with the most remarkable success in dyspepsia and in all cases where there is derangement of the liver and kidneys."

A Washington pension agent was almost paralyzed with astonishment the other day when he found a veteran of the late war who had sustained a permanent injury while in the army and had not applied for a pension. The veteran had cut an artery in his wrist while opening a bottle of whiskey stolen from the colonel's headquarters, and he said he didn't know a wound of that character entitled him to a pension. The agent soon convinced him of his error, and in a few days he will receive $2800 back pension, minus $1100 pocketed by the agent.

St. Joseph Saturday Democrat, Aug. 27, 1881.

A Friend to the Friendless.

Sorrow and sickness is too common heritage of humanity, and when we see how little is done to alleviate the miseries of the great mass of humanity we are almost out of patience with life. Even where the intentions are best, ignorance is prone to bid the afflicted "suffer and be strong," instead of "ministering to the mind diseased," or laying a hand of healing on the poor tortured body.

Ah; when Science and Philanthropy, with love and sympathy and skill, come to the aid of the sufferers, they feel as if the angel of annunciation had drawn near.

Samaritan Nervine really is salvation to thousands. I speak from a full heart when I say it, for friends very near and dear to me have been restored to health and happiness by means of it.

"God bless Dr Richmond," said one of them to me the other day. "I feel as I know the man mentioned in Scripture must have felt when he went from Jerusalem to Jericho and fell among thieves, and when robbed and at the point of death, was befriended and restored to health by the Good Samaritan.

"Yes," he continued, "that was exactly my condition. I had spent a fortune in doctor's bills and patent medicines. Everything I could hear of I tried, so desperate was my situation, but I grew worse steadily, until some kind friend told me of the Samaritan Nervine. Since taking I am, as you see, restored to perfect health.

With such incontrovertible proof of the beneficient nature of the remedy, it is not strange that an editor, always solicitous for an accurate knowledge of what could benefit the world in general, should take earliest opportunity of visiting the inventor and proprietor of the medicine at the World's Epileptic Institute.

We found the doctor in his elegant private office busily engaged in superintending the gentlemen whose duty it is to attend to the details of the immense correspondence which is a natural result of his wide-spread reputation.

On making known our wishes, he very kindly accompanied us in our tour of inspection through the magnificent building and grounds.

Almost as soon as we entered the office our attention was arrested by a wonderful collection of photographs, numbering somewhere in the thousands. All nations, ages and stations were represented. The elegant carte of society leader was side by side with the picture of humble artisan; innocent childhood and withered old age showed by counterfeit presentment the gratitude they could not speak: doctors, lawyers, ministers of the gospel, soldiers, laborers, plain mothers of families, haughty children of wealth, rich and poor, high and low, black and white, all were represented. It reminded me of the miracle cures of Europe, only instead of the crutches, bandages, gold, silver and wax images of the recuperated pilgrims, left before the shrine of the miracle worker, Dr. Richmond has as testimonials the pictures of his deeply grateful patients.

"You must feel very happy, doctor, when you look at this collection," we said.

"Ah! yes," said the doctor pleasantly, "but if you like my Art Gallery, what would you say to my Library?"

He led the way to the next apartment, and we followed, expecting only to see perhaps one bookcase filled with dusty tomes of abstract science. Instead the walls were lined with many very handsome bookcases, containing over one hundred thousand unsolicited testimonials from those whom the Nervine had cured.

"How wonderfully fortunate, as well as talented you are," we exclaimed in amazement. "The Nervine has proved a perfect gold mine."

The doctor looked at us reproachfully.

"I am not one to underestimate the value of wealth," he answered, "for I have known what it is to be without it, but what is the most colossal fortune that was ever in the grasp of mortal man in comparison to the good my remedy is doing? Picture to yourself, if you can, what must be the feeling of an epileptic. Think of him with his dreadful disease so long pronounced incurable. He cannot take part in the studies, duties, or amusements, recreations or amusements of an ordinary fellow-being. He is an object of ...rather than of pity to his friends. ...steady still; it is constantly ...worse and more dreadful in all its ...last and most dreadful before him ...shadow of insanity. Sleep... ...that it is there, and ...him; and is ...like Job, ...

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA

J. Brown, Jeanerette: "Second quarterly conference convened in St. Peters Church, June 3, Presiding Elder Albert present. The pastor's report was gratifying and showed a spirit of revival at both churches; temporal work in rapid progress. Our pastor, Edward Fields, is wide awake and his sermons are like good seed sown in good ground. Our Sabbath-school is prospering, and we anticipate a grand Fourth of July dinner."

O. H. Claiborne, Morgan City: "My congregation was partly broken up during the high water, but nearly every one has returned. Will build a parsonage soon. I desire to return my thanks to the following pastors and their congregations who took care of me when I was driven from here by the high water: Rev. T. G. Montgomery, at First street; Rev. S. Davage, at Wesley Chapel; Rev. J. F. Marshall, at Mt. Zion; Rev. M. Dyer, at Sixth Street; Rev. S. Priestley, at Union Chapel; Rev. A. Jones, at Camp Parapet; and the Orthodox Evangelical Association. I remained and preached with them six weeks, and they gave me collections amounting to $28. May the blessings of God be with them."

TENNESSEE.

C. Bullington, Prairie Plains: "My work is in a very good condition. Have three Sunday-schools with 120 scholars and 15 officers. Have had three accessions and three withdrawn. Received to date $10 75, the Elder $11 50. We have no house to preach in, and we want to build a church. Have had a hard time, but I am looking for better days to come. Pray for us up in Coffee county."

ARKANSAS.

W. B. Duncan, Sweet Home: "We are blessed with a gracious revival. Twenty-one have been converted, 28 joined the Church. June 3 Elder Sams held our quarterly conference at Haven's Chapel, collection for Elder $5. We continued meetings these several nights, having 10 conversions, 21 accessions. Within two weeks six colored men have been killed and a majority of the murderers are now in jail. What will become of them I am not able to say."

The Bilious, dyspeptic or constipated, should address, with two stamps for pamphlet, World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

Our work is spreading rapidly on the border and in the West, and it can be ascertained in four years how far, if at all, our present name impedes our success. We can also hear from our mission work more definitely respecting its influence in that field. The Central and Southern conferences very naturally feel a very strong attachment to the name, but Christian men must rise above mere sentiment and decide all such questions with reference to the glory of God and the salvation of the world.—Texas Christian Advocate.

Faded Colors Restored.

Faded or gray hair gradually recovers its youthful color and lustre by the use of Parker's Hair Balsam, an elegant dressing, admired for its purity and rich perfume.

If Gen. Munday, of East Feliciana, would bear in mind that it is too late in the day in this State to introduce chain gang and riot acts, and would devote his most eminent talents to enacting laws of a more beneficial nature to our people, he might possibly be sent back to the House.—Baton Rouge Truth.

There is a most profound truth in the Arab proverb, "All sunshine makes the desert!" And never is our human clay more hardened as it is by the uninterrupted shining of the sun of prosperity. Plants of grace need the clouds as well as the sunshine, the dew and the rain, and storm, as well as the dry season after the rain.

SAMARITAN NERVINE.

Samaritan Nervine

Cures Epileptic Fits, Spasms, Convulsions, St. Vitus Dance, Virtigo, Hysterics, Insanity, Apoplexy, Paralysis, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all Nervous diseases. This infallible remedy will positively eradicate every species of Nervous Derangement, and drive them away from whence they came, never to return again. It utterly destroys the germs of disease by neutralizing the hereditary taint or poison in the system, and thoroughly eradicates the disease, and utterly destroys the cause.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Female Weakness, general Debility, Leucorrhoea or Whites, Painful Menstruation, Ulceration of the Uterus, Internal Heat, Gravel, Inflammation of the Bladder, Irritability of the Bladder. For Wakefulness at night, there is no better remedy. During the change of life no female should be without it. It quiets the Nervous System and gives rest, comfort and nature's sweet sleep.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Alcoholism, Drunkenness and the habit of Opium Eating. These degrading habits are by far the worst evils that have ever befallen suffering humanity. Thousands die annually from these noxious drugs. The drunkard drinks liquor not because he likes it, but for the pleasure of drinking and treating his friends, little thinking that he is on his road to ruin. Like the Opium Eater, he first uses the drug in small quantities as a harmless antidote. The soothing influence of the drug takes strong hold upon its victim, leading him on to his own destruction. The habits of Opium Eating and Liquor Drinking are precisely what eating is to alimentiveness, as over-eating first inflames the stomach, which redoubles its cravings until it paralyzes both the stomach and appetite. So every drink of liquor or dose of opium instead of satisfying, only adds to its fierce fires, until it consumes the vital force and then itself. Like the gluttonous tape-worm, it cries: "Give, give, give!" but never enough until its own rapacity devours itself. Samaritan Nervine gives instant relief in all such cases. It produces sleep, quiets the nerves, builds up the nervous system, and restores body and mind to a healthy condition.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Nervous Dyspepsia, Palpitation of the Heart, Asthma, Bronchitis, Scrofula, Syphilis, diseases of the Kidneys and all diseases of the urinary organs. Nervous debility, caused by the indiscretions of youth, permanently cured by the use of this invaluable remedy. To you, young, middle-aged and old men, who are covering your sufferings as with a mantle by silence, look up, you can be saved by timely efforts, and make ornaments to society, and jewels in the crown of your Maker, if you will. Do not keep this a secret longer, until it saps your vitals, and destroys both body and soul. If you are thus afflicted, take Dr. Richmond's Samaritan Nervine. It will restore your shattered nerves, arrest premature decay, impart tone and energy to the whole system.

Mr. H. W. Merion, of Oswego, N. Y., writes: "My wife has been restored to perfect health and strength. She suffered many years from indigestion, complicated with female irregularities. I never saw her lips so red and her cheeks so rosy for years. Brown's Iron Bitters cured her.

All praise wrongfully directed, or suggested by selfish motives, is an injurious element in society. It perpetuates much that ought to be repressed, it fills silly minds with vanity and egotism, it panders to some of the worst features of human character. Insincere flattery especially does this. From the unmeaning compliment so often heard in flippant conversation to the false adulation used as a bribe to gain a vote or an office, untruthful praise is an untold truth.

If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes bad, poor appetite, tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver, or biliousness. Nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery." By all Druggists.

$1500 a year can be easily made at home working for E. G. Rideout & Co., 10 Barclay Street, New York. Send for their catalogue and full particulars.

A WONDERFUL ...d SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.

These Glasses are chemically treated in the process of manufacture, and possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analyzed by American and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and can in some cases restore the sight if used in time, but in no case can the eye become impaired by their use for the following reasons:

1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye, completely doing away with that tiresome sensation that is usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours' use.

2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.

3. The chemicals keep the glasses cold, and the result is that the optic nerves are always cool, doing away with any feverish sensation to the eye.

4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, with no distressing or tiresome sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.

The MEDICATED GLASSES are all stamped on the frame H. HOUSAH, Medicated. NONE GENUINE UNLESS STAMPED.

NO GOD.

"The fool hath said in his heart there is no God."—Ps. xiv. 1.

"No God!" the simplest flower
That on the wild is found,
Shrinks as it drinks its cup of dew,
And trembles at the sound.

"No God!" astonished Echo cries
From out her cavern hoar;
And every wandering bird that flies
Reproves the atheist lore.

The solemn forest lifts his head,
The Almighty to proclaim;
The brooklet in its crystal urn,
Doth leap to grace his name.

High swells the deep and vengeful sea
Along its billowy track;
And red Vesuvius opes his mouth
To hurl the falsehood back.

—Mrs. Sigourney.

ADDRESS.

Delivered Before the Alumni Association, New Orleans University.

BY PROF. J. E. W. BOWEN.

Mr. Chairman, Members of the Alumni, and Ladies and Gentlemen: It is my pleasurable and honorable duty, imposed by the Alumni of our honored institution—the New Orleans University—to address you upon this, their first re-union and public meeting. I must confess that while it is an honor somewhat enviable, there is involved in the faithful discharge of such a duty, diligent study and close application, necessarily demanding time.

Permit me in the outset of my address, to invite you to divest yourselves of your prejudices. I am fully aware of the tenacious grip of human prejudice, of its mighty power with which it wields human nature, in consequence of its entering into our very nature and forming two-thirds of our being. For of all the barriers to overcome, of all the enemies to subdue, of all contaminating influences to evade, human prejudice [illegible] all arts and wisdom and stands as an adamanteen to Christian progress. But cut for one moment the history of the past, with its stained record, its curses, with its suffering, its abominableness, [illegible] its greed; remembering only [illegible] learned therein, and [illegible] by their fortunes and misfortunes, so that you may rightly [illegible] in all its bearings and [illegible] the comprehensiveness [illegible] MAN. I speak to you [illegible] and ladies as men; not [illegible], not freedmen, not negroes, [illegible] your own, but as men. [illegible] I have selected, from [illegible] address you is The Development of Man. This you will [illegible] tures, armed with the function to subdue the earth, given in consequence of his superior intellectual endowments, and having the power to think, and to a large extent to act as he thinks. With the power to bless or to curse, to live or die, to reach up to his Creator or sink down to his enemy, the power in a considerable degree over his own destiny for weal or for woe, "the architect of his own character and the builder of his own fortune."

"Even the infant, at birth, or before it has conscious thought, is thus the heir by title deed to immortal life, though its actual knowledge is not the millionth part of that of the pig or puppy of the same age. It starts, thus, a blank as to intelligence; but having the infinite indorsement of its father and mother, which involves the undeveloped capability of analyzing the stars, and weighing the planets, it holds wrapped up in its vital organism the ego of an indestructible personal identity; and should it thus die untaught, and even unconscious of its own being, its MAGNA CHARTA of selfhood will be its passport to the primary college of the angels, and thence to the University over whose entrance is written in letters of life: 'The Garden of Eternal Progress.'"

It is singularly true, that man, in infancy, is the most ignorant of all God's creatures. The Development Theory, with certain limitations, might be applied to him in comparing manhood with childhood; figuratively it can be said—"Out of nothing something is made." The first bird's nest made in the Garden of Eden or out of it, was as perfect and as symmetrical as the myriads of nests made since. The instinct of the bird was as perfect and undeceiving as now, so that the bird has not improved in intelligence one iota. This truth applies with equal force to all animals except man, for it is held with great unanimity by all scientists, and biologists that no possible development can be predicated of instinct.

That the present man is a development from insignificance to significance, has been and is held by all leading scientists.

Mr. Darwin, in his volume on "Animals and Plants," says: "We cannot fathom the marvelous complexity of an organic being; but on the hypothesis here advanced this complexity is much increased. Each living creature must be looked at as a microcosm, formed of a host of self-propagating organisms, inconceivably minute and as numerous as the stars of heaven."

Again to carry beyond doubt that man is a development, he says: "Now, man in the first months of development possesses a real tail as well as his real kindred, the tailless apa—orang outang, chimpanzee, gorilla—and the vertebrate animals in general." "No other explanation—than descent from common progenitor—has ever been given of the marvelous fact that the embryos of the man, dog, seal, bat, reptile, etc, can at first hardly be distinguished from each other."

I do not quote these statements thereby giving my unqualified assent to these so called truths expressed in them; but merely to present in its clear light the development theory, and to indicate the course of an ingenious mind, in its illimitable search and vain wanderings after truth, away from its Creator; also to show what "cunningly devised fables" seemingly erudite can be produced by a cultured, but fevered brain, and by constant but ill-directed energy.

Be this as it may, the convincing truth in these passages, that man developes, is apparent, whether from the dog, cow, ape, or seal; whether he originally had a tail or not, the truth remains.

We do not propose to concern ourselves at this juncture with this intricate problem, for the solution would require more space and time than is allotted us, moreover such a solution would be of no practical benefit. The question that concerns us is, does man improve, does he develop, have we evidences of his development? The answer can be given emphatically in the affirmative.

Contrast the magnificent gothic [illegible] of to-day, containing all the [illegible] necessary to comfort [illegible] bounded by its flower [illegible] making life desirable, im[illegible] to its bitters, joy [illegible] ease and rest to [illegible] huts [illegible] in the light of the nineteenth century reduces man to the level of brutes. This steady advance in the art of architecture marks an era in the progress of man, and is discoverable all along the ages; and we are safe in saying, that in the great future, we, with all our boasted magnificence, and wealth, will not merit a comparison with the splendor and far surpassing beauty of the Utopian mansion. We will but be regarded under the more powerful microscope of superior civilization, as little above other animals.

In agriculture the advance is as marked. This being the prince of arts, from its antiquity, dates back to the garden of Eden. An art lofty and honorable in its origin, and fundamental in many respects. In proportion, therefore, as it is cultivated and advanced, will man better his condition and perpetuate his race.

The history of a single implement used will be a history of the art itself, showing the progress made in the march of time, which we, owing to briefness of time, can not give at this juncture.

Could the ancient philosophers and teachers stand and see the nineteenth century locomotive, with its train of coaches filled with human life, and its freight boxes loaded with the produce of the land speeding over prairies, winding mountains, penetrating tunnels at the marvelous speed of forty miles an hour, all their boasted wonders of the past would sink into obscurity. This is the result of the union of skilled hand with trained mind; it is a manifestation of the inherent power of mind developed under necessity. The human mind, ready to supply the increasing demands of population and wealth, emulates to excel in complicated or simple inventions to meet the changes in man's state, thereby enhancing its real worth. What possibilities are before us remain to be seen. In whatever direction we turn our eye, the truth still blazing strikes our vision. The history of the Church fully illustrates the same general truth. This is a field unusually wide, affording scope for the highly imaginative, and facts for the logically inclined. Expositions of scripture, once admissible, and held to be as firm as the hills, have long since fallen in the conflict of free thought. The light of science has flashed in upon the intricacies and insolvables of the Scripture, so that the impossible is rendered possible, the improbable probable, and that which was considered of little or no value has been shown to be of the greatest importance.

The dogmatic ritualism, and slavish obedience to dogmas, and to the narrow and defective confessions containing gross ignorance and sublimated superstition, even upon fundamentals, is a thing of the past. The Bible can stand the crucible and still be the Bible. Its mysteries are still under process of solution. It has nothing to lose. Its truth, genuineness, and authenticity will be attested, even at the expense of a howling infidelity and the quaking of an ignorant ministry.

Let it be borne in mind that "whatever is fundamentally scientific is also profoundly biblical, and whatever is fundamentally biblical is also profoundly scientific." The great truths in the labyrinths of nature are in unison with those of the Bible, and the facts of science correctly ascertained must necessarily support sacred truth as far as they go. But it is to be remembered that the Bible lays no claim to being a scientific treatise addressed to the scientific curiosity of the reader, but its claim is that it addresses its doctrine to the religious faith of men.

In proportion as men become truly enlightened and appreciate its mission, and see the real beauties in nature reflecting a more beautiful Designer, and discover the facts God has hidden in the heavens and in the earth touching His goodness, wisdom and truth, just in that proportion will the Bible be verified and the seeming incongruities vanish and the so-called conflict cease. It is impossible but that these two books should agree and support each other. The error that they contradict may last for ages, but the truth that they agree will come and will last forever.

Truth is truth, on Christian or on heathen ground. Its intrinsic value does not depend upon fortuitous circumstances, nor upon its source, be that the sun, moon, stars, animal or vegetable kingdom, or heathenism. If man can realize the existence of the great I Am by the study of the natural world exclusively, and learn therefrom lessons of obedience and duty, of piety and reverence, such as is expected from a created to a creator, as well as from the Bible, no unbiased intelligent man will disapprove.

It is highly possible that men will, from a careful study of nature and her laws, with a desire to ascertain the truth and her secrets, ascend to the mountain top of true logical conclusion, where they may look into the face of "nature's God." The mere possibility of such laudable attempt to reach so exalted a position has not been unmistakably demonstrated in positive fact; but "our knowledge of the Supreme Excellence, our best evidence even of the existence of the Creator, is derived not from the material universe, but from our own moral nature. In other words, it springs from that instinctive or moral nature which is as truly a part of our being as is our reason, which teaches us what reason could not teach—the supreme and transcendent excellence of moral good—which, rising dissatisfied above this world of sense, proves itself by the very intensity of its aspiration to be adapted for another sphere, and which constitutes at once the evidence of a divine element within us, and the augury of the future that is before us."

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

North New Orleans District.

I began my second round on the North New Orleans District with the quarterly conference at Thomson Chapel, on the 18th of May. We had a very pleasant conference. The reports showed that the Church is in good condition both spiritually and financially. The pastor, Bro. R. L. Beal, is much beloved by his people, and I predict a successful year's work at that point.

I was at Union Chapel May 19th. The Conference session was very pleasant. Reports showed the work to be in good condition. Brother Priestley is moving off grandly in the effort to finish the audience room. I was sorry to learn that their deep-toned bell, which for several years had called the people to the house of worship, is broken.

Held the quarterly conference at Wesley Chapel May 27th. The Church Secretary, for some reason, did not put in an appearance until "picking up hat time," so we were without any financial reports. The work is in good condition spiritually and, as far as I could learn, the finances are running fairly. Bro. Davage is in good spirits.

May 25th found us at LaHarpe. The reports at this place were not as favorable as I had hoped to find them. Bro. Hayward complained a great deal about his support. I think that, with proper encouragement, the people will do better in this respect.

I was with Father Ross at Pleasant Plains, May 27th. The secretary read a very good report for the quarter.

May 31st was spent in conference at Donaldsonville. Bro. Smith is certainly "holding the fort" at this point. There have been over 100 souls saved this year. Bro. Smith was making a grand effort to raise means with which to build a parsonage, and had raised enough to purchase all the material. He had it on the ground and the frame of the building raised before I left. We may safely predict a grand year's work for this charge.

We arrived at Whitehall, St. James parish, June 2d. Brother Gayden was out looking after his flock but soon put in an appearance. His conference was held on the 4th of June. A great work has been done thus far in this charge; many have been added to the Church, and the work is in splendid condition both financially and spiritually.

We arrived at Bayou Goula June 6th. Found Bro. Thomas McCary at his post holding meetings nightly, trying to gain souls for Christ. I remained with him until the 12th. On the 11th (Sunday) Bro. A. Jackson, of Rosedale Circuit, and Bro. R. T. Lewis, of Plaquemine, were with us. We "put our shoulders to the wheel" and tried to give it a turn forward. Bro. McCary found the work at a very low ebb, but he "cast the net on the right side," and is gathering in many.

The Conference at Thibodeaux, June 15th, was very agreeable. Reports showed the work to be in a prosperous condition. Bro. Chinn is very popular with his people and I think this year's work will be one of great success.

We held the conference for Woodlawn Circuit at Napoleonville, June 18th. Found Bro. A. Kennedy at his post, and had a very nice session of conference. This congregation is now worshiping in their new building a neat structure 26x44, which is all finished except the seats and pulpit—which will soon be done.

On the District as far as I have visited there have been up to date 200 conversions this year. I visited Bro. T. Kennedy but, on account of high water, did not hold his conference; will hold it in the latter part of July, at which time I will also visit the parishes of St. Charles, St. Tammany and Washington, which will finish my second round.

MARCUS DALE.

Horr's Patriotic Speech.

Mr. Horr, of Michigan, follows President Arthur in the patriotic scheme of knocking all sectionalism out of the Mississippi river appropriation. His speech in favor of the improvement of the river and the protection of the alluvial districts along it from overflow is unanimously applauded in Washington as one of the best, most concise, comprehensive and unanswerable ones ever made on this subject. His argument carries conviction with it, and shows that he has closely and carefully studied and mastered this subject. Mr. Horr showed a disposition before he had investigated this matter thoroughly to support the outlet theory, but when he had read the literature on the improvement of the Mississippi, when he had practically and thoroughly investigated the matter he forsook the loose views he had formed on the subject of outlets and became, as he is to-day, the earnest and eloquent advocate of levees and the principle of concentration.

His speech, Thursday, is said to have been the clearest and most convincing demonstration of the value and necessity of levees ever made in Congress. It is not, however, to that portion of his speech that we desire to refer so much as to the grand patriotism that must meet with a warm applause in all our hearts.

"To confine the waters of the Mississippi," he said, "within its banks and to make it a great commercial artery is a work that we are bound to do. We owe it to ourselves and to our children. I do not care what the attitude of the South has been in the past, nor do I care what her politics are to-day. I will never be found wanting when there is anything to be done toward advancing the material prosperity of the South, or improving and developing it. There is nothing more securely and surely cements together a great people than the community of commercial interests; nothing that more completely drowns the groans and mutterings of the past than the clang of busy hammers and the hum of busy machines. If I could, I would build up the waste places of the South, open up her vast mineral wealth, put smelting furnaces on her hillsides and set her rivers to turning spindles and buzz-saws, and establish a free school on every one of her scattered plantations. Let us do this; let it be the crowning glory of the Forty-seventh Congress that it finally succeeded in taming the overflowing waters of the great Mississippi and chained it within its banks; that it compelled the rushing flood to obey the behests of commerce, and do the bidding of mankind; that, in doing this, it reclaimed from disease, destruction and death territory enough to make an empire and people enough to make a State; and that it made it possible for these people to live out their days, surrounded by all the scenes of their childhood, on the spot where they were born."

These are sentiments that we all can approve; that we all must applaud. They come from a Stalwart Republican, a leader on the Republican side in the House, a Representative from a State that will be wholly unaffected by the improvement of the Mississippi. Mr. Horr was selected to make this speech in the interest of the river appropriation, because opposition to it from the Republicans was feared, and he was known by his eloquence and ability to command as much respect and influence as any man in the House.

If Mr. Horr's speech expresses the views of the Republican party on the subject of the South, then they differ but little from those of our people. Coming as his speech does, immediately after Arthur's equally patriotic message on this same subject of the river, it opens to us the brilliant possibility that the Republican party, forsaking its sectionalism and war on the South, may adopt the patriotic policy of rebuilding and restoring, as Mr. Horr proposes, the waste places of our Southern land.—*N. Africa and the Africans.

Perhaps there is no portion of the world with a history so interesting as that of Africa. A few years ago this great continent was less known than any other part of the world. The interior had never been mapped out and settled by white men. The great desert of Sahara, with its wandering tribes of Arabs, and their camels and flocks; the great Egyptian plain and the Pyramids; the vast wealth of animal life abounding in forests and rivers, myriads of birds, beasts, and fishes, mingled together in confused ideas—these were the general notions of this third great continent of the world. Yet the history of the earliest ages of the world is laid in the north of Africa. After the confusion of Babel, Noah's son, Ham, went and settled in Egypt.

The history of the children of Israel in their bondage under Pharaoh, and passage across the Red Sea under their leader, Moses, himself saved from the waters of the Nile, connects the history of Africa with the pages of the Bible.

Egypt was afterward conquered by the Persians, and then by Alexander the Great, king of Macedon, in whose days, two thousand years ago, the great cities and wonderful buildings on the banks of the Nile were ruins, so that they must have been built by Egyptian kings many hundreds of years before. Ethiopia was another division of Africa. It was once called Shaba, the kingdom of that queen who went to visit Solomon, and whose dominions now form Nubia and Abyssinia.

Then there were the countries colonized by the ancient Phenicians and Grecians, which are now the Barbary States.

The other regions of Africa have scarcely any history. The ancients contented themselves with very fanciful stories about the inhabitants of the unknown interior. These were said to be people without noses, and some with three or four eyes. Others were described as giants without heads, but an eye in their breasts.

One of the prettiest of these fables is of the Pigmies, a small people, about twelve inches in height, supposed to live in houses like birds' nests, built of clay and feathers and eggshells, on the banks of the Nile. Great battles are related as being fought between the Pigmies and the Cranes, one of whom, sometimes, would snatch up a Pigmy in his beak and fly away with him.

At the southern point of Africa is the large colony of "the Cape," as it is called; and north-east of this the different tracts of country, Natal, Zululand, and Transvaal, where, during the last year or two, there have been wars and continuous fighting, with little profit or prospect of a lasting peace.—Sunday.

The West India Islands and Aspinwall, Columbia, show the greatest mortality of any places reported.

The recent convention of the colored men in Lexington, Ky., gave evidence of manliness, honesty and ability. The platform and resolutions were sensible and to the point, without impracticable vagaries or useless rhetoric. They merely declare their equality with white citizens before the law; protested against the unequal education per capita tax of the State, and against their treatment on railroads, whereby they are charged first-class fare and given second class accommodations. This they rightly declare to be downright robbery. They style themselves Kentuckians, native and to the manor born, proud of the grand old Commonwealth, and desirous of seeing her occupy her proper position. They hold it the duty of the State to give education to all children, and ask not for special favors, but for equal political opportunities, and will be satisfied with nothing less. They organized a State association with auxiliary county aids, mainly directed toward their educational interests. The fair-minded men of Kentucky cannot object to such reasonable demands, founded in common justice and the law. The best thing any State in the commonwealth can do is to give its poorest and humblest citizen a helping hand in the way of education.—Inter-Ocean.

The Use of Tobacco.

In a report to Medico-chirurgical Society of Liege, by Dr. Lehou, the following conclusions are presented:

1st. For every 100 grains of tobacco used, at least 1-10 of a grain of nicotine is absorbed.

2d. The diurnal quantity of tobacco consumed by an ordinary smoker is about 300 grains.

3d. The effects of tobacco smoke are the same as those following the administration of nicotine.

4th. The resinous liquid which condenses in a pipe is almost as poisonous as pure nicotine, and destroys the lives of animals rapidly.

5th. The liquid condensed from the smoke in the mouth and lungs contains ammonia, nicotine, fats, resins, and coloring matters. One drop of this speedily produces paralysis and death in young animals.

6th. In men, small doses of tobacco smoke excite the intellectual faculties; repeated doses produce palpitations, disordered vision, and decrease of memory."

The Anti-Chinese bill having received the President's official approval, is therefore a law of the great American Republic, and probably in some parts of the country all its barbarous and diabolical provisions will be enforced. But the end is not yet; and possibly somebody may yet find out that it is less difficult to frame iniquity by a law than it is to prevent wrong-doings returning to plague their inventors. Some things connected with this bad business should be clearly understood and steadily kept in mind. Among these is the fact that this statute has in many of its features a strong resemblance to the infamous Fugitive Slave law of thirty years ago, and that the passage of that law dealt its deathblow to the Whig party—without whose aid or connivance it would not have become a law. To this fact of history the Republican party of to-day will do well to give heed. It is further to be noticed that the protests and remonstrances against this Chinese exclusion bill have been vastly more abundant and outspoken than were those heard in advance against that earlier form of iniquity, for many of both the religious and economical and commercial bodies of the land have with great force and unanimity denounced the whole affair as alike iniquitous and inexpedient. It must be remembered, too, that this law is the production of a Congress having a decided Republican majority, and that it bears the signature of a Republican President. It might be wise for the leaders of that party to ask themselves whether they can afford to thus do violence to the moral convictions of a class of voters without whose honest and earnest support they must be in a hopeless minority—a class, too, whose votes are their own, and are given in obedience to the personal convictions of those who use them, and not simply at the dictation of trading politicians, whether "bosses" or "whippers in."—*N. Noah's ark was to the outward sight a mere speck driven hither and thither in the fearful eddies; to the inward sight, an unseen helmsman holds fast to an unseen helm; and that frail, two-inch plank is as far from the waters as the green earth will be from the central fires when the old man plants his vine. It is because man finds in his own soul this conviction, that in all great events the eternal underlies the temporal, and God holds them both in his hand.

Leaving the Church.

There are four ways of leaving a church either of which are in accordance with ecclesiastical law. One of these is to die. Another is to take a letter of dismissal from the church to some other. Both of these are in harmony with church law, and are honorable. Another is to withdraw from the church. The fourth is expulsion. This may be done in harmony with ecclesiastical law; it is generally to the discredit both of the person who is expelled and the church, and a subject of jest to the outside world. We know of certain preachers who have wonderful success in expelling their members. They are famous not half so much for the souls they have led to Christ, as for the number they have driven from the church. This work of excluding persons from the church is done sometimes in a sort of a wholesale way. We recently heard of one of these shepherds who, at one trial, expelled fifty; another, forty-two, and still another thirteen. These must have been gala days to him who goes about as a roaring lion seeking whom he may destroy. This capacious man must have been nearly filled on those days. But certainly this was no compliment to those ministers, nor credit to the churches.

To these four methods of exit from the church the fifth is frequently added, which is the result of a thoughtless method of doing church business. The class leader is perhaps a mere figure head, for this often happens, and then the pastor may be a weak brother. We are sorry to say that there are some such, and the persons have received so little advantage from heir connection with the church that they conclude that it is not worth while to try to keep up the connection, and quietly they slip away without saying a word either to leader or paster, and thus they begin to drift. We know the cause, but is this right? What is church membership? Does it mean anything? Has it any advantage? Are there any privileges and responsibilities connected with it? Does it make any difference whether a man is in the church or not? True he had better not be in the church, unless he is of it in all of his thoughts and aspirations. But is the church a mere human society in which her members are suffered to without saying a word, or giving any notice of their departure. This is a practice full of mischief both to the church and the individual, and the sooner discontinued the better. It is the result of a carelessness that ought not to be tolerated. If "the church is the household of God, of which Christ is the head—if it is only those that "be planted in the house of the Lord that shall flourish in the courts of our God," it is a relation ship too sacred to trifle with.

"Fold their tents like Arabs

Hints to Self-Educated Ministers.

This work, written by Rev. Jas. Porter, D.D., near the close of his fiftieth year in the itinerant ministry, is commanding deserved attention. It is just full of hints to itinerant preachers, exhorters and other public speakers, showing them how to prepare to preach or speak, and then how to do it easily and in the most agreeable and impressive manner. The educated will find it useful because it will remind them of faults which they have contracted unconsciously, and furnish them useful hints which they never heard of in college, or read in other books. The uneducated will learn from it many important lessons as to what will be most profitable for them to read and study; how to prepare sermons and addresses and deliver them; what is graceful in gesture and position, and what is awkward and damaging. The work emphasizes the importance of local preachers, licensed exhorters, well-trained, off-hand speakers in social meetings, and gives the ladies of the church their proper rank and power in this connection. Indeed it is the only book we have seen which attempts to instruct, improve and encourage speakers not now in the active ministry, or preparing for it. If our ministers, local preachers and exhorters, would read it and act upon its practical suggestions we know of no book from which they would receive so much real [illegible] benefit.

[illegible] the young men and ladies in [illegible] could be induced to [illegible] and observe its teachings, it [illegible] an elevating influence [illegible] them doubly interest[illegible] This is a [illegible] of education [illegible] Why [illegible]

With assistance of this kind many of them would become powerful speakers and helpers in the Gospel vineyard. It has been honored by our bishops with a place in the course of study. We beg all of our preachers to read it. It will help them immediately in many ways. The work is published by our Book Concern East and West, and is sold by them and at this office, at one dollar and twenty five cents per copy.

The Sunday Law on the Sea Coast.

A public meeting was held in Biloxi, Miss., on the 1st, to consider the action of the grand jury under the Sunday law of the State. The Mayor of Biloxi announced his resignation of that office because incompatible with his business as a saloon proprietor, several indictments having been found against him. This was the most satisfactory thing done at the meeting, which is represented as being respectable in numbers, though not very large. It adopted resolutions condemning the law and the grand jury. The chief spokesman seems to have been Roderick Seal, Esq., who gave reasons for his opposition to the law of a singular character. The law against duelling was a dead letter, and the Sunday law should be similarly regarded, because it was contrary to local interests, traditions and customs. We suppose, however, he could find nothing better to say to the purpose of the liquor selling and drinking portion of the community, and Mr. Seal elevated the doctrine of local self government to a height that must command their warmest admiration. How pleasant it is to contemplate the era when each individual shall take the law into his own hands and make it bend to his "interests, traditions and customs!" It would be almost a millenium for brigands, "nigger" killers, and the whiskey clan generally.

Mr. Seal made a proposition which goes to show that he is not without some sense of the moral obligations of society, even though it be diminutive. He favored the closing of saloons during church hours. He seems to have been struck with the idea that both institutions should have a fair chance, and not monopolize the attendance of the entire population, or their limited possibilities of pocket; but we suppose the grand jury will not take kindly to the suggestion, and will perversely insist on enforcing the salutary law which allows the saloon keepers six days in the week to destroy, and the Church one day to build up the moral foundations of Biloxi.

New England.

It matters but little what cynics may sneeringly say about Boston, Mass., New England, Puritans or Puritanism. There is not a nobler city, or a city of more intelligence, virtue and real Christian philanthrophy in the United States than Boston. There is no section of this Union where there is more general intelligence among the laboring people, and so few who cannot read and write, and where there is so little of poverty, drunkenness, crime and misery, and so much real comforts to the square mile as in good old New England.

There are no six States as small that can point to a longer roll of distinguished civil or military names than the six New England States. This nation shows no names more resplendent than those of Adams, Franklin, Choate, Winthrop, Webster, Cass, Woodbury, Chase, Greeley, Fessenden. In the fields of public life, statesmanship, diplomacy, journalism, and in the higher walks of literature, New England can more than match the best and brightest of all other sections of the country, and command the admiration of the entire world. Her schools, academies, seminaries, colleges, universities of learning and churches are unsurpassed. Most of the political principles that have been of any real practical benefit to the nation had their origin in some New England brain.

The Corresponding Secretary of our Board of Education gratefully acknowledges the promptness with which large numbers of Children's Day collections have been sent in. The Execution of Garfield's Assassin.

On last Friday, within one year of the shooting of President Garfield, the assassin Guitean was hanged in the yard of the district jail, in Washington. A great crowd of people stood on the outside of the jail; many came long journeys in hopes of catching a glimpse of the great tragedy. Only about 250 persons were permitted to enter the jail yard and witness the execution. When the drop fell a yell was sent up by those within, it was re echoed by those without, the officers at the door were overpowered and hundreds crowded in. There was a general feeling that justice had been done, and a bad man had paid the penalty of his crime. There had been a long and fair trial, but all that could be said or done by faithful relatives and attorneys, or urged on the ground of common humanity was of no avail. As to the insanity plea, the impression made by examination, was like that upon Dr. Hartzell, who had a half hour's conversation with Guiteau the week before, and the interview removed the last lingering doubt that the assassin was responsible and deserved to be hanged.

Guitean was restless the latter part of the preceding night, and toward morning fell into a sound sleep from sheer exhaustion. He breakfasted heartily shortly after six o'clock, and ordered his dinner promptly at eleven. Rev. Dr. Hicks conversed with him on religious subjects. He asked Dr. Hicks to see that the scaffold and appurtenances were safe. He read a poem composed by himself—read it, attempted to sing it, but broke down in the effort; he called it "Simplicity, or Religious Baby Talk." He talked about his future, said he felt "tender," and feared he could not go through the ordeal without weeping, because he was nearer the other world. "I hold to the idea that God inspired me." He directed all complimentary allusions to President Arthur to be eliminated from his book, and presented all his books to Dr. Hicks. At 9.15 he walked briskly in the corridor for 15 minutes. At ten o'clock he took a bath. The office of the jail was given up to newspaper reporters, and eight telegraph instruments were put to work. Seventy-two policemen were posted along the roadway outside and Battery C., United States Artillery, was on duty inside the jail. At 11 Guitean had his boots blacked and ate dinner with a great relish. At 12 he burst into tears and sobbed hysterically. At 12:5 General Crocker read the death warrant to him in his cell, and he became more composed. At 12:27 the procession moved quickly to the scaffold, and Guiteau, with his arms tightly pinioned behind him, ascended the twelve steps. After prayer by Dr. Hicks, Guitean read from the 10th chapter of Matthew, from the 28th to 41st verse; he then read his dying prayer from manuscript held by Dr. Hicks; he also read some verses to indicate his feelings at the moment, and repeatedly broke into sobs and wept bitterly. The attendants then pinioned his legs, placed the noose over his head, and carefully adjusted it about the neck. As the black cap was placed over his head Guiteau shouted "Glory! glory! glory" The drop fell at 12:40 and Guitean swung in the air, but there was not the slightest perceptible movement of the limbs. Three minutes later the body was lowered for examination by physicians, the black cap was removed and the spectators formed in line and viewed the body. At 1.40 the body was removed to the jail chapel. At 3 15 the military guard moved away from the jail. At 4 p. m., after an autopsy, Dr. Hartigan left the jail with Guitean's brain, which weighed 49 ounces. The internal organs were found to be healthy, but the spleen was enlarged. The report of the physicians will not be made until after a complete examination.

The Whole Truth.

The Times Democrat replied to a correspondent who asked "why are the salaries of the teachers for November and December, 1879, and November and December, 1881, withheld from them?" It says:

The truth is that the "powers that be" are not responsible for the failure to pay these back salaries, and they are not, as our correspondent suggests, "keeping back" the teachers' or anybody else's money. The financial officers of the city and State have done everything to advance the teachers' interests, and have promptly paid over every dollar to their credit, as fast as it comes into the treasury. Perhaps, if "Teacher" or some one else could discover a way to make people pay their back taxes, the teachers would get their back salaries; but until these taxes are collected, the State and city officers can do nothing. It is not they, as our correspondent thinks, but the tax delinquents, who are holding back the funds of the teachers.

This is only a partial and misleading view of the situation. The whole truth is, that, by the denial of the free exercise of suffrage in Louisiana, the government has passed into the hands of a minority of the people. This minority has fortified itself by convenient election devices by which opposition may be suppressed, and but few save its own representatives can be admitted to the legislative halls. The ruling minority deliberately cut down the resources of the public schools until, if they were all available, the fund in the State Treasury would be inadequate to maintain them in sufficient number or efficiency. To crown this unpardonable stupidity, in concession to the tendency for the repudiation of public obligations, an article was expressly inserted in the State constitution to obstruct the enforcement of collection of delinquent taxes. "The powers that be" should justly be held responsible for the dishonest and inexcusable withholding of back salaries from the public school fund. It is a shameful result of misgovernment, and not the result of either poverty or the expression of the will of the majority of the people of Louisiana. If the Bourbons do feel compelled to defraud the negro of his citizen privileges, we do not see why they need also to defraud the poor school teachers of their honest dues. Until a liberal element can succeed in taking the reins of power out of the hands of the present managers of the State government, there is absolutely no hope for an improved condition of affairs.

Dr. Buckley, referring to "American Honorary Degrees," says:

Many institutions not above the grade of second-rate academies are showering degrees right and left. An institution, not one of whose faculty can construe a sentence of Greek, translate a page of Latin, or write good English, conferred the degree of LL. D. upon a person without any pretense of having a common English Education. Some of the most inferior schools in the far South among the freedmen (not those which are really worthy of respect), but schools not up to the grade of a grammar-school, are conferring degrees, not only upon the members of their own race and section, but upon ministers and teachers in all parts of the country. Some men have practically bought the degree of Doctor of Divinity by gifts of books or musical instruments.

We know of a clergyman not a thousand miles from the city of New York, innocent of theological or philosophical attainments, who made a very earnest application to one of our institutions in the South, many degrees below nine-tenths of the academies of New England, for the degree of Doctor of Divinity, and the institution did doctorate him, but how much this will do toward making the young man learned, profound, and imposing, or toward helping him into ecclesiastical distinction, we cannot say. To him, however, D. D. is no sounding brass nor tinkling cymbal. It is a weight of glory.

We want an editor for the Central Methodist, and will not be hard to please. The conditions are few, but they must all be met. We give them numerically: First, he must have edited some paper for a time. Secondly, during that period he must have collected a bill for advertising from one of the following named parties, who are advertising quite extensively in the South and West: H. C. Dean, of Chicago, who advertises a Dictionary or a Saw; M. G. Sanford & Co., of the same city, who advertise Bibles; Dr. Richmond, of St. Joseph, Missouri, who advertises Samaritan Nervine, etc. Of course these men pay, or the papers would not advertise for them. We are after the man who has received the money. Will our exchanges please copy.—Central Methodist.

We have a handsome cut on hand from M. G. Sanford & Co., which they offered us for insertion at a price most magnanimous, but on our suggesting that one-half of the sum be paid in advance, the subject seemed to interest them no further. It is too early for us to speak specifically of Dr. Richmond, except that payment for his advertising is a matter for future consideration.

From the Churches.

Notes from the churches forms, in the opinion of the writer, a very important part of a religious paper, and if he is not mistaken, they are generally read with the greatest interest by most people. We left the city, the place of dust and heat, where so many rich and poor people gladly stay with more than seeming delight. A ride of fifty-five miles over the Morgan railroad brought us to Terrebonne. Rev. Willis Carr is the pastor of our church here. Bro. Carr is one of the men who does but little cudgeling—in fact, he thinks that it does not become a gospel minister, and that it is always out of place in the house of God. He always hews to the line, but does it decently and in order. He never comes down upon the people like a thousand of bricks, has no angry debate, but is always earnest, honest and straightforward. His people love and trust him, and well they may. Under his administrations the church is having a year of marked prosperity.

There are two vigorous Sunday-schools under the superintendence of Bro. B. J. Jackson, with an average attendance of 150; of this number 65 are over 14 years of age. It is difficult to properly estimate the influence of the good seed sown in these schools. The church has been raised from the mud and now rests on good substantial brick pillars. The trustees have over twenty-four dollars towards the ceiling of the church. John J. Shaffer, Esq., on Bayou Black, about three miles from Terrebonne, has donated one acre of land as a site for a church, and the Church Extension Society has donated $150 towards the erection of this church, which when complete will make this one of the best appointments on the district.

Sometimes we find a preacher who is always in a row with his Official Board. Of self-denial, self-control, quietness of spirit, submission to church authority, he has no conception. He has marvelous success in turning his church into a mob. We have not reached the point in Louisiana where we can safely employ many of this class. The call now seems to be for men who can gather, harmonize and build the church "upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner-stone."

Few men have been more successful than Bro. Ford, at Houma. Looking into his own heart and talking much to himself, as Cecil says, he "found out what suits the hearts of men," what puzzles and distracts, what comforts and directs the mind in its search after truth and duty. Observing men closely, as he moves among them, and taking notice of what he sees and hears, he has been able to draw a large number, not to himself but to Him whose blood cleanseth from all sin. Thirty-two have been converted to God and received on probation in the church, There are two Sunday-schools, with an average attendance of 225, over 90 or these are 15 years of age and Our Childrens' Day was duly observed, and $13 was raised for the Gilbert Haven School of Theology. He has baptised and received into the church 25. He has collected on subscription towards repairing the church over $184. The reports at the quarterly conference were in good order.

PERSONAL MENTION.

— Bishop Bowman is recovering rapidly.

— Rev. L. O. Crowder wishes his correspondents to address him at Walthall, Miss.

— The postoffice address of Rev. J. R. Price has been changed from Spring to Houston, Texas.

— Hon. George P. Marsh was commissioned Minister to Italy in 1861, and has held the office ever since.

— Dr. Buckley, of the New-York Advocate, has received the degree of LL D from Emory and Henry College, of Virginia.

— Mrs. Foss says the Bishop sleeps well, eats heartily, takes no medicine, and rests in a reclining chair several hours daily.

— Rev. C. W. Cushing, D. D, a friend of other years, is assistant editor and will do good service on the National Prohibitionist, of New York.

— Bishop E. G. Andrews, D. D., will officiate at the dedication of the new Methodist Episcopal church at Locust Grove, Kent Co., Md., Sunday, July 16.

— Dr. R. S. Maclay, Superintendent of the Japan Mission, was married in San Francisco June 6 to Miss Sara A. Barr, a former graduate of Genesee College, Lima, N. Y., and sailed the afternoon of the same day, with Mrs. Maclay for Yokohama.

— O. Woodcock, editor of the Morgan City Review, while visiting the city last week gave us a call. He reports Morgan City as recuperating fairly from the overflow disaster, though poor crops in the neighborhood are a great drawback to its usual high degree of prosperity.

— On Sunday, June 4, Bishop Hurst preached the Baccalaureate sermon before the Baldwin University and German Wallace College, at Berea, Ohio. In the afternoon he made an address at the anniversary of the German Orphan Asylum, and preached again in the evening, in the German language.

— The Nashville Christian Advocate calls our attention to an error made in our issue of June 8. W. P. Harrison is book editor, and not editor of the Advocate. Dr. O. P. Fitzgerald was re-elected to the latter position by acclamation. We are sorry to hear that he is confined to his home with sickness. He was taken down the last day of the General Conference session, and has not been out since. We hope that his convalescence and restoration to active duty may be speedy.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

On the 2d inst., at Wesley Chapel, Rev. S. Davage, pastor, 285 persons participated in the Communion Service.

T. Gates, St. Martinsville: "If we had help to open a good school we would soon have a fine church here. Mrs. Gates keeps a day school with 24 children in attendance. The Catholics have three schools. The people are very poor, and only one in church can write his name. We were sorry to hear of the death of Rev. Felix Landor. A memorial sermon will be preached.

TEXAS.

S. Horr, Hughes Springs: "A camp meeting will be held on Pittsburg circuit, Liberty Church, beginning September 1st.

J. C. Mays, Cuero: "Our quarterly conference convened June 10th. Rev. Carmicheal was with us and we had a happy time. We are still striving to build."

Jeremiah Smith, Beaumont: "I think sometimes the Lord has forsaken this place. I look to see he fruits of righteousness in the church, but it looks as if the devil had possession of many so-called Christians. June 11th Elder Pulliam was with us and preached strongly. The love feast was highly enjoyed."

MISSISSIPPI.

C. W. Ivy, Enterprise: "Children's Day was observed; it was a time long to be remembered. Collection, $5. It will be forwarded to D. P. Kidder, 805 Broadway, N. Y. As I had to reform this circuit to some extent, I am just commencing collection for the Mission cause.

A. D. Payne, Oxford: "The churches on the Oxford circuit are three in number and have a membership of nearly two hundred. The churches are doing as well as could be expected, both spiritually and financially. We are proud to say the people; though greatly oppressed by the hardness of the present times, are trying to do all they can to support their pastor. There are two Sunday-schools on the circuit that are doing very well and one not doing very well, being poorly attended, as the membership of that church is small. The second quarterly conference of this circuit was held June 17, at Providence Church, and on Sunday June 18, Elder Bradford preached us a good sermon and administered the Lord's supper to fifty-five persons, during which we had a good time. On Sunday night we had one of the old time love feasts, which seems to have been attended by the spirit of the Lord. We are anxious to do much in the building up of the Redeemer's Kingdom this year in this part of the moral vineyard. We ask for prayers for the church."

TENNESSEE.

Rev. Alex Burdett will lecture on reform, in Key Chapel, Brownsville, July 20; and in Midget Chapel, Alamo, July 21, on the benevolent collections of our Church

S. P. Bell, McMinnville: "The continual snows of winter before last, and the excessive rains of last winter, have confronted us, but the Lord has raised the siege, and the church moves on. We said some time last spring that we were called to preach the word to the people about two and a half miles from this place, who had nothing but the broad leaves of a stately oak for their shelter. But now that people worship in a neat frame church and we have had thirteen conversions and accessions and have a flourishing Sunday-school. "This is the work of the Lord, and is marvelous in our eyes." Our church in town still hold her own. In our last series of meetings we had five conversions and seven read into full connection, two of our converts being men of fifty or sixty years' and both heads of large families; and one of them, Mr. Mack Young, whose house has always been the home of Methodist ministers and who is the most prominent colored man in town, is happily converted to Christ and is doing noble work for the Master. Great credit is due the sisters who have organized themselves into a sewing circle for the benefit of the church. A few weeks ago they gave an entertainment, and raised $14 50 and have raised to date $25 70.

The choir of the church raised, by concert Saturday last, $15 40 to apply on pastor's salary. We have a very active and lively set of young folks, and too much praise cannot be given to Misses Alexander, Ida Snodgrass, Cassie and Cally Johnson, I. E. Payne, Tiny Snodgrass, A. Holland, F. Lane, and Messrs. A. O. Young, K. Avant, John Grace, Thomas Tolbert, John Hill and others for the interesting part they took in the affair to make it a success. Sunday was Childrens' Day, and a gala day for us it was; collection, $1 25. Collection continued until the second Sunday in July.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

A preachers meeting and Sunday-school institute will be held in Camden, July 26th. A. Webster, P. E., has sent us the programme of exercises, which includes entertainment for six days. E. M. Pinckney is Chairman of the Committee of Arrangements.

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

Mount Zion Church.

Since assuming charge of the above church in February last, the pastor has been exercised with numerous cases arising from solicitude for its best interests.

The church at present is weak, but has a promising and flattering future. Among the membership are to be found as faithful and liberal Christians as any within the scope of my short experience. Many who are not connected with the church have evidenced their sympathy and friendship by kind words and contributions.

Last Sabbath our church presented a beautiful and lively scene by the presence of the Sunday-schools from Wesley Chapel, First-street Union Chapel and Sixth Street Churches, who were present by invitation to take part in our "Children's Day Service." Flowers, in the art of decoration, added to the cheerfulness of the occasion.

It was a joyous, interesting and profitable time to young and old.

While observing the charming assemblage, that greeted the eye and thrilled the heart, a brother, in delighted tenor, said: "What is more beautiful than a large number of children?" The singing, which was in part competitive, was excellent.

All the Sunday-schools did well. The collection goes to help make up the $100, subscribed for the Gilbert Haven School of Theology. Mount Zion S. S., under the superintendence of Miss Lizzie Taylor and Mr. F. H. Bunton, is in good condition. The Order of Love and Charity and the Society of Teamsters and Loaders have our thanks for liberal contributions.

Leaning not to our own understanding, but trusting in Him who leads, sustains and upholds the church, we look to the future believing that it is laden with rich reward for all who do not waver, but labor with an abiding faith in the Master.

The following are the names of some who gave as much as one dollar or more to a fund for the completion of the church:

Rev. L. P. Cushman, $5; John Eunis, $5; Delia Baker, $4; J. Celins, $2 50; A. Claude, $2 50; S. McCoy, $1 50; Hager Lewis $2; S. Smith, $1 50; Louis Madison, $1 50; Amelia Felix, $1 50; Winnie Thorn, $1 50; Anna Claude, $1 50; Harriet Balsam, $1 50; Abner Claude, $1; S. Hunter, $1; Octavia Carter, $1; Amelia Cook, $1 25; Sarah Jones, $1; Adele Johnson, $1; Amelia Scott, $1; Mary Perry, $1; M. Edwards, $1; Laura Davis, $1; Ann Thomas, $1 25; Mary Washington, $1 10; M. Robinson, $1; J. Cowgill, $1; G. Clayton, $1; Eliza Ross, $1; Mary Christian, $1; W. A. Halston, $1. Thanks to our friends for assistance.

Rev. C. M. Moore, of Mercer, desires us to publish the following: "Ministers and laymen having in their possession facts of interest and value under the following topics, are requested to send them to the undersigned, who will put them in shape for preservation: 'Facts and incidents connected with the division of the Church in the South before the war. The Church in the South during and since the war. Personal incidents and recollections of Methodism in the South.' All sending communications will confer a great favor."

On Thursday, June 29th, the express train which left Long Branch at 8 a. m., met with a terrible accident while crossing the bridge over a branch of Shrewsbury river. The accident was no doubt caused by the spreading of the rails. Six cars, including four ordinary passenger coaches, smoking car and the Pullman parlor car Zenobia, left the rails and ran over the ties of the bridge, tearing them to splinters. The cars kept on the bridge until the train was half way across, when four passenger coaches and the smoking car went over into the water with a terrible crash. The cars landed on the other side in about four feet of water. About 100 people were hurt. Gen. Grant slightly cut and scratched, was pulled out of the smoking car uninjured.

From Our Mission Rooms.

Rev. Joel Osgood, of the Liberia Mission, arrived in New York on the City of Berlin, June 4th. He was three week in reaching Liverpool from Monrovia. His health is much improved by the voyage, which was taken as the only remedy in the case. Miss Sharp was left in comfortable health conducting her school in the Monrovia seminary building. The school at White Plains (some twenty-two miles from Monrovia) was necessarily suspended on the departure of the missionary. The Mission on the St. Pauls rivers, in the interior, was getting on successfully last fall. A large house was occupied, and thirty acres of ground were planted and growing in good condition, when the promised permission and protection of the chiefs, Jos. Russell and Zooloo, were withdrawn and Mr. Osgood was compelled to leave. The Mandingoes have now occupied the premises. Throughout the interior region, including Boporo, Mohamedanism largely prevails. There is a mosque at Boporo. The worshippers are numerous. They have some knowledge of the Koran, the letter of which the natives use largely in the manner of a fetich, forming charms with it.

Rev. S. Lewis, of the China field, continues at Chinkiang, where he remained when the state of his health forbade his continuing the journey with Dr. Wheeler into Szechuen. He has applied himself to the study of the language, as has also Mrs. Lewis. The latter has taken charge of a girls' school, which had been taught by an English lady who had been compelled to return home. For the last two months Mrs. Lewis has been hearing the girls in their daily recitations of Scripture. The older girls memorize about fifteen verses of Scripture daily, besides their other studies. The pupils that have been longest in the school seem likely to become reliable Christian women. Not many girls of their age in America, says our report, could compare with them in knowledge of the Bible. Many more pupils might be received than are now taught were there better accommodations for them. The school has two rooms, 10x12, and barely high enough for one to stand erect. The effort to teach the [illegible] hymns seems quite successful, as they take to [illegible]. A small organ would be a [illegible].

Quarterly Conference, 20 persons were received on probation and 13 into full membership. At Westervick 22 probationers were received; at Wisby 20 joined in full. Here the chapel has been much overcrowded. At a recent communion 60 joined on trial. Since Christmas 83 have been thus received at Wisby. At Motala 44 have joined. Similar success has been enjoyed at Linkoping and other places. Altogether, 303 were taken on trial on this district during the quarter. The Sunday-schools grow in somewhat like proportion. On the Karlskrona District, J. P. Larson, presiding elder, special advance has been made in paying chapel debts. This makes all the financial operations of the society easier. There are many calls to enter new fields. "Though the ministers should preach every day, yet it would be impossible for them," says the report, "to reach every place." On the Stockholm District the prosperity has been still greater. Brother Lawson was the founder of our works in Sweden, and his words have weight when he says: "One thing is certain, namely, that the prospects for the success of our Church in Sweden have never been brighter or more hopeful than just now."

SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Third Quarter. Lesson ii. July 9th. The Rich Young Man. (Mark x. 17—30.)
(Condensed from Western Christian Advocate.)

Out of the house one came mourning and kneeled to Jesus, and asked him what he should do to inherit eternal life. Jesus did not explicitly reply to his question, but conducts his mind through a process of reasoning to the answer; and wisely, since the operations of his own faculties prepared him to feel the force of the reply as nothing else could. The commandments are those of the second table of the Decalogue, embracing duties to our fellows. The reminder of the supremacy of God sufficed to place the duties to God before his mind. The duties to our fellows being of a more tangible character are also more easily applied to human conduct as a test. It is implied, that if he had kept these commandments he was in the way of eternal life; but it was of high importance to bring out whether he had kept them in the spirit of truth, or in a formal sense. Apparently, if these were the tests he sustained them, and the inference would seem to be he had obtained the inheritance of eternal life.

Jesus beholding in the sense of discerning his character; sincere, earnest, embarrassed, and distressed, knew that his apparent conformity to law was artificial. A test is now brought forward, which reveals the true requirement of the law of God, and the nonconformity of the young man. At heart he loved the world more than God, though apparently unconscious of it. He was not prepared to become one of Jesus' disciples. The test reveals that latent selfish quality, unsuspected by himself, perhaps, which establishes a fundamental separation from God, and renders true keeping of the law impossible, because the law antagonizes selfishness. No wonder the disciples, who inclined to take the utterances of Jesus literally, despaired of the salvation of any person, considering the number who possessed and the number who longed for wealth. The salvation of the rich is possible with God; the salvation of any person is not possible with himself; in other words, God saves rich and poor. He will find the ways and means, if all only trust in him. Many first in coming to Christ, shall be lowest in regard to distribution of these rewards; while many last in coming shall be highest in reward. This was a timely warning to check the greediness of the disciples, who were among the first, in cherishing extravagant and carnal notions of their importance in the Messianic kingdom, a fault to which they were peculiarly prone.

A steady, firm and regular beat of the heart, replaces the interrupted feeble action of that organ, if Brown's Iron Bitters are freely used.

The Dr. Harter Medicine Company, of St. Louis, Mo., is one of the most honorable and substantial establishments in the country. Dr. Harter's Iron Tonic is one of the standard and most highly esteemed preparations of the day, and justly enjoys a wide and increasing sale. This is brought about by the high merit of the goods and the judicious and extensive manner in which they are advertised throughout the country. Laudatory columns might be easily written in their praise, but with goods so able to speak for themselves, simple facts serve a better purpose.—Des Moines (Iowa) Western Farm Journal.

The Publisher of this Paper

Is authorized to refer his readers to the advertisement of "Dr. Scott's Electric Brush," and one of these brushes has been supplied to him that it may be exhibited in the office of the paper, where all who desire may see its beauty and try its merits. Furthermore, he has been requested to test it in every case of headache and neuralgia he may chance to meet, and if it fails to cure within a few minutes, nine sufferers out of every ten, the advertisement will not be allowed to continue in this paper. We submit that this is fair advertising, and every person reading this may have a brush on trial, as is explained in the advertisement.

The following is a sample of one of the many flattering letters from Clergymen and Laymen, which Dr. Scott daily receives:

121 Walnut St., Evansville, Ind.

Dear Sir: I am much pleased with your Dr. Scott's Electric Hair Brush. I have been a great sufferer from headache for many years. Nothing that I have ever tried has given me the relief I find from this brush, and I feel that it has already paid for itself handsomely.

Standard of Silver
As a rule the quality of Government Coin has been the standard on which Silversmiths have based their quality. The Standard of United States Coin is 900-1000 copper or other alloy. The standard of Great Britain is 925/1000 pure silver to 75-1000 alloy.
Our leading Silversmiths, the GORHAM COMPANY, adopted the English standard many years ago, and so careful has been the surveillance over the quality of their ware, that not a SINGLE PIECE has been known to leave their Factory under the standard. So well is this now understood that their trade mark [trade mark] is as well known to all purchasers of Solid Silver in this country as is STERLING the Hall Mark of England, as a sure guarantee for a pure metal.

This power can always be tested by a silver compass which accompanies each Brush.

[From Rev. Dr. Bridgeman.] BROOKLYN.
"Gents—I have never before given a testimonial, but am willing to encourage the use of an honest remedy. I am so pleased with your Hair Brush that I deem it my duty to write you recommending it most cordially. My hair, about a year since, commenced falling out, and I was rapidly becoming bald; but since using the Brush a thick growth of hair has made its appearance, quite equal to that which I had previous to its falling out. I have tried other remedies, but with no success. After this remarkable result I purchased one for my wife, who has been a great sufferer from headache, and she finds it a prompt and infallible remedy. A. C. Bridgeman, D.D."
SARATOGA.
"I cheerfully testify to the merits of Dr. Scott's Electric Hair Brush. It cures my headaches within a few minutes. It is an excellent Hair-Brush, well worth the price, aside from its curative powers."
Jas. R. Chapman, Mayor.

EARS FOR THE MILLION!
Foo Choo's Balsam of Shark's Oil
Positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness Known.
This Oil is abstracted from peculiar species of small White Shark, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as Carcharodon Rondeletii. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist Priest about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal that for over 300 years no Deafness has existed among the Chinese People. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1 per bottle.
HEAR WHAT THE DEAF SAY!
It has performed a miracle in my case.
I have no unearthly noises in my head and hear much better.
I have been greatly benefited.
My deafness helped a great deal—think another bottle will cure me.
"Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, as the writer can personally testify, both from experience and observation. Write at once to Haylock & Jenney, 7 Dey street New York, enclosing $1, and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. You will never regret doing so."—Editor of Mercantile Review.

"THE SWEETEST MOTHER."

Little Hans was helping mother
Carry home the lad's basket;
Chubby hands of course were lifting
One great handle—can you ask it?
As he tugged away beside her,
Feeling, oh! so brave and strong,
Little Hans was softly singing
To himself a little song.

"Some time I'll be tall as father,
Though I think it's very funny,
And I'll work and build big houses,
And give mother all the money.
For," and little Hans stopped singing,
Feeling, oh! so strong and grand,
"I have got the sweetest mother
You can find in all the land."
—HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE.

Be Careful.

Not long ago, while travelling on a certain railroad, we saw a man pass down the aisle of the car, having in his hand a satchel. In his haste to get out he handled the satchel so carelessly that the sharp corners came very near the head of a lady who was seated next the [illegible], and it would undoubtedly [illegible] struck her had not a gentleman raised his hand, and warded off the blow.

There are many people who go along careless and blundering, not meaning any harm, but really doing [illegible] by their thoughtlessness. [illegible] in a crowd see people [illegible] or canes, which [illegible] back and forth at the [illegible] somebody, or carry [illegible] with the point thrust [illegible] in such a way as [illegible] unsuspecting one in [illegible]

[illegible] throw orange peel or [illegible] on the pavement, and [illegible] one may tread on [illegible] things and be brought [illegible] ground, and perhaps be [illegible]

[illegible] how careless many are in [illegible] fire-arms. Every now [illegible] we read of some person [illegible] perhaps killed, because [illegible] picked up a gun or a pistol, "didn't know it was loaded." [illegible] especially should let [illegible] alone. Never play [illegible] dangerous things.

[illegible] be careful while you are [illegible] it will become a habit [illegible] you grow up. Think [illegible] as of yourself, and [illegible] yourself happy as [illegible]—S. S. Advocate.

There was at the late Mississippi Press Convention a colored editor and Republican, who was treated quite nicely by his Democratic brethren. Though the Association was non-political, as Maj. Walpole explained, yet it is significant that a representative of the colored race was received cordially not only in the deliberations of the association, but was among the other members of the press at the banquet in their honor, given by the best people of one of the most aristocratic cites of the South. He received no snub, and was more kindly treated after the banquet than before. Although an individual instance, it serves to show that material progress is being made by the South, and that the harshness that has resulted from revolution and radical changes in our institutions, is being replaced by a fraternal feeling for which little credit has been given this section. Slowly, as all peaceful changes are wrought—but surely will turbulence and passion pass away, and even the South see two distinct races dwelling together in the sweetest concord.—Mayersville Spectator.

Rheumatism, Colds and Fever promptly cured by Dr. Pierce's Extract of Smart-weed. It is also the best liniment for sprains and bruises. By all druggists.

Supervision implies more than an ability to find fault; it implies an ability to counsel, and suggest improvements. For persons not practical educators, to attempt the supervision of schools is foolish presumption; yet there are such, wise in their own conceits, who deem themselves well qualified for this most delicate and difficult task.—Supt. Hall, Iowa.

Bright's Disease of the Kidneys, Diabetes and other Diseases of the Kidneys and Liver which you are being so frightened about, Hop Bitters is the only thing that will surely and permanently prevent and cure. All other pretended cures only relieve for a time, and then make you many times worse.

The Methodist Episcopal Church has plenty of work for all the young men who wish to enter her ministry. The only trouble is that too many desire to begin with strong Churches and large pay. Those who are willing to commence where their fathers began—in the sparse settlements and among the poor—will bless the world and make strong and true men of themselves.—Western Christian Advocate.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

Cornelia Hayman, Clinton: "Our Sunday-school celebration took place on June 3d. We had a grand time, with 125 children present. The committee of arrangements had everything in perfect order. An exhibition at night, with speeches and songs, was given to a crowded house, under the guidance of our pastor, Rev. W. P. Forest. May the Lord help him to live long with us and be useful."

TEXAS.

J. S. Whitaker, Hempstead: "Elder Moore held the second quarterly conference. He is doing a grand work on the district. I agreed at conference to raise $100 for Houston College, and I appointed the first Sunday in June to sing a dollar song beginning with the pulpit and the amen corners; children to give the nickels. I collected $21 90, which seemed small, but this has been a hard year with us. The crops are looking well, and I am not discouraged. I expect to take up every collection. We remembered childrens' day."

R. Woods, Davilla: "Children's day was quite interesting to both the children and adults of our sparsely settled community. After a few instructive words from Bro. W. R. Patterson, a neat little collection of $9 75 was taken. Messrs. Maria Dosson and Rosa Reid were appointed to solicit aid. Valuable prizes, such as interesting books, etc., had been promised to the most successful by Bro. R. F. Caruthers and sister S. J. Woods. Miss Reid took the prize; another was presented to Miss Dosson."

C. Chase, Industry: "The people are poor, but willing to do all they can. A protracted meeting of two weeks resulted in eight conversions, eight additions and two reclaimed. We expect a good harvest this year."

Rev. D. Harper writes from Morales that he has resigned his charge because he could not obtain from it a support.

MISSISSIPPI.

B. L. Crump, Okolona: "Childrens' day was quite a success. Although there was three hours rain, about 10 o'clock, we had a large congregation to hear the children go through their exercises. Collection was $6 95. At 3 p. m. the funeral of Bro. T. Gilmore, our former superintendent, was preached by Rev. D. McLachlan. Two weeks ago we began labor to obtain an organ for our school. A committee of nine gave an ice cream supper, and made $22 50, after which they collected $42 50 by subscription, and the organ was ordered. On Saturday the church was beautifully decorated with evergreens and flowers, and Mrs. E. L. Spriggs, of Columbus, played several pieces on the organ to the delight of the people and the children. We expect to have her teach for us. Twenty-four pupils are ready for music lessons."

ARKANSAS.

Joseph Ragland, Bledsoe's Landing: "I have been here three months and can not get money enough to bring my family. Part of the work I have not visited but once on account of the high water."

J. C. Clark, Hot Springs: "Last Sunday was a notable day with our young people. It was children's day. We met at 3 p. m., with a crowded house. The addresses and declamation were delivered in good style. The little boys and girls astonished their friends by their elcquence. The exercises were a grand success mentally and financially. Collection was $7. We have a very nice Sunday-school, with an average attendance of 65 scholars. It has doubled in the last four months. Sister H. Kennedy is as lively a superintendent as one could possibly find, and does not lose an opportunity to keep up the interest in the school."

A young lady once hinted to a gentleman that her thimble was worn out, and asked what reward she had merited for her industry. He sent her an answer in the shape of a thimble, on which the following lines were engraved:

I send you a thimble, for fingers nimble,
Which I hope will fit when you try it;
It will last you long, if it's half as strong
As the hint which you gave me to buy it.

Insist upon obtaining Floreston Cologne. It is preeminently superior in permanence and delicacy of odor.

No men deserve the title of infidels so little as those to whom it has usually been applied; let any of those who renounce Christianity write fairly down in a book, all the absurdities that they believe instead of it, and they will find that it requires more faith to reject [illegible] than to receive it.—

[From Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper.]

A LADY SAID

"Those Horrid Pimples! No, I Cannot Go. Please Present My Excuses.

Probably two-thirds of the ladies in society and homes of our land are afflicted with skin diseases of various kinds, to do away with which, if it could be done without injury, would be the happiest event of their lives. Then she would have instead of a disfigured and marred countenance, one that would be handsome, or at least good-looking, for any one with a clear, pure skin, no matter what the cut of her features is, has a certain amount of good looks which attract everybody. As it is now, she imagines every one sees and talks about "those freckles," "those horrid pimples," and other blemishes with which she is afflicted, and this is true of either sex.

To improve this appearance great risks are taken; arsenic, mercury, or high-sound titled named articles containing these death-dealing drugs are taken in hopes of getting rid of all these troubles. In many cases death is the result. No alleviation of the burning, heating, itching and inflammation is given. All troubled with Eczema (salt rheum), Tetters, Humors, Inflammation, Rough Scaly Eruptions of any kind, Diseases of the Hair and Scalp, Scrofula, Ulcers, Pimples or Tender Itchings on any part of the body, should know that there is hope for them in a sure, perfect and elegant remedy, known as "Dr. C. W. Benson's Skin Cure." It makes the skin white, soft and smooth, removes tan and freckles, and is the best toilet dressing in the world. It is elegantly put up, two bottles in one package, consisting of both internal and external treatment. Our readers should be sure to get this and not some old remedy resuscitated on the success of Dr. Benson's and now advertised as the "Great Skin Cure." There is only one,—it bears the Doctor's picture and is for sale by all druggists. $1 per package.

Satisfaction for Ten.

It is necessary for gold to be tried in the fire to separate from it all impurities and alloy. So, the apostle tells us, the trial of our faith which is much more precious than gold that perisheth, is necessary to develop its strength, and purify and enrich our souls. Sometimes these trials are severe, and instead of being joyous they are always grievous, but if they are patiently endured they will yield fruits of righteousness and peace. Sometimes the furnace may be heated sevenfold; but fear not; the God who delivered Daniel will preserve you amid the flames, and you shall come forth unharmed.—Recorder.

SAMARITAN

NERVINE.

Samaritan Nervine

Cures Epileptic Fits, Spasms, Convulsions, St. Vitus Dance, Virtigo, Hysterics, Insanity, Apoplexy, Paralysis, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all Nervous diseases. This infallible remedy will positively eradicate every species of Nervous Derangement, and drive them away from whence they came, never to return again. It utterly destroys the germs of disease by neutralizing the hereditary taint or poison in the system, and thoroughly eradicates the disease, and utterly destroys the cause.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

For Wakefulness at night, there is no better remedy. During the change of life no female should be without it. It quiets the Nervous System and gives rest, comfort and nature's sweet sleep.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Alcoholism, Drunkenness and the habit of Opium Eating. These degrading habits are by far the worst evils that have ever befallen suffering humanity. Thousands die annually from these noxious drugs. The drunkard drinks liquor not because he likes it, but for the pleasure of drinking and treating his friends, little thinking that he is on his road to ruin. Like the Opium Eater, he first uses the drug in small quantities as a harmless antidote. The soothing influence of the drug takes strong hold upon its victim, leading him on to his own destruction. The habits of Opium Eating and Liquor Drinking are precisely what eating is to alimentiveness, as over-eating first inflames the stomach, which redoubles its cravings until it paralyzes both the stomach and appetite. So every drink of liquor or dose of opium, instead of satisfying, only adds to its fierce fires, until it consumes the vital force and then itself. Like the gluttonous tape-worm, it cries: "Give, give, give!" but never enough until its own rapacity devours itself. Samaritan Nervine gives instant relief in all such cases. It produces sleep, quiets the nerves, builds up the nervous system, and restores body and mind to a healthy condition.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Nervous Dyspepsia, Palpitation of the Heart, Asthma, Bronchitis, Scrofula, Syphilis, diseases of the Kidneys and all diseases of the urinary organs. Nervous debility, caused by the indiscretions of youth, permanently cured by the use of this invaluable remedy. To you, young, middle-aged and old men, who are covering your sufferings as with a mantle by silence, look up, you can be saved by timely efforts, and make ornaments to society, and jewels in the crown of your Maker, if you will. Do not keep this a secret longer, until it saps your vitals, and destroys both body and soul. If you are thus afflicted, take DR. RICHMOND'S Samaritan Nervine. It will restore your shattered nerves, arrest premature decay, impart tone and energy to the whole system.

A WONDERFUL and SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.

These Glasses are chemically treated in the process of manufacture, and possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analysed by American and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal, and can in some cases restore the sight if used in time, but in no case can the eye become impaired by their use for the following reasons:

1. The chemicals soften the light to the eye, completely doing away with that tiresome sensation that is usually experienced in using glasses after one or two hours' use.
2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as at first.
3. The chemicals keep the glasses cold, and the result is that the optic nerves are always cool, doing away with any feverish sensation to the eye.
4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, with no distressing or tiresome sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.

The MEDICATED GLASSES are all stamped on the frame H. HOUSAH, Medicated. NONE GENUINE UNLESS STAMPED.

It is a scientific combination of the medicinal principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs, chemically united, to insure the greatest possible efficiency and uniformity of results, which enables physicians as well as invalids to use it with confidence. It is the most reliable remedy for diseases of the throat and lungs that science has produced. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt and certain relief, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it without difficulty. In the treatment of ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Clergyman's Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, and Catarrh, the effects of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household, for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy so efficacious, soothing, and helpful.

An impartial trial will convince the most sceptical of its wonderful curative powers, as well as of its superiority over all other preparations for pulmonary complaints.

Eminent physicians in all parts of the country, knowing its composition, recommend AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL to invalids, and prescribe it in their practice. The test of half a century has proved its absolute certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.

"TOGETHER."

"Our Lord Jesus Christ, who died for us, that whether we wake or sleep, we should live together with Him."—1 Thess. v:9, 10.

"Together!" How this hallows Christian friendship!
"Together" we shall with our Lord abide;
"Together" we shall gaze upon his beauty;
And in His likeness shall be satisfied.

"Together!" Oh, the restfulness of thinking,
That parting, then, for us shall be unknown;
No cold, dull pain, with dreading that the morrow
May find some loved one from our presence flown.

"Together" we shall meet those friends who left us,
For whom we sorrowed in the years gone by;
How hand will then clasp hand! What words be spoken!
What light illumine every joyous eye!

"Together" we shall live with them forever,
Our Lord Himself the centre of our band:
Could any thought bring mourning hearts more comfort
Than this "together" of the Heavenly Land?

"Together," then, oh let us thank our Savior
That He doth whisper it to hearts deprest,
And ask for grace to realize its fulness,
Whilst yet we linger in this world's unrest.

ADDRESS.

Delivered Before the Alumni Association, New Orleans University.

BY PROF. J. W. E. BOWEN.

(Concluded from last week.)

I am well aware of the near approach to so exalted a conception among ancient philosophers and logicians, and even among the charlatans of our day and generation. Take as an example the great teacher, Socrates. While his philosophy abounds in many worthy moral precepts to the young and old, admonishing against vice, immorality and disgrace, bearing, so to speak, upon all subjects connected with human society and progress, given especially for the ameliorating the rude barbarian manners, for inculcating virtues, for the preservation of the state, the prolonging of life, and adding to its real comforts; yet this model Christian heathen, with all his wisdom and moralizing upon philosophy, fell far short of the moral principles that are the true basis of happiness, which are found only in the Bible, and contain intimations and discoveries [illegible] made to him by a sort of [illegible]. What this "divination" [illegible] he has failed to explain, and [illegible] left to conjecture. Here, [illegible] is an intellect of [illegible] endowments, and a noble [illegible] under providential [illegible] in the study of man to [illegible] from the systems of [illegible] ignorance and vice, to [illegible] morality by infusing [illegible] is, to reach the true [illegible] knowledge, by the study [illegible] to comprehend [illegible] of duty as [illegible] by the Greatest of [illegible] in the philosophy [illegible] heathen, we discover [illegible] teaching the [illegible] of the human [illegible] and influenced [illegible]. This [illegible] the human [illegible] of, almost [illegible]. The inherent [illegible] and [illegible] mind will not exert in enlargement of capacity unless the influences are brought to bear. Another patent fact worthy of note is the patient and steady delving after the beautiful in thought, in word, in nature, by the mind. This trait stamps it with godlike origin, and is its certificate to eternal existence. No conscientious man therefore need plead ignorance of God's laws. A knowledge of them is a possibility reduced to a probability upon least exertion. The mountains in their dignified silence and uplifted brow teach reverence and His vast power; the rocks in their gradual formation and durability teach stability and firmness; the heavens with its vastness of extent and incomparable beauty, and the grandeur of its simplicity, teach the glory of Him.

All nature utters forth "God and fills the earth with loudest praise." The unwearied sun, the moon, the stars that round her burn, and the planets in their turn most unmistakably declare the hand that made us is divine.

I need not specify another character among the ancients, for one answers our every purpose.

It is worthy of remark, that true manhood is a natural sequence of persistent effort, it is made and does not grow of itself. It is made in the workshop, on the farm, in the school-room, in the pulpit, in the "bivouac of life," as natural a result as the physical. Animals become perfect by the gradual upholding of the Divine law inherent in them; but manhood is a product. And it is only to real manhood that men commit grave interests. Men try their fortunes on the deep in vessels tried and true, that have plowed with steady momentum the ocean waves, and not in the light and beautiful yacht of the harbor, that ply only about the port in the clear sunlight days and silvery nights on the placid lake, when the moon is shining amid the twinkling stars that add lustre to he firmament. Beauty for ornament and pleasure, but utility for real worth.

Observe the horizon of the heavens in the twilight, when the sun is sinking beneath the hills, and occasionally showing his golden face, shooting his golden pencils of light into broad immensity, tinging the clouds and heavens with his livid light, and the whole firmament is aglow with beauty; how our hearts are enwrapted, and our imagination quickened and elevated, as we contemplate the sublime beauty of twilight; or when the "king of day" comes peeping over the hills, glorying in his might and rejoicing in his course to run. This is indeed a pleasing picture of the heavens, but what is all this worth in the conflict of life? Man was made for something nobler than to enjoy the beauties in nature. This is incidental.

"Not enjoyment and not sorrow
Is our destined end and way,
But to act that each to-morrow
Finds us further than to-day."

The difficulties and solid problems of life are to be solved, and every man more or less finds himself struggling with its untried realities. In him is a consciousness of strength which, under proper discipline, will, if turned in the right channel, bless the world. While it may be said with force that genius is not acquired, but is to some degree innate, yet were it not for a rigid observance of the laws that pertain to human development, and by constant discipline that the hidden powers might be drawn out in its exercise, the most lofty genius would lie secret and unthought of.

How wisely Providence has arranged the time and scheme of development is to be discovered in the order of life. That in the springtime of life, while the body is undergoing its incomprehensible and intricate growth from youth to maturity, the mind likewise passes through its disciplinary stages of gradual development from fickleness to firmness and stability. Gradually unbudding into beauty and symmetry, fortifying itself by all the resources within its reach, appropriating to itself whatever thought and ideas, and, so to speak, mounting by its own exercise upon the ruins, it brightens up to the philosopher one of the grandest truths in human economy, that mind is of God and [illegible] self-acting.

[illegible] constituent elements [illegible] to a [illegible] that [illegible] our estimation at [illegible] it does yet, granting that these are stubborn facts, and, in a measure self-evident, the occasion and the proper means of education must be furnished to the leading out of the great powers of the mind. These two elements are in their nature fundamental prerequisites to the manifestation of genius. Hence the establishment of schools, seminaries, colleges and universities throughout the country, that the young mind may be led and trained step by step from the elementary principles of learning to the more difficult and scientific. The child must be sent to school that habits of thought may be cultivated, that the great springs in his nature may be touched and its flow directed in the right, making it a blessing and not a stream of woe and curses; that its manhood may be rounded and hold in its make-up, ready for use, true power; and that his purpose and aspirations may be pure and lofty, differing from the aspiration of the ancient philosophic mind and even form a modern contorted and presumptions intellect aiming only to be great in wisdom, in that it aims not only to be great in wisdom but great in goodness and good in greatness.

Horace Mann said, forty years ago, speaking of the benefits of school life and its product: "The practical farmer, the ingenious mechanic, the talented artist, the upright legislator or judge, the accomplished teacher, are only modifications and varieties of the original man. Man is the trunk, the occupations and professions are only different qualities of the fruit it yields. The development of the common nature, the cultivation of germs of intelligence, uprightness, benevolence and truth, these are the principal, the aim, the end," of the schools of our land. It is no poetic thought that the mind in many respects is a diamond. If so be, how many diamonds lie unpolished about us? Chemical science tells us that even the charcoal about our hearth is diamond, which, if subject to proper chemical action and implements, could be turned into precious ornaments to enrich the humblest cottage. It is highly probable that in the next future some mind more keen and penetrating will convert this ignoble substance into precious worth.

It is the destiny of every man and nation in the mysterious workings and unfoldings of Divine Providence, that something worthy shall be produced by patient toil and arduous labor. However slow the movements of Providence present themselves, yet His will is that all nations shall stand upon high plains of Christian civilization. Take the history of the Plebians of Rome, who, in their desperate struggle for supremacy, contending against the most deadly foe in human society, prejudice, battling against oppression, poverty, ostracism, and the mighty arm of that corrupt and ill regulated government, in this long and weary struggle for four hundred years, were at last victorious by the Licinian law admitting them to the consulship of that vast empire and mistress of the world.

It is now my purpose to give you a sketch of our Alma Mater—the New Orleans University. Situated on the corner of Camp and Race streets, pleasantly located in the heart of the city, on the beautiful Coliseum Park, it commands the notice of friends and foes. Its first and familiar name, and which clung to it tenaciously after its incorporation as a university, was the Union Normal School. This school was organized in the year 1870 under the principalship of Miss Colt, a truly blessed woman. Its fame rapidly spread over the city and students from the public schools filled its halls. Under the care and direction of Miss Colt and her assistants the school began its history, which I trust will be a proud one. In the next year the Freedmen's Aid Society, under the wise management of that sage, Rev. R. S. Rust, called to the head of the school, Rev. I. S. Leavitt. President Leavitt, coming from the great State of Wisconsin, brought with him benedictions for this people. His three years administration was fruitful in the fullest sense. By his faithful discharge of duty and conscientiousness in minute obligations and rare ability he won the esteem of student and parent. To his skill, fruitful brain, and broad spirit we are largely indebted for the name New Orleans University, and the side building. Aided by an earnest and vigorous corps of professors and teachers, he marked out the course of the University, established its departments, and, so to speak, cleared away the rubbish and debris and laid the foundation for future greatness. We are safe in saying as long as the New Orleans University shall live, aye, longer, and a love for education be cherished by our people, Rev. I S. Leavitt's name will be held in veneration. In the year 1875 the University finds itself under the Presidency of Rev. W. D. Godman, a man of known and honored standing to-day, not only in our midst but throughout the Church, a man compounded of gentleness, firmness and possessing great wisdom. His special calling seems to have been to the training of youth, and whose intrinsic value and adaptability shines out in the school-room with a brilliancy second to no educator in the land. Under the wise guidance of this master educator, the University acquired an enviable reputation for thoroughness, and the students vied with each other in literary progress, and the inspiration given by the burning words of the President was a mighty impetus to wade deep in the languages, mathematics and the sciences. It has been said that the Latin, Greek and mathematics recited under President Godman equaled any good recitation in like branches in any Northern university. Time will give to this venerable man his place among the benefactors of our race.

In 1877 Prof. J. S. Bean is in the President's chair. Having been principal of one of our largest public schools, he came with an experience that was of immense value to the workings of the University, which might have been a blessing had the means been forthcoming. But having to struggle against poverty—a foe to be dreaded—though the President called forth his greatest efforts, the department succumbed. Another honor belongs to President Bean, that of signing the diplomas of the first class from the University in 1878, of whom I shall presently speak. In 1879 Prof. I. N. Fallor was chosen President, a man of versatile genius and of meek disposition. He needs no monument. His work is of a telling kind. Not given to an over abundance of speech, but specially adapted to continuous work, he has won the hearts of all students and parents by his unfailing friendship, active mind, and the steady aim he had in view of giving to the University a well developed and systematized course; and I have it upon good authority that the New Orleans University is one of the best, if not the best graded university in our whole work. To him belongs the honor of graduating two classes from the University, and in the after years of maturity and growth this whole people will rise up and pronounce his name blessed.

And now a closing word with reference to the graduates. The first class was composed of one lady and three gentlemen, all of the regular classical course. You are familiar with them and well acquainted with the history of each, so that a bare mention will be sufficient. The lady became a teacher in the University; one of the gentlemen became Professor of Mathematics in Leland University, and he is now in Chicago expecting to graduate in theology next year; another gentleman became Professor of Latin and Greek in the University, and filled the chair with honor, after having been principal of a large school in Mississippi; the other gentleman became Professor of Mathematics, afterwards Professor of Languages, History and Mathematics in the Central Tennessee College, situated in Nashville, Tenn. The second class has a record as worthy. The lady became a teacher in the University and is still holding her position with credit, and filling her mission womanly; one of the gentlemen became Professor in the La Teche Seminary; another principal of a large school in Mississippi; another has been reading law. The last class is "fresh from the vine" and we look forward to a life of usefulness for each one. And thus the good work under these wise master builders has gone on and is becoming a power more and more in all these Southern lands. The seeds have been planted and are germinating; rich and abundant will the harvest be, if true to his calling, true to his God, true to himself and true to his race, each shall labor earnestly and work out for himself and people the great destiny God has in store for them.

"Look not mournfully into the past. It comes not back again. Wisely improve the present—it is thine. Go forth to meet the shadowy future without fear and with a manly heart." And yet the work cannot be perfected here. Only in the great hereafter can the soul, freed from all entanglements and relieved of the prejudices that so constitute a part of our being, and from the weariness of the flesh consequent upon exertion, with eternal youth as its inheritance, and infinite capacity as its endowment, in the presence of the Father of light and wisdom, follow out to a clear and complete solution of all those problems bearing upon the unconscious development of mind, the intricate make-up of the physique which so try, and baffle and perplex human ingenuity and skill here.

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

Letter from Arkansas.

MR. EDITOR:—I suppose that some of your readers would like to hear from Arkansas Methodism, and know how our church work is getting along.

I closed up my first round on the Hot Springs District the last Sunday in May. The District consists of 21 appointments. I only received 19 from the hands of the bishop, but I have organized two other appointment since conference adjourned. We, like all our brethren in the South, I suppose, have had our disadvantages to contend with. When our Annual Conference adjourned on the 13th of February last, the whole country was overflowed with water.

But the brethren that attended the conference started that night to their fields of labor. Some of them had to wade and swim through water for hundreds of yards, in order to get to their works. Out of the 17 preachers appointed to work on my district, only one failed to get to his work, and that was in consequence of the high water. I had two of the 19 appointments left to be supplied. I have succeeded in supplying one of them. I had quite a hard time in supplying the work on account of disadvantages that we more or less have encounter with. I had to make several changes among my preachers.

I changed Bro. A. J. Phillips from Fayetteville back to Jacksonport, and Bro. U. S. Kitchen from Lewisville back to Fayetteville.

And in order to supply the place where the brethren failed to get to, I had to let one preacher have charge of two charges.

Shortly after conference, Bro. W. J. Pernell, who was appointed to the Millwood Circuit, quit his work and joined the Freewill Baptist Church. I don't know just why he left us, unless he saw Bro. A. E. P. Albert's recommendation of my box of mustard that Bishop Peck advised me to use, when it was said by some of the conference brethren, that Bro. Pernell looked as if he was asleep and did not think he would do much good.

So his leaving caused me to have his place to supply. I started on Friday after our conference adjourned to Van Buren, to hold their first quarterly meeting on the 18th of February. I found the pastor, who had failed to get to the Annual conference, and his whole church membership in a cold and indifferent state. I met their love feast meeting that night. The pastor and about a dozen of his members were present to testify for Christ.

We held the quarterly conference from then on Saturday night. On Sunday morning we commenced war against the kingdom of darkness."

We preached and toiled hard for a week and a half, before we could see that we were doing any good. But the Babylonish garment and golden wedge were brought in and turned over to their proper owners on Wednesday night of the second week. And then Zion began to travel, and brought home to the church quite a large number.

I stayed with our people there nearly three weeks. Owing to the small pox at Fayetteville then, I did not get there. But Bro. Kitchens, the pastor of our work there, is hard at work. He has held some protracted meetings, and had several conversions and accessions to the church. He is building a new church house at Fayetteville.

The Conway Circuit is in good condition, spiritually. We have had some few accessions to the church on this charge. Morrilton is one of the charges organized since conference. This work has as good a future prospect as any work on the district. We have about fifty members on the circuit.

Bro. D. P. Cleaveland has charge of this work. Our Argenta Circuit is in fine fix. Though the pastor of this work is a very young man, he is moving things along nicely. He contemplates trying to build three churches on the work this year. The Little Rock Circuit is progressing finely under the pastorate of J. P Mack There have been several accessions to the church on this work. Sweet Home work is in excellent condition. Bro. W. R. R. Duncan, who has charge of this work, is an active young man. He has held several revivals on his circuit, and has had quite a large number of conversions and accessions to the church.

Bro. Duncan is making the Baptist and African Methodist Churches tremble.

Jacksonport Station.—This charge has passed through a glorious revival this year. We protracted meeting in connection with first quarterly meeting, which resulted in the conversion of 47 souls and 57 accessions to the church. The balance of the work on the district is making fine progress.

We have had about 125 conversions and 300 accessions to the church during the first quarter.

The progress that has been achieved has been by fighting without and fear within. Some of the brethren, if not all of them, have had to suffer wonderfully. But thank God they all have stood to their places.

I have never seen a better prospect for our church than there is now. The preachers of the other churches have had to leave their work and take refuge in the clifted side of some man's field to get bread to eat.

G. W. SAMS,
Van Buren, Ark., June 21st, 1882.

Methodism in Salt Lake.

In about two weeks the Utah Mission Conference of the M. E. Church is to convene in this city. Throughout the Territory, outside of this city, the workers have been faithful and laborious. The work has been conducted in harmony and to effect.

In this city, the church has made substantial advancement, and will present a report that is encouraging. Though the church membership has sustained a loss of nineteen by death, removals and other causes, it will report a handsome increase. Never in the history of the church have the regular social means of grace been better sustained, more largely attended, or productive of more fruit in the conversion of souls. It has been a year of improvement in the church property. The audience room has been much improved, and the prayer room has been much beautified. The congregations at the regular preaching services have averaged as large an attendance as the church has known in its history and compares favorably with other churches. The Sunday-school has had a year of unsurpassed pleasantness and is in a most efficient condition. The benevolent collections have reached a higher point than they have ever reached before. The local finances of the church have been freed from a number of embarrassments that have crippled them for a long time. The pastor, Rev. L Rudisill has reason for encouragement and stands increasingly well as a man and as a minister with all classes of our citizens.

The seminary closed up its year very pleasantly under the charge of Prof. Lincoln. The closing exercises were held in the Walker Opera House, were largely attended and reflected great credit on the pupils, as well as on his competent assistants, Mrs. Lincoln and Miss Mary Wheelock.

G. M. PIERCE,
Salt Lake City, Utah, June 21, 1882.

The President nominated John Davis, of the District of Columbia, to be First Assistant Secretary of State, vice J. C. Bancroft Davis, resigned; Col. Chas. H. Crane, Assistant Surgeon General, to be Surgeon General, with the rank of Brigadier General; Jas. Aikon, of Georgia, to be United States District Judge for the Northern District of Georgia; Eugene Schuyler, of New York, to be Minister resident and Consul General to Roumania, Servia and Greece; John Worthington, of New York, to be United States Consul at Malta; Paul L. Ravesies, of Alabama, to be United States Consul at Tuxpan; Com. A. K. Hughes to be Rear Admiral; Capt. Wm. K. Mayo, to be Commodore.

Bible Work in Texas, for the Year Ending March 31, '82.

The constant enlargement of our work calls for thanksgiving to God, who has opened the way for so wide a circulation of his word in this State. The demand has never been so great as during the last year. The cry for the "bread of life" has come to us from the cities, from the broad prairies, from the papal Mexican, and from the untutored Indian. We have endeavored to meet these calls as best we could with the means at our disposal.

Three principal methods have been employed for seeking out and supplying the destitute:

Distribution by pastors continues to be an important branch of our work. Thirty-one ministers received over 4,500 Bibles and Testaments, of the value of $1,241 80, for sale and gratuitous distribution in their respective fields of labor. Twenty-three mission churches received gifts of pulpit Bibles and many Sunday-schools were supplied with the Scriptures.

Auxiliary Societies.—There are 113 on the list. Two new ones were organized and anniversaries held by sixty-two during the year. While these Bible meetings are improving in character and in attendance, yet it is to be regretted that there is so little interest taken in them. The auxiliary society is a centre of religious power and Christian Union, wherever maintained.

We are unable to give the volumes distributed from the depositories. The exhibit below shows the circulation by canvassers only. Many auxiliaries that were burdened with debt have been relieved by the timely aid of the Parent Society. Burham, Mansard County, and San Antonio auxiliaries employed canvassers for a short time.

Colporteurs.—Twenty-two colporteurs were employed at the expense of the Parent Society during the year, of whom fifteen are now under commission. They have been indefatigable in their efforts to carry out the object of the Society, "holding forth the word of life."

The following is a synopsis of the year's work:

The canvass of the State has steadily progressed for four years. The canvass of ninety-eight counties has been completed, and forty-one in part. Families visited, 186,533; families found without the Bible, 32,118; destitute families supplied, 28,647; and destitute individuals in addition, 15,006. One hundred and thirty thousand copies of Scriptures in thirteen languages have been put in circulation by sale and gift.

A peculiarity of our work is a large foreign population, who require the Scriptures in more than thirteen languages. The churches furnish the gospel only in four of these languages to this waiting people.

The seamen from our coast have been supplied with the Bible. Prisons and hospitals have been included in our work. The freedmen, of whom there are 394,000 in this State, have received thoughtful attention.

Nineteen ecclesiastical bodies were visited. They very cordially commend the Bible cause, but church claims are so urgently pressed upon the people that this fundamental work is generally crowded out of the list of collections. My sincere thanks are due to my co-workers, to pastors and churches, to the press of the State, to hotel proprietors, to railroad officials, and to many others, for favors and kindnesses received in the supervision of this work.

Receipts from Texas, $4,569 37. Books sent to that Sate, 49,243 copies, of which 35,367 were donated.

The Sabbath.

When the true notions of Sabbath yields everything of a religious nature seems to glide along down with it. With laxity here there comes a curious mixture of laxity and levity that perverts and destroys all things of a real religious nature. Much is said by a certain class of writers and speakers at times in derision of old fashioned truths. But there can be no great religious triumphs without a going back to some of these old truths, and to that old fashioned but never obsolete book, the Bible, where God has said "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy, in it thou shalt not do any work, thou nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor the stranger that is is within thy gates." A law based on man's necessities as truly as on Divine authority. One of the great needs of Louisiana is a Sabbath—a Sabbath that runs along with the ideas of peace and plenty, of quiet, good order, good laws, good governors and wise legislators. The writer of this paper remembers well the Sabbath of his boyhood. It was in a land where no sneering, godless merchant took down the shutters and opened the door of his store upon the Sabbath, thus bidding defiance to the authority of Almighty God and inviting his curse upon him. It was no dull day. Toiling on the farm as well as in the factory during the week, "I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord." True there was a little tincture of Puritanism among the people of those times. Beer gardens, obscene literature, free-lovers who hate God and his marriage law; free thinkers who hiss at every principle of our holy religion, illiberal leagues that demand the abolition of all law, so that every man can be a law to himself, and do as he please, like moles and bats hid themselves away. But the Sabbath was always a delight, the most welcome day of the seven. It was the best day for the best people. Legislators had not made the command of God of none effect. Most men felt that they were required by Divine command to keep the day holy, and regarded it as a high moral duty imposed upon them by the will of their Creator. They felt the force of the command and example of God, and while they spent six days in earnest and hard toil, Sabbath was a day of relaxation, rest and religious worship. And good people were never so happy as when upon the Sabbath they gathered for the worship of God.

Temperance and Politics.

One of the most gratifying aspects of the Temperance question is the fact that political parties are forced to take sides upon the temperance issue. A number of things have led to this. The Church of God is to a greater extent than ever before waking to up the enormity of the great drink evil and begins to see, as she never has the responsibility resting upon the followers of Christ to labor for the extirpation of this evil, if for no other reason. She has found that intemperance is the greatest obstacle to the conversion of men to Almighty God. Individual ministers and churches all over the West, North and East have for the past forty years taken an active part against the drink system. But of much later date conferences, synods and general assemblies have taken the matter under serious consideration and advanced action has been taken. All the while whiskey has had general control in political matters, and the whiskey politicians have begged the temperance people not to bring so pure a cause into the dirty pools of politics. Seemingly no men in all the land have been more anxious to keep temperance and religion untarnished than the whiskey politicians. They have promised to consider the question in due time. They seemed to have no thought that times were in God's hands, and that He as truly ripens the times, as he does the corn and wheat fields. God ripens the times without consulting the political boss or political machine, and somehow political parties have been forced to take sides on this temperance question. It once seemed to us that, in view of the fact that this is a great social problem, affecting the interests of [illegible] as truly as Republicans, [illegible] the Democratic youth need [illegible] quite as much as Republican youth from the rum traffic, [illegible] will remove temptation from [illegible] the other; what will [illegible] help the other, and [illegible] need help. It was, [illegible] out of place to give the [illegible] any partisan [illegible] cause, which [illegible] ce, England or China, North or South New York or New Orleans, in a man with white skin and blue eyes or in a man with a black skin and black eyes, or "bronzed skin and almond shaped eyes," means animal enjoyment, debauchery, pauperism, crime and criminals. The temperance people of this land are awfully in earnest, they cannot stop to "chop logic and split hairs" over the past history of this or that party. They demand present action, and the party that is wise enough to meet this great issue takes a new lease of life and moves on to victory.

Fourth of July.

To every native born American the fourth of July is a wonderful day. A certain kind of oratory is always in demand. The old bald eagle is uniformly taken out of his cage and allowed to flap his wings and scream at the despots of the old world. There are certain things that ought to be done on every fourth of July. For, next to Christmas, this is a day of days in all the year. We remember boyhood and know that we had but little satisfaction without a "bang" and a "fizz." Many years have rolled over us since, and we write far away from home and the scenes of our childhood. But on this grand old fourth of July, old but just as young, fresh and vigorous as on the day the Declaration of Independence was signed, by men who "live in our memory still and in our love must live forever," we think something grand should be done. In the morning let the boys "bang" and "fizz." That will be grand for them. In the evening let there be a general convocation, read the Declaration of Independence, sing "America," "Star Spangled Banner," "Red, White and Blue." But be sure to have the band play "Yankee Doodle." This reference to other days wakens strange and mingled memories and emotions. The scenes familiar to boyhood are cherished with delight, but we would not recall them to live them over. The present is better. We celebrate this national birthday a united, quiet, peaceful and happy country. And we doubt if ever there was a stronger sentiment of patriotic gratitude that our forefathers declared their independence of Great Britain than now.

The second regular session of the General Assembly of Louisiana, adjourned sine die last Thursday, 6th inst. Notes from Wiley.

The Home Visitor of Marshall, Texas, supplies us with the following notes. The closing exercises of Wiley University were witnessed by a house packed almost beyond endurance. The annual sermon, by Rev. A. A. Johnson, on "Faith and Character," was able and practicable. The address by Rev. W. L. Molloy before the Haven Literary Society was good, The examinations were fair. The address of Prof. Webb was full of life and useful instruction. The exhibitions were entertaining and profitable. School closed the fifteenth of June. There has been in attendance during the year 282 students. The students generally are teaching through the summer vacation. Prof. Webb is enjoying vacation at Sherman, Texas.

Just before the close of school the students presented Mrs. I. R Cole, Professor in Latin, with a beautiful gold pin. Presentation speech was made by Prof. Webb, and was replied to by a few words of thanks and appreciation. She has gone North to spend summer vacation. Address Clarence, Iowa. She will return in good time for school.

The Board of trustees re-elected the present board of teachers for another year. Miss —— Vausiole, of Redwing, Minnesota, was elected teacher of music. Miss H. M Perkins was elected also as an additional member of the faculty; but it is not known that she can accept the place. She has been an earnest and faithful teacher in Wiley University, and her return would give general satisfaction. Prof. McCulloch was appointed Financial and Canvassing agent for the University.

The spirit of republicanism is marching on. There is movement on foot for the separation of Norway and Sweden, for the purpose of establishing the Republic of Norway.

Our German Work.

Before the Board of Missions, of the General Conference of the M. E. Church South, last May, Dr. Ahrens, of New Orleans, made some remarks which we quote:

The difficulties with which we are beset are numerous. It has been difficult sometimes to secure the right sort of preachers. Those educated in Europe, for some reason or other, associate our church with slavery. They appreciate not our situation, are not sympathy with us. The German secular press is obstructing our way. Your own papers, I am sorry to say, have of late years sadly degenerated, and cater far too much to the vulgar tastes of the scum and the off-scouring of society. But our German papers are tenfold worse.

The Lutherans have during the last two decades secured firm foothold, have organized thoroughly, and manifested much zeal. Their ministry is constantly increased by men educated at the German universities. These men bitterly oppose us. Their papers speak of us as fanatics and advocates of darkness.

Our affectionate brethren of the of the M. E. Church have much impeded our progress. Within the last fifteen years they have erected little houses of worship in the immediate neighborhood of our churches at every one of our mission fields. They start their missions with a few sore-heads of our own congregations, and even now, when we endeavor to administer discipline the supposed culprits finds a ready refuge with our brethren. On nearly all of our missions fields to this day two German missionaries are supported. One could do the work. Our churches are large enough for all. We occupied the field first. We will not yield. Besides, our German brethren of the M. E. Church in Texas and Louisiana have of late been organized into a seperate conference, being denominated The Southern German Conference. This has led many of our American brethren to be confused and deceived. They have extended aid and sympathy in the belief that the recipients were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. They have now eight German annual conferences, the least of which is larger than our only one. The German official paper has several thousand subscribers more than our great connectional organ at this place (Nashville)

While Bro. Ahrens appears to be a little ruffled by the progress of our German work, his testimony shows that it is effective. The "little houses of worship" which he, in a moment of forgetfulness, has so uncharitably designated as refuges for sore-heads, seem to have impelled him to cry out: "We occupied the field first. We will not yield." We trust a generous competition, and not a conflict, may exist; but rather suspect that in the exchange of "sore-heads" Bro. Ahrens has not been the gainer. May the Lord bless him!

The Report of the Board of Administrators of the Charity Hospital to the General Assembly of Louisiana, for the year 1881, is on our table, with compliments of Dr. Roaldes, House Surgeon. We regret to notice that a misunderstanding arose between the Board and the Sisters of Charity, on the attempt to introduce a school for skilled nurses in the hospital, and for that reason the plan was abandoned. It was construed as a movement which would ultimately result in dispensing with the services of the Sisters of Charity at the hospital, and reiterated disclaimers only engendered more bitter opposition. Since the revenues of the public treasury are devoted to the maintenance of the hospital, the Board should feel free to supply the growing demand for skilled nurses, and establish the training school. The interests of the good Catholic Sisters need not suffer, but the public welfare is of more importance than the exclusive control of any public charitable institution by any religious sect. The Board proposes to establish children's wards and increase the provision for colored people. An additional building is necessary, says Dr. Roaldes, and "a system of paid and responsible nurses is very much needed in the male wards: the establishing of such a corps would ensure much better attention to the patients than the present system of unpaid nurses." This is a practical argument for a school for nurses.

The reception of flags of various nations at the Upper Bethel, on the evening of July 31, was an unique and enjoyable occasion. Foreign consuls, in person and by deputy, placed their flags on the stand where Fred A. Johnson, Esq., and Col. Glenn officiated gracefully and eloquently. Rev. A. J. Witherspoon, chaplain, was reminded that a Witherspoon had signed the Declaration of Independance, and the audience thought it a happy point and gave it a round of applause. The "Star Spangled Banner" and "Dixie" songs, and cornet solos, by Prof. Hoch were interesting features. It was sometime on the 4th of July before the remnants of the ice cream and other refreshments were gathered up, but patriotism and the Bethel managers were abundantly satisfied.

Hon. Thomas H. Brents, delegate from Washington Territory, made a speech in Congress on the 28th, in favor of the admission of the State of Washington into the Union. Four years ago a constitution was adopted and admission asked for, and a bill was favorably reported by the committee on Territories; since then, because of political and other reasons, it has been impossible to take the bill from the calendar out of its regular order. Washington has an area of 66,880 square miles of land surface, rich timber and mineral lands, a mild and equable climate, and in 1880 a population of 75,116 was reported. The western terminus of the Northern Pacific Railroad, it has the finest harbors and the greatest fisheries on the Pacific coast, which ensures a rapid increase of population and commerce. Delegate Brents has made a careful presentation of the claims of Washington for admission, which should be convincing to all above partisan bias in the matter of creating new States. We thank him for a copy of his speech.

About the same time that Chinese merchants of San Francisco sent $300 to cyclone sufferers in Iowa, the Cabinet in Washington decided that Chinese laborers in Cuba could not pass through the territory of the United States on their way to their native country. They will go via London and the Suez Canal in British vessels. Many people suppose that the use of millions of dollars of public money in the construction of the great Pacific railroad was for the purpose of securing to this country the Eastern trade and traffic, but this is probably a mistaken view of it. There is little room to doubt, as shown by the temper of Congress, that it was simply to connect the Fenians of New York with Dennis Kearney's hoodlums in San Francisco. Were this a small kingdom like Corea we should expect China and other civilized nations to send an armed fleet to open it up to the commerce of the world.

From the Churches.

Houma is a pleasant inland city—a place to which we always love to go. We are sure of a hearty welcome, and whether with the pastor or postmaster, or some other member of the church and congregation, we always have a pleasant home. The ride from Houma to Live Oak, a distance of twenty miles, was made in a hurry. Bro. Armston was my companion, and the driver, and proved himself a man of great endurance, patience and perseverance. His untiring effort and numerous devices to encourage our noble steed along were marvelous.

There is no use in covering the truth. The people every where need information, but to know the pleasures of this trip one must pass over the road themselves. We made the trip under the most favorable circumstances, and are alive, well and happy and that is something. Our home at Live Oak was with Bro. Jas. Johnson, a thorough Christian gentleman who seems not only willing to spend, but to be spent for the cause of God. Our people here are erecting a nice church 24x40 and are having some talk as to how it shall be done. Horace Greeley, when discussing the question as how to resume specie payment, said: "The way to resume specie payment is to resume."

So we say to our people at Live Oak, the way to erect the church, is to erect it. There is nothing in the wide world that need hinder. The seasons may come and go as of old; the heavens are sometimes dark and sometimes bright, and we are glad to-day and sad to-morrow. But above all God dwells in his own glory, and if he lives in the hearts of the people, nothing need hinder them from moving on. The people do not care for little distinctions between tweedle-dee and tweedle-dum, they want the church. And there are not adjectives enough either in Webster's or Worcester's dictionaries to describe the good that will come to them in the completion of the church. We hope soon to be able to publish the good news that the people at Live Oak, under the lead of Bro. Armston and the blessings of God, have their church ready for dedication. The outlook here is encouraging. Bro. Armstron is doing a good work and is much respected by the people. Hard work is the key note of success. "Whatsoever thy hands find to do, do with thy might." This is precept. "I must work the work of him that sent me while it is day." This is the example. A society to encourage hard work is one of the needs of the times. My trip to Live Oak was a pleasant one. I did get a little weary, but as ample compensation had a pleasant home, the privilege of holding a harmonious quarterly conference, of addressing the children of the Sunday-school, preaching, administering the Lord's supper, and of more than doubling the list of subscribers to the SOUTHWESTERN.

Few things are more important to the Christian minister than a thorough acquaintance with human nature. He must know their prejudices, whims and weaknesses, as well as their strong points. No books, nor schools, can take the place of this; with it, he will have more power to scatter than to gather. At Morgan City we found Bro. Claiborne "holding the fort." The flood had scattered many of our people, and destroyed no small amount of property. But most of the families had returned, and our church affairs were assuming a cheerful aspect. The outlook is full of promise. The personage will soon be erected.

It is too late to talk about the bliss of ignorance, and the folly of wisdom. The one great need of the people in Louisiana is information as to what is transpiring in the church and State. It is the want of this that makes so many people the toy of the devil and the playthings of the unscrupulous politician. Our only hope for the future is in the education of our people.

July 4th and 5th we spent at Centerville; held quarterly conference, preached twice, baptized four, administered the Lord's supper and called upon a number of our people. At no point on the district was the flood more destructive than here. Most of our people were driven from their homes, some lost all they had and were left in a state of destitution. But in the midst of this distress and poverty the church is moving on grandly. The Sunday-school has 102 scholars enrolled, with an average attendence of over 75. At no point outside of New Orleans have we met so large, or a more attentive congregation. The young people deserve special commendation. Great credit is due Bro. Richardson for his untiring devotion and patient labor, and no one in Centerville is happier than he because of the prosperity of the church. We found a pleasant home with Bro. Ballensaw's family, where in the midst of work we had two day's of rest.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Rev. Joseph Cook delivered a lecture in May in Tokio under the auspices of the Japanese Young Men's Christian Association.

—The octogenarian mother of the late Bayard Taylor received the first prize of $200 for cocoons at the recent silk exhibition in Philadelphia.

—Rev. John D. Hammond, of Nevada Conference, and member of the Book Committee, has received from Union College the degree of Doctor of Divinity.

—Prof. William Smith, President of the Xenia Female College since 1858, retired from the college at the close of the present summer Normal.

—Rev. W. A. Allen, of the Austin Conference, has resigned the pastorate of our church at Fort Worth, and will remove to Clarendon, hoping his family will be benefited.

—Rev. A. H. Reat, pastor of Tabernacle church, Dallas, has retired, because of poor health, and will be succeeded by Rev. S. A. Thompson, of Galion, Ohio, July 22.

—Rev. J. Campbell, presiding elder of the Gulf District Mississippi Conference, called last Tuesday. Sickness in his family has interfered somewhat with his supervision of work, but he is now able to do justice to his various charges. The outlook is hopeful at nearly all of them.

—Rev. W. Ripetoe, Presiding Elder of Palestine District, has had poor health this spring and summer; so much as to be hardly able to attend to the duties of the district. We believe, however, that he is improving. We trust he will be thoroughly restored to health. The Church can ill spare so earnest, faithful, and effective a laborer from the itinerant field.—Home Visitor.

—The July number of the Texas Methodist Advocate contains the the obituary of Harriet Daugherty Collins, daughter of Rev. M. A. Daugherty, presiding elder Austin district, Austin conference, who died in Denison, June 16. She was an active, Christian woman, deeply interested in educational and temperance work. Her influence and deeds will be long remembered.

—Jefferson Davis and wife, with a party of friends, visited their old home, Brierfield plantation, near Vicksburg. They were honored in every possible way by the colored people of Davis Bend. The Brierfield Cornet Band, composed of colored men, tendered a serenade at the residence. Mr. Davis in a little speech, highly complimented the musicians, and dwelt on the hearty reception received and the kindly relations existing between the races. On the return of the party to New Orleans, Mr. Davis purchased splendid uniforms for the band.

—Miss Cushman, a very faithful missionary of our Woman's Foreign Missionary Society at Peking, writes: "If I had a thousand years, it would be a pleasure to devote them to such a work as this." There is the right ring in these words. A Missionary with a genuine enthusiasm for his work is far more likely to accomplish something than one who is destitute of it. Her father, the Rev. L. P. Cushman, has been doing good work among the colored people in Texas, and is now Editor of the SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE at New Orleans. Which has the more difficult field of labor is a question not easily solved; nor is it easy to say on which field the grandest results are to be reached in the near future. Certain is it that in either is work enough to "fill an angel's hands."—N. Y. Advocate.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

W. M. Brown, Sunday-school Superintendent, Washington: "A few weeks ago our Sunday-school gave an exhibition. It was a perfect success, and reflected much credit upon all who participated. The church was crowded with an appreciative audience; a large sprinkling of whom were white. The exhibition was praised on all sides."

TEXAS.

W. H. Moseby, Seguin: "Elder Mack Henson was with us on his second round. We took up the cause of the Conference Seminary. Collection for elder $6 05; for pastor during the quarter $12. Times have been hard, but all looks well for a grand harvest."

G. Norman, Austin: "My four appointments are in good condition, Have had many conversions and are doing well spiritually, but not financially. Have received for support this year $74 30. Crops are good and we shall do better in the fall. Elder Madison visited us. We are going ahead with our new church."

The following notes of Austin District, Austin Conference, by M. A. Daugherty, P. E., we find in the Fort Worth Advocate:

The third quarterly meeting at San Antonio, June 4th, was most cheering. Rev. R. H. Brady, of Lansing, Mich., the new pastor, is an able, earnest preacher, and full of work and the spirit of the Master, and is heartily received.

San Antonio is very flourishing, buildings erecting in every quarter; strangers flocking thither, and many who are, or ought to be in sympathy with our cause furnish abundant material for our growth and a wide field of usefulness. The people are planning for a good time at Conference and will welcome it heartily.

Bishop Warren has transferred Bro. Miller to St. Louis Conference.

Rev. W. S. Falkenburg has been appointed to Galveston and will come about July 10th. We feel very hopeful that our cause will be redeemed and firmly established.

The contract for building Central Church at Austin has been let, work begun and will not stop unless for lack of material, until completed for use. Essential attractions internally will make it one of the most attractive and convenient church establishments in our connection, while externally it will have few equals in the State, and in beauty of location, fronting on the grounds of the capitol and in the most conspicious position, it is without a rival.

The M. E. Church has organized a society in Marshall, under the direction of Rev. A. A. Johnson, Presiding Elder Austin Conference. Rev. G. M. Knapp, from Delaware, Ohio, has been appointed pastor. He has begun his work with good prospect of success. At present they occupy the Firemen's Hall as a place of worship.—Home Visitor.

MISSISSIPPI.

At ExPrairie children's day was observed. The church was decorated, and the pastor, M. Adams, addressed the Sunday-school. Collection $2. The occasion was a revival of interest in the school by church members. Improvements are being made in all the houses of worship on the circuit.

V. N. Nelson, Yazoo City: "Rev. B. F. Penny, pastor in charge of the M. E. Church at this place, organized a home Missionary society on the 15th of May, with 42 members, and it has been growing rapidly ever since. Its membership at this time is 123. This society is mostly composed of children. The purpose of this organization is to raise money to complete the brick church, and also to elevate the young race. They meet once in every month and pay ten cents into the treasury. After which certain ones are called on for exercises such as declamations, essays, recitations and singing. This society held a meeting on the 8th of June and we had a good time indeed. A very appropriate address was delivered by Hon. W. H. Foote. Then the tables was spread for supper, I will not mention what we had to eat; it will take up too much room, but you may be sure that we had everything that was nice. This society is in a flourishing condition. It has $40 in the treasury. Any church is fortunate to secure the services of Rev. B. F. Penny.

H. Cawthorn, Enterprise: "My work is in a very good condition I have received six members by letter, twenty-five members in full connection and two converts. The Sunday-schools are doing well, Elder J. W. Dunn was with us the 17th and 18th, and preached a good sermon. The Elder's collection was $20. We are protracting our meeting from the quarter, and the altar is crowded with mourners every night, so pray that the good Lord may crown our labor."

KENTUCKY.

Rev. A. W. White, of Bowling Green, reports his charge as prospering. A part of the indebtedness has been paid, and the church has been thoroughly repaired.

From Our Mission Rooms.

THE LUCKNOW SUNDAY-SCHOOL BANNERS.—No merchant prince could bring treasures from all "the wealth of Inde,"—no costly silks or dazzling gems, that could begin to equal in value or in cost these banners which Mr. Craven has brought here from his spiritual campaigning field in India. The banners, like the stained and tattered flags borne in procession by the divisions of the Grand Army on Decoration Day, show tokens of age and service. They are historic trophies indeed. They date, some of them from the origin of our extended Sunday-school work in Lucknow, and represent the first effort made in the history of mission work in India to gather the Hindu and Mohammedan children into the Sunday-school. This was the new scheme to carry the Sunday-school methods beyond the circle of nominally Christian children. The enterprise proved a marvelous success, and is developing grand results at our mission. Welcome to the banners then, and may God's blessing carry them yet through many a victory! They have different devices, as the rising sun, the open Bible, the cross and crown, etc; and also different inscriptions, as Khudu Muhabbat hai, "God is love;" Lo dekh ki roshni ati, "Behold, the light is breaking;" Masih ki jai, "Victory to Christ." These banners will first be displayed at Chautauqua, where will gather a goodly number of the Christian host, and the voices of the captains will be heard with cheering notes of victory [illegible], and cheering praises of [illegible] for God's truth yet to come. There will be a good representation of the missionary force on that occasion.

[illegible] CHINESE SCHOOL.—The California Christian Advocate [illegible] note of the twelfth anniversary of this school in San Francisco, held June 2 in the Methodist Mission-house. A good number of Chinese and Japanese were present. Forty-three pupils took part in the exercises. The Japanese sang with great spirit "Bringing in the sheaves." The Chinese [illegible] scholars exhibited [illegible] which is a credit [illegible] able teachers, Miss [illegible], Miss Gibson, and Mrs. [illegible]. Dr. Maclay was present, and addressed the school. The school will open again Monday, July 3.

GERMANY MISSION.—The oppressive limitations of religious liberty which obtain in some parts of Germany, and hamper the work of our Church, are illustrated by recent occurrences in our Mission in Saxony. It is only at Zwickau that our society has obtained permission to assemble for public worship, while in six surrounding places where we have adherents this is not allowed. There can be no preaching in such places, no singing and praying; only lectures are permitted. The monopoly of divine service is enjoyed by the Catholics, Lutherans, and Jews. Not long ago, one of our preachers, Rev. R. Barkhardt, was sent to [illegible]. Though hunted by the [illegible] and cited more than a [illegible] times before the magistrate, he enjoyed success in his [illegible] a revival, and several [illegible] declared their intention [illegible] from the establishment, and petitioned for leave [illegible] and the right to hold [illegible] their brethren. They were however [illegible] the clergy, and the following [illegible] to submit [illegible] Ministerium, or [illegible] Worship. It [illegible] of the six [illegible] to "join [illegible] and gives permission [illegible] of this [illegible] service in those places." So the sacrament must be administered without any singing or vocal prayer.

We are informed by our pastor in Berlin, Rev. C. Weiss, that Rev. Messrs. Dietrich and Burkhardt went before the king with this case, the third week in May, were kindly received and obtained the royal promise that the affair should be investigated. We hope to receive news of action taken that will be a relief to our work in Saxony and a precedent favorable to religious progress throughout Germany.

MISSION SEMINARY BUILDING AT YOKAHAMA, JAPAN.—The transfer of the academical and theological departments of our Mission Training School to Tokio, in furtherance of the new movement for a new Methodist Mission University at the capital of Japan, has been followed by the sale of our seminary building in Yokahama to the W. F. M. S. The New England branch of this society have agreed to take the building with one half the lot for $3,500. The adjacent dormitory is to be taken down and erected at Tokio.

Letter from Macon.

MACON, MISS, June 5, 1882.

MR. EDITOR: Since the 22d day of April last, we have been working strenuously to furnish our church with new benches, which work we have accomplished at a cost of $232 50. This sum of money we raised by subscription as shown below. In addition to this, we have improved our personage, at an expense of $33 95 by painting, white-washing, fencing, etc., making in all $265 45 spent in improving our church property. As minister of this people, I think they have done well, and for their encouragement ask that you give this space in your columns.

The Brightest Intellects Suffer Most.

Young men who have lead a life of excess and dissipation, reform! Give tone to the stomach, regulate the liver and bowels, strengthen the urinary organs, relieve those dull pains in the limbs, rid yourself of that feeling of nausea, billiousness, languor and nervous debility; give tone and strength to each organic function by using Browns Iron Bitters; then will you experience a genial warmth and awakening life in place of that dead feeling of decay; and dyspepsia, milky urine, etc., no longer undermine your constitution. Delay is dangerous.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

THIRD QUARTER. Lesson iii. July 16th.
SUFFERING AND SERVICE. (Mark x. 32—45.)

The incident of the rich young man occurred as they were starting. Jesus went at the head of the company on the way to Jerusalem, where he was to suffer. It seemed incredible to the disciples that Jesus should venture into Jerusalem under the circumstances, the city being full of his enemies. There seemed also something striking in the manner with which he pressed forward which astonished them. The language seems to indicate that many of them lingered in indecision, while a few plucked up courage to follow him. He pauses, seeing the state of things among his followers, and collects the twelve, those who had come forward and those who remained behind, and explains further that he shall be delivered up to the chief priests. As the subject now discussed indicated the near approach of the Messianic kingdom, James and John considered it an opportune moment to make their ambitious request, not understanding the true nature of that kingdom, but looking for an earthly supremacy. There was to be no such splendor as they imagined. Instead, he was to be crucified. They asked to be near him in glory, but in the divine order the gift of such things as they asked belong not to Jesus, but to the Father, who would bestow according to his will. Man is held by the law he has violated. The giving up by Christ of himself to meet the demands of the law acts as a solvent of man's obligations to it on proper conditions. The soul of man is released and becomes rightfully the subject of him who released him. There is nothing in the present passage more nearly defining the sense of this term ransom.

A Drop of Joy in Every Word.

Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.: Three months ago I was broken out with large ulcers and sores on my body, limbs and face. I procured your "Golden Medical Discovery" and "Purgative Pellets" and have taken six bottles, and to-day I am in good health, all those ugly ulcers having healed and left my skin in a natural, healthy condition. I thought at one time that I could not be cured. Although I can but poorly express my gratitude to you, yet there is a drop of joy in every word I write. Yours truly, JAS. O. BELLIS, Flemington, N. NEW BOOKS.

AT THE THRESHOLD. Familiar Talks with Young Christians concerning Doctrine and Duty. By Ross C. Houghton, D. D. Cincinnati: Walden & Stowe. Price 60c.

A good book, in which is reviewed, in short and entertaining chapters, the duties of the religious life. Its chapters on reading, social life and amusements and systematic benevolence are full of profitable suggestions and advice for young people.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

The Missionary Review for July-August has Evangelizing the World in 20 years, Robert Arthington and the World's Evangelization, Guatemala as a Mission Field, a Review of Missions 1880–1881, etc. There is also a vindication of Rev. D. McDonald, by the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, who gave him a full acquittal of the charge which had led to his recall from the missionary field.

The Louisiana Journal of Education for July with papers and essays from correspondents, shows that it is gaining in general appreciation. An article on colored schools deserves special notice. It is charged that owing to a migratory disposition, and a thirst for novelty, private schools are springing up in New Orleans, and these afford a refuge from good discipline in the public schools. It is asserted that "the public school houses for colored children are ample for the instruction of a larger number than attend, the teachers are competent and faithful, and there is an earnest desire on the part of the Directory to promote the true interests of the colored people;" also that "some of the parents are gratified at the idea of being able to send their children to pay schools." Since reading this article in the Journal, we have made some inquiries. Complaints are made that incompetent or unsympathetic teachers placed over colored children has led to imperfect discipline and inferior progress in the branches taught, compared with private schools. Exceptions to this rule are mentioned, of public schools fully attended, well disciplined, and heartily approved by the colored people. The people are enthusiastic for education, and wish to put their children in the way of the best instruction their means can afford. It is not a thirst for novelty that causes the people to patronize the pay schools, and we suggest to the editors of the Journal, a further inquiry on the subject, that the real causes of the disaffection may be brought to general notice.

Mr. E. V. Smalley, now traveling through Dakota and beyond the line of finished railway, is engaged in spying out the land in the interest of the readers of the Century Magazine. He is writing a series of papers on "The New Northwest," the first of which, describing the Dakota wheat region, the "Bad Lands," and the Yellowstone country, will appear in the midsummer holiday (August) Century. When completed, the series will form a journal of consecutive travel from Fargo to the cascades of the Columbia.

That Brilliant Paper.

BY J. H. VINCENT.

Is there a primary class pupil in our Methodism who does not regularly receive the exquisite Tile Lesson Page, beginning the July Picture Lesson Paper? It is something new, something beautiful, something truly artistic.

Will our primary teachers and superintendents see to it that our Methodist Episcopal infant scholars get a weekly copy of the Picture Lesson Paper, with its new tile lessons.

I do not hesitate to declare that there is nothing to compare with it for beauty, originality or practical value to infant scholars, on either side of the Atlantic.

Not to put a copy into the hand of every little Methodist pupil is to do them a wrong.

"It gives me great pleasure to certify the satisfaction which has resulted from the use of Mr. Frink's system of lighting in Plymouth Church. First our Sabbath-school room was lighted. After a year or two of trial it was introduced into our lecture room. So greatly were all pleased that the Trustees have now introduced it into the large Audience Room, and I should be very unwilling now to go back to the old system of lighting, or to dispense with this one of Mr. Frink's."—Rev. TARRANT'S SELTZER APERIENT "Throw Physic to the Dogs," says Macbeth. Much of it might be disposed of with advantage to mankind, but it would be hard upon the dogs. The "sweet oblivious antidote," which Macbeth asked for in vain, is however vouchsafed to the dyspeptic and bilious in TARRANT'S SELTZER APERIENT. It regulates, purifies and invigorates the system; is a positive specific for indigestion and constipation; promotes perspiration and reduces fever.

EARS FOR THE MILLION!
Foo Choo's Balsam of Shark's Oil
Positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness Known.
This Oil is abstracted from peculiar species of small White Shark, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as Carcharodon Rondeletii. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist Priest about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal that for over 300 years no Deafness has existed among the Chinese People. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1 per bottle.

HEAR WHAT THE DEAF SAY!
It has performed a miracle in my case.
I have no unearthly noises in my head and hear much better.
I have been greatly benefited.
My deafness helped a great deal—think another bottle will cure me.
"Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, as the writer can personally testify, both from experience and observation. Write at once to Haylock & Jenney, 7 Dey Street, New York, enclosing $1, and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. THE BOY THAT LAUGHS.

I know a funny little boy—
The happiest ever born;
His face is like a beam of joy,
Although his clothes are torn.

I saw him tumble on his nose,
And waited for a groan;
But how he laughed! Do you suppose
He struck his funny bone?

There's sunshine in each word he speaks;
His laugh is something grand;
Its ripples overrun his cheeks,
Like waves on snowy sand.

He laughs the moment he awakes,
And till the day is done,
The school-room for a joke he takes—
His lessons are but fun.

No matter how the day may go,
You cannot make him cry;
He's worth a dozen boys I know,
Who pout and mope and sigh.

The King's Four Questions.

There was once, you know, a king of Castile, called Don Alonso, the learned; and truly I think he was more learned than wise, for he had the presumption to say that if his counsel had been taken at the creation of the world he could have arranged things much more conveniently than we find them; and the ancient writings tell us that God punished him for his impiety with many and grievous afflictions in his old age. Well, Don Alonso was pricking on towards Aranda, at the head of a troop of lancers, when darkness overtook him near the convent of San Millan De Cogolla. Of course it was resolved, as of common accord, to demand the hospitality of the good fathers of San Millan, and the party rode up to the gates, nothing doubting that they should be cordially received, and should mend their repast by [illegible] a few of the wine-skins of the monastery. But when they [illegible] at the gate and asked for [illegible] the porter surlily bade [illegible] be gone, supposing, or pre[illegible] to suppose, that they were [illegible] of mountain outlaws come [illegible] the convent; and it was [illegible] time before Don Alonso's peo[illegible] bring the friars to their [illegible] pressure admission with[illegible]; not even then until [illegible] had begun to devise [illegible] entering by force. The [illegible] this time, had fallen into [illegible] passion which it re[illegible] the obsequiousness of [illegible] and all the hospitable [illegible] of his monks, to pacify [illegible] in discussing the [illegible] and larder Don [illegible] to be somewhat molli[illegible] ended with imposing [illegible] such terms as none [illegible] book-worm and star gazer [illegible] would have imagined. [illegible] Cayetano," said he, [illegible] your people have done [illegible] I might visit upon you [illegible]; but I feel inclined to [illegible] humble acknowledg[illegible] overlook your offence; [illegible] so provided you will [illegible] on the morrow before [illegible] answer me four ques[illegible] shall tell me how much [illegible] weighs; how many casks [illegible] to hold the sea; how [illegible] King of Castile is worth; [illegible] I am thinking of at the [illegible] beside you and your [illegible] fail to answer me cor[illegible] of these questions."

[illegible] the old king retired to [illegible] the monks sorely puz[illegible] questions which he had [illegible] meditation; for they [illegible] more than wit. [illegible] in vain upon the [illegible] and morning found [illegible] to solve the [illegible] as when they [illegible]. When hon[illegible] of the convent, [illegible] to leave them [illegible] furnish forth the [illegible] breakfast he found [illegible] and dis[illegible] undertook [illegible] questions if [illegible] to wear the [illegible] Father Cayet[illegible] to [illegible] at length [illegible] for a [illegible] that, if [illegible] king, it [illegible] of [illegible] to venture [illegible] by [illegible] the garb [illegible] himself [illegible] " how [illegible] miller, [illegible] quire to hold the sea?"

"Only one, to be sure," said Jose, "provided it be large enough!"

It was impossible to dispute this; so the king had no alternative for it but to put his third question:—

"How much am I worth?"

"How much is the king of Castile worth?" said the miller. "Why, twenty-nine pieces of silver!"

"Only twenty-nine pieces of silver!" cried the king, in a rage.

"Yes said the miller, "for our Saviour was rated and sold for thirty, and I put you but one piece below our Saviour!"

At this palpable evasion of his inquiry the king began to laugh, and could do no less than put his last question:—

"What am I thinking of at this moment?"

Hitherto Jose had received and answered the questions of the king with an air of mock dignity verging into broad humor; but he saw that the crisis was now at hand, and that it behoved him to take heed what he did, and it was in all humility that he replied:

"Senor, you are thinking I am the Abbot Cayetano."

"To be sure!" said the king. "And who else should you be? And, seeing you have answered my four questions, I suppose I must be as good as my word, and suffer you to go scot free."

At this Jose fell on his knees at the feet of the king, and confessed the trick which the lurdan monks had fallen upon to escape from their embarrassment; and, the king being highly amused by the whole affair, very freely pardoned the imposition, and took the witty miller into service; and Jose played his part so well in those times, when blows were the current coin of all Castile, that, some thirty or forty years afterwards, the house of San Millan, in consideration of a welcome addition to their glebe and vineyard, performed a bounteous allowance of masses for the spiritual repose of Don Jose de la Molina.

At the Presiding Elders' Convention, Bishop Merrill, in an address as president, said the utility of the office is scarcely appreciated. There might sometimes be localities where the churches could get along pretty well without them; but, as a general thing, the churches without presiding elders would be like an army of 50,000 men with a number of colonels but no subordinate officers. While he did not concede the right of the people to designate who should preach to them, he recognized the fact that their feelings and preferences should be consulted as far as possible.

From T. S. Easton, M. D., New Orleans.

I have given Colden's Liebig's Liquid Extract of Beef and Tonic Invigorator a thorough trial in several chronic cases, in females, debility and weakness, and find it more efficient, and much more acceptable to the stomach than any other preparation I have ever used. If you want to be a real good Christian you must practice on Monday one or two of the things that you say Amen to on Sunday. The difficulty with many church members is that they get wound up at the prayer-meeting, but run down as rapidly as a watch with a broken mainspring the moment they touch the solid business of life.—Mississippi Methodist.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA

J. S. Patterson, Bastrop: "My work has been pushed forward as fast as the newness of myself among the people would admit. I have already had to undergo some of that calumnious treatment which most every minister must undergo in endeavoring to push forward what he considers to be for the best interest of the people. The burden is heavy just now. Your prayers I invoke. The 11th inst., Bro. Geo. Washington was up, and preached a sermon on Baptism — a subject very timely with me just now, because the Baptists are making a fight on our way of baptising. They are strong here, so far as numbers are concerned. He handled the subject all the way along with a great deal of care and earnestness of purpose becoming a Christian, steering away from anything like making a fight on our fellow-church. The 11th inst. was the Children's Day; collection was $4 10. Our Sabbath-school, at present, is doing very well, though yet small. Bro. Bradley, of the white church, came over and gave me a sermon and also Bro. Wright. The church on both occasions was crowded almost to the utmost capacity. Their subjects were handled with a great deal of simplicity, which added much force to their sermons. I feel perfectly safe in saying that frequent visits from them would prove to be a great benefit to my people."

Geo. A. Payne, College Point: "When Elder Dale made his first round, I could not give any report. On account of high water and other troubles we could not get into the church for more than two months. The manager of Willham plantation gave me the use of a house to gather the people in. In five nights eight souls were converted. Elder Dale, on his second round, found a crowded church full of promise, and he preached well. The trustees, by subscription, have raised $160; $150 is to be collected in three months' time. We got 145 signers to the petition for a Sunday law."

MISSISSIPPI.

W. McDonald, Aberdeen: "My revival just closed. I had a glorious time. Thirty-six converts, forty-five accessions to the church. My quarterly conference was held on the 3d and 4th. On the Sabbath following my congregation raised $59 for the support of the ministry. Pray that the good Lord may continue his blessings upon us.

G. Jackson, Green Hill: "My first quarterly conference was held June 11th. My salary has been fixed at $240. Lord's supper was administered to 43; collection, $4 10.

C. Vaughn, Yazoo Circuit: "The St. John Sunday-school is doing well. Children's Day was observed, and Bro. David Mosely, Perry Holt and myself talked to the pupils. Rocky Zion School is getting along fairly. The church has been retarded by the high water. Have raised $2 50 for benevolent purposes."

I. N. Lambkin, Starkville: "On Children's Day, the school was decorated with flowers, and exercises were nicely conducted; collections, $1 45. Elder Shumpest preached about the ablest sermon ever heard in the backwoods, and administered the sacrament to 60; collection, $3 55."

TEXAS.

I. Smith, Winchester: "On the Cunningham and West Point work we have 2 converts, 9 on probation; Sunday-schools are growing."

Green Bragner, Denison: "We have a good church in Sherman, but the times are hard. I will have the assistence of the elder to build a church in Denison."

A LADY SAID

"Those Horrid Pimples! No, I Cannot Go. Please Present My Excuses.

Probably two-thirds of the ladies in society and homes of our land are afflicted with skin diseases of various kinds, to do away with which, if, it could be done without injury, would be the happiest event of their lives. Then she would have instead of a disfigured and marred countenance, one that would be handsome, or at least good-looking, for any one with a clear, pure skin, no matter what the cut of her features is, has a certain amount of good looks which attract everybody. As it is now, she imagines every one sees and talks about "those freckles," "those horrid pimples," and other blemishes with which she is afflicted, and this is true of either sex.

To improve this appearance great risks are taken; arsenic, mercury, or high-sound titled named articles containing these death-dealing drugs are taken in hopes of getting rid of all these troubles. In many cases death is the result. No alleviation of the burning, heating, itching and inflammation is given. All troubled with Eczema (salt rheum), Tetters, Humors, Inflammation, Rough Scaly Eruptions of any kind, Diseases of the Hair and Scalp, Scrofula, Ulcers, Pimples or Tender Itchings on any part of the body, should know that there is hope for them in a sure, perfect and elegant remedy, known as "Dr. C. W. Benson's Skin Cure." It makes the skin white, soft and smooth, removes tan and freckles, and is the best toilet dressing in the world. It is elegantly put up, two bottles in one package, consisting of both internal and external treatment. Our readers should be sure to get this and not some old remedy resuscitated on the success of Dr. Benson's and now advertised as the "Great Skin Cure." There is only one,—it bears the Doctor's picture and is for sale by all druggists. $1 per package.

A young man in a train was making fun of a lady's hat to an elderly gentleman in the seat with him. "Yes," said his seat-mate, "that's my wife, and I told her that if she wore that bonnet some fool would make fun of it." The young man slid out. At the next station the old man poured out his hot coffee into the saucer to cool. "Look, ma," said a snickering girl, "at that old-fashioned way of drinking." "Yes," said the elderly gentleman, "and it was old-fashioned manners not to notice it." The elderly gentleman finished his journey in peace.—Detroit Free Press.

Weak lungs, spitting of blood, consumption, and kindred affections, cured without physician. Address for treatise, with two stamps, World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

A Keen Rebuke.

It was Rev. Rowland Hill's habit to ride to church in an old family carriage, a practice too aristocratic, in the judgment of one of his flock, who determined to rebuke it. It was customary in his chapel for notes to be sent to the pulpit requesting prayers for various objects; and one Sabbath Mr. Hill was proceeding with the reading of the requests when he found himself in the midst of one to the following purport: "Prayers are requested for Rev. Mr. Hill, that he may be more humble and like his Divine Master, who, instead of riding in a carriage, was content to be borne on an ass." Having read the notice, he lifted the spectacles to his forehead, and looking around the house, observed that it was quite true he had been guilty of the fault alleged; but if the writer would step around too the vestry door after service, saddled and bridled, he would have no objection to ride home after his Master's example.

Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" cures every kind of humor, from the common pimple or eruption to the worst scrofula.

Four to six bottles clear salt-rheum or tetter.

One to five bottles cure the worst kind of pimples on the face.

Two to four bottles clear the system of boils, carbuncles, and sores.

Five to eight bottles cure corrupt or running ulcers and the worst scrofula.

By druggists and in half-dozen and dozen lots at great discount.

So long as the general morality of the people is ready to spring up and pounce upon rascality whenever it is revealed, corruption cannot get the upper hands of us. It is the corruption that is sanctioned by public opinion that destroys nations—the corruption that can not be thrown off. But it is not proposed here to defend corruption of any kind. It is simply intended to advance the philosophical reflection that we are not necessarily ruined because we cannot keep all the weeds out of the public garden. All that we can expect, perhaps, is to keep them down within reasonable limits, and be in readiness to strike at them when they show their heads.—St. Louis Globe Democrat

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound doubtless ranks first as a curative agent in all diseases of the procreative system, degeneration of the kidneys, irritation of the bladder, urinary calculi, etc., etc. Send to Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, 233 Western Avenue, Lynn, Mass., for pamphlets.

SAMARITAN

NERVINE.

Samaritan Nervine

Cures Epileptic Fits, Spasms, Convulsions, St. Vitus Dance, Virtigo, Hysterics, Insanity, Apoplexy, Paralysis, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all Nervous diseases. This infallible remedy will positively eradicate every species of Nervous Derangement, and drive them away from whence they came, never to return again. It utterly destroys the germs of disease by neutralizing the hereditary taint or poison in the system, and thoroughly eradicates the disease, and utterly destroys the cause.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Female Weakness, general Debility, Leucorrhoea or Whites, Painful Menstruation, Ulceration of the Uterus, Internal Heat, Gravel, Inflammation of the Bladder, Irritability of the Bladder. For Wakefulness at night, there is no better remedy. During the change of life no female should be without it. It quiets the Nervous System and gives rest, comfort and nature's sweet sleep.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Alcoholism, Drunkenness and the habit of Opium Eating. These degrading habits are by far the worst evils that have ever befallen suffering humanity. Thousands die annually from these noxious drugs. The drunkard drinks liquor not because he likes it, but for the pleasure of drinking and treating his friends, little thinking that he is on his road to ruin. Like the Opium Eater, he first uses the drug in small quantities as a harmless antidote. The soothing influence of the drug takes strong hold upon its victim, leading him on to his own destruction. The habits of Opium Eating and Liquor Drinking are precisely what eating is to alimentiveness, as over-eating first inflames the stomach, which redoubles its cravings until it paralyzes both the stomach and appetite. So every drink of liquor or dose of opium, instead of satisfying, only adds to its fierce fires, until it consumes the vital force and then itself. Like the gluttonous tape-worm, it cries: "Give, give, give!" but never enough until its own rapacity devours itself. Samaritan Nervine gives instant relief in all such cases. It produces sleep, quiets the nerves, builds up the nervous system, and restores body and mind to a healthy condition.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Nervous Dyspepsia, Palpitation of the Heart, Asthma, Bronchitis, Scrofula, Syphilis, diseases of the Kidneys and all diseases of the urinary organs. Nervous debility, caused by the indiscretions of youth, permanently cured by the use of this invaluable remedy. To you, young, middle-aged and old men, who are covering your sufferings as with a mantle by silence, look up, you can be saved by timely efforts, and make ornaments to society, and jewels in the crown of your Maker, if you will. Do not keep this a secret longer, until it saps your vitals, and destroys both body and soul. If you are thus afflicted, take Dr. Richmond's Samaritan Nervine. It will restore your shattered nerves, arrest premature decay, impart tone and energy to the whole system.

MR. EDITOR—I would like to know the whereabouts of my mother, brother and siter. Mother's name was Judia Hunter. Brother's and sisters's were Cincinnati Stiff Karry Ann Hunter. We belong to Dr. James Hunter, who lived in Marshall county, Mississippi. We were carried from Marshall, Mississippi, to Hardeman county, Tennessee, to a man by the name of Tom Peterson. We were sold to a man by the name of Anderson Morse, who brought me (Mary Hunter) and brother Cincinnati to Noxubeo county, Miss. We stayed there one year after we were parted from mother and sister. The next year we moved to to Oktibbeha county, Miss. We lived there with Anderson Moss about 10 or 12 years. After which he was sold to Col. Shaw and brought to Louisiana. The last I heard of him he was in DeSoto parish, La. We were sold among Palmers.

Write to me as Mary Jane Renfro, Mayfield, Milam county, Tex.

MARY JANE RENFRO,

MR. EDITOR—I am inquiring of for my son, Nat Adams or Nat Boykin. I don't know which name he goes by. His mother belongs to Col. Adams, Madison county, West Tennessee. His father was named Clinton Boyton; he belonged to Eli Boykin. His oldest brother was named William Adams, his oldest sister, Lucy Adams. He has a scar on the elbow and side where he was burnt. He left home in 1872; he was then about 15 years old. I heard he went to Kansas with one of the wounded officers. Please advertise for him in your paper. I am again married and my name is LOUISA GIBBS.

Champaigne City, June 29, '82.

In the Southwestern Christian Advocate of June 8, is a column headed "Lost Friends." It seems to be regular department of the paper. The letters all have a deep, pathetic interest, and tell a tale of their own which needs no comment. We give a portion of three of them. May a kind Providence re-unite the remnant of these shattered households.—The Standard, Chicago.

To worry about any liver, kidney or urinary trouble, especially Bright's Disease or Diabetes, as Hop Bitters never fails of a cure where a cure is possible. We know this.

If we sincerely loved the will of God, and only this, we should change our earth into a heaven. O my God, what do I see in the course of the stars, in the events of life but the accomplishment of Thy will! May it endear all events to me. For it is Thine to will, and mine to obey.

is a compound of the virtues of sarsaparilla, stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, with the iodide of potash and iron, all powerful blood-making, blood-cleansing, and life-sustaining elements. It is the purest, safest, and in every way the most effectual alterative medicine known or available to the public. The sciences of medicine and chemistry have never produced so valuable a remedy, nor one so potent to cure all diseases resulting from impure blood. It cures Scrofula, and all scrofulous diseases, Erysipelas, Rose, or St. Anthony's Fire, Pimples and Face-grubs, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scald-head, Ringworm, Ulcers, Sores, Rheumatism, Mercurial Disease, Neuralgia, Female Weaknesses and Irregularities, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver, Dyspepsia, Emaciation, and General Debility.

By its searching and cleansing qualities it purges out the foul corruptions which contaminate the blood, and cause derangement and decay. It stimulates and enlivens the vital functions, promotes energy and strength. It restores and preserves health. It infuses new life and vigor throughout the whole system. No sufferer from any disease which arises from impurity of the blood need despair, who will give AYER'S SARSAPARILLA a fair trial. Remember, the earlier the trial, the speedier the cure.

Its recipe has been furnished to physicians everywhere; and they, recognizing its superior qualities, administer it in their practice.

For nearly forty years AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has been widely used, and it now possesses the confidence of millions of people who have experienced benefits from its marvellous curative virtues.

FREMONT.

MR. EDITOR: I see among the "Personals" of your paper the following:

"Gen. John C. Fremont, a man of consequence once, but who is almost forgotten now, is described as walking the streets of New York still lithe and erect, though showing his 70 years in his white hair and beard and sandy wrinkled face."

Forgotten! did I hear you say?
The name once ringing on the air,
Who sought through mountain-pass the way,
And opened paths of empire there
Fremont! prophetic, there it stands,
A shining symbol, lifted high,
Of freedom through the mountain lands,
Whose snowy turrets kiss the sky.

Forgotten! no, he ne'er can be,
The leader of that mighty host
Who said, "Our Northern lands now free.
Shall thus be kept, whate'er the cost."
And rousing thus the freedom blasts
Which cleared the skies in darkest hour,
The way was opened through which passed
Great Lincoln to his place of power.

Forgotten! did you dare to say?
The memory of that desert voice
Which cried aloud, "Prepare the way.
Lo! Freedom cometh! All rejoice."
Bright morning star of glorious day,
The grand courier of the sun,
The word the Nation groaned to say
Till Lincoln thundered "It is done!"

What though the lines of age have come,
And hoary head with trembling feet
Amid the city's constant hum
Pass silently along the street.
Let youth uncover at the sight;
Let age take up the old refrain;
Again on starry banner write,
"Freedom, Fremont, free soil, free men!"

For the SOUTHWESTERN.

Our Letter from China.

PEKING, CHINA, May 6, 1882.

DEAR EDITOR: For many months the SOUTHWESTERN has found its way over high mountains and across deep waters in through the gate of this city, to an interested reader in a little house in the Methodist Mission Compound. A paper that can set forth such truths as it does, and always in the spirit of justice and love, is worthy the admiration it wins. But how one blushes for the past record of her native land as her eyes fall upon the column headed "Lost Friends," and how one's heart throbs with sympathy for those who anxiously await the results of such letters! May God bless all the noble souls who are trying to bring joy and light to those hearts that have known the bitterness and darkness of slavery!

Last evening, at a dinner party given in this Compound, casual mention was made of Harriet Beecher Stowe. An American lady, whose brother was an intimate friend of Mrs. Stowe's daughter-in-law, said that just before the marriage of this lady a colored caterer of Boston went to the bride's [illegible] and proposed to furnish the wedding feast. She replied that [illegible] to have a quiet wedding [illegible] could hardly afford such [illegible]. He said very earnestly: [illegible] any money; and I [illegible] I get the very few peo[illegible] myself and attend [illegible] thing for any[illegible] Mrs. Stowe." It [illegible] who has [illegible] for the uplifting of [illegible] naturally enough, hopes that in the transmigration of his soul it may be allowed to occupy some body that shall "eat less of bitterness" than falls to its present lot.

Dr. Howard returned Monday from her attendance upon the viceroy's mother. Even her skill and tender care could not save the life of her aged patient. She feared it might be thus, but could hardly refuse the viceroy's request to go. She was treated with the greatest kindness and consideration during her stay. In a letter written while in the viceroy's yamen she says, after speaking of her journey: "A messenger went ahead to say we were coming. Chairs and soldiers and outriders awaited us. The yamen is about one mile from the landing. The courts are large and paved, very clean, filled with shrubs and beautiful flowers. The houses have plank floors and are kept very clean. The furniture is Chinese, but very elegant.

The viceroy has a large family, children and grandchildren; every one seems so happy! They seem so kind to each other!" They fitted up six rooms for her, furnishing them elegantly with foreign furniture, also providing her with a Cantonese cook. She speaks of Lady Li as having a kindly manner, and saying to her, "I am not at all afraid of you." Just before she died, she ordered that one thousand dollars be given Dr. Howard to aid in carrying on her work. The money has already been paid over. On her return to Tienstin, she was received by the viceroy and Lady Li as warmly as ever, though she had failed to save the life of the mother. The Emperor has sent offerings for the peace and repose of the soul of her who has given to the "Middle Kingdom" two such noble sons. He has exempted Li Hung Chang from the customary three years of mourning, as his services are too valuable to be dispensed with, so that he will only go into mourning for one hundred days.

My teacher, Mr. Wang, has been quite interested in the fate of the assassin of the President, and when at last news reached us of the decision and sentence, he said: "Oh, they are not going to punish him very badly, are they?" I replied: "Americans consider hanging as rather a severe sentence;" and he said: "Not so in China; here he would have been cut in eight pieces and put to death slowly and with great torture, unless the executioner had been privately bribed to strike the death-blow first."

Our "helper" has a cousin who in past years, made a great many demands upon him for money, on the plea that he works for foreigners and there can be no end to his resources. At last the "helper refused him, and so, in his wrath, he attempted to rush into the presence of the Emperor, as his majesty was going out to offer sacrifices, and present his case. He was prevented in this by some of the attendants, but for an attempt to do what might have resulted in "scaring" the "Son of Heaven" he is sent into perpetual banishment, the first three years to be spent in penal labor, after which time, by virtue of good behavior, he may be promoted to the rank of a common soldier, but can never return to his home. A number of the retinue were degraded from rank for allowing him to rush by them! Some years ago, when the late emperor, Lung Chile, went out to the Western Tombs to worship his ancestors, two women attempted to get into his presence; one of them was sent into perpetual banishment, but the other was seventy years old, and out of veneration for her great age her punishment was lightened; she was beaten with one hundred blows, and imprisoned for a few days only. Somebody's dog bit one of the attendants, and his luckless master was banished for life! The fate of the dog is unknown to your correspondent.

At present writing all our mission are in excellent health, while peace and harmony prevail. Mr. Pilcher, Mr. Gamewell, and Miss Porter returned last week from "the long trip" to the south, which took seven or eight weeks. During the trip they availed themselves of the recently erected telegraph line to send back good tidings of their progress. It will be a grand step in the progress of mission work when the railroad accompanies the [illegible]! So much time and [illegible] is exhausted in getting to [illegible] the Boy's School [illegible] and work on it

People from the Legations have begun to go to the summer resorts at the Hills. Minister Fergeson's family, of the Netherlands' Legation, go next week.

Mrs. Fergnson is the daughter of a Methodist minister—much interested in Mission affairs and consequently popular among missionaries. Miss Fergnson, an intelligent and accomplished young lady, was at our Sunday-school last Sunday and sat in my chair. At the close I remarked: "I fear it was dull for you as you could not understand it, I suppose." "Oh, yes, I understood everything that was said," was the unexpected reply. She had never studied the language, but from hearing it spoken for years, has "picked it up."

Dr. Martin, President of the Imperial College, returned yesterday, after an absence of about two years. Everybody will be glad to welcome both the Dr. and Mrs. Martin.

He is author of "The Chinese," which has been so favorably noticed by the press. O. M. C.

CLARK UNIVERSITY.

The closing exercises for the year are over; the advance made is good, and the examinations were well attended. Bishop Warren, Dr. Mallalieu, of Boston, and the inevitable Dr. Rust were with us. With reference to the latter, it is no use to say indefatigable for every one knows that. The annual sermon was preached by Dr. Mallalieu. I had not the pleasure of hearing it, as duty called me elsewhere, but I heard him lecture on Monday night in the Chapel of the University and was delighted with the breadth and grasp of the man. The President, Rev. E. O. Thayer, has done a good year's work. Bishop Warren and Dr. Rust made sound and stirring addresses.

The following are the graduates for 1882:

College Preparatory—Marcus J. Greene, Henry M. White, Sarah A. Harper.

English Course—Jown W. Dawson, Thomas S. Killgo, Scott H. O'Neal, Hattie M. Robinson, Major Willford, Mary T. Wood.

At the close of the present exercises a meeting of the trustees was held. Bishop Warren, President of the Board, and Prof. H. C. Crogman, Secretary, was present. The reports showed the institution to be in a most gratifying condition. There are 156 students. There has been during the last year under the direction of Bishop Warren a school of mechanics established in connection with the University. A fine carpenter shop, stocked with fine tools of all kinds, has been established, and a little four-horse engine, with which sawing, turning, etc., is done, has been put in. A blacksmith shop is also an attachment and is well supplied with tools, forges, etc. The whole is under a skilled mechanic who gives the students instruction. During the year the students have built with their own hands a carpenter shop, a blacksmith shop, a stable, a handsome residence for Prof. Crogman, and are now occupied on a much finer house for the President. It will be ready for him to occupy before the fall term opens. In addition to that they have a school for farming and cultivate about one hundred acres of the 454 owned by the University. They raise vast quantities of vegetables and a general crop.

At the trustee's meeting yesterday the erection of a building was authorized, to be built by the students, for teaching the girls the science of house keeping and house adornment. This institution was the first in the South to establish and put in operation a system of practical mechanical education.

The building presents a very imposing appearance now, and affords a fine view of the city, standing almost precisely in the head of Pryor street.

The problem of endowment, is the difficult problem that now presents itself to the friends of the institution. How can it be done? I see no plan now open to relieve the Freedmen's Aid Society of its load at Atlanta, except the benevolence of the original founders of this school.

The Atlanta University, a school of congregational type, receives $8000 a year from the State of Georgia. We need $200,000 four per cent. well-registered U. S. bonds to balance that, and we must get it out of that State of Christ's kingdom called the Methodist heart. And now, Dr. R——, we don't intend to be waved aside this time as in the case of the Haven Hall. J. MITCHELL.

Meridian Academy.

MR. EDITOR — We have just closed our fifth and most successful year. Our examinations took place on the 22d and 23d of June, and was largely attended by both white and colored. In proof of the proficiency of the students, we have but to quote from the expressions of approbation of those present. All, without exception, expressed themselves as highly pleased, while many of the whites were surprised at the advancement of the children of the colored people. The Mercury, after expressing its high appreciation of the exercises witnessed, thought that the principal of the school "must be a marvel of a teacher." Our closing exercises took place on the evenings of the 29th and 30th. On Thursday, the heavy rain interfered with the success of the evening, but on Friday the church was packed to overflowing. The entertainment was pronounced by all "a success," and every one went away well pleased with himself and every one else. One hundred and sixty-five different students have attended during the year. We have made arrangements by which we can board students at from $8 to $10 per month. The Meridian Academy is such a one our people have long felt a need of. The great mistake committed by our people is, the sending of children unprepared to college, and when they return without evincing any great proficiency in their studies the teachers are blamed and the institutions receive a bad name, when the parents themselves are to blame for having sent the child before it was ready to enter college. The Meridian Academy supplies this long felt need, and offers superior advantage to your children. It is healthfully located upon one of the most beautiful sites in Meridian. The teachers keep themselves thoroughly posted with the most modern and improved plans of teaching, and while the intellectual training of the child is well looked after, no pains is spared that his morals shall be directed in the proper channel. We hope the people of southern Mississippi will consider this matter well, and in choosing a school for their children, choose the one belonging to their church, especially as it presents equal facilities with those of other denominations. Our principal is now traveling in southern Mississippi, in the interest of the school, soliciting patronage and aid to assist us in comfortably seating the building. We have during the year greatly improved our school building by adding to it two more good rooms, and the whole will be nicely ceiled by the opening of the fall term. We trust that the ministers of the various churches to which she may apply will use their influence in securing the necessary aid to seat the building. A little from the many will accomplish the work and it will not be felt, hence our prayer is "Help us to help each other, Lord,

Each other's cross to bear;
Let each his friendly aid afford,
And feel his brother's care."

Very truly yours,
M. V. K.

Church Extension.

A presiding elder in Missouri writes as follows. What shall we do about it? Who will help us say "yes" to his appeal? We want one hundred $250 subscriptions right away. We could use them for the glory of God:

Dear Bro. McCabe:—On this district we can this fall secure seven new churches where there are none now if we had $250 promised to each to complete the work. In these places they can secure and some of them have on subscription $600. With what we can raise at dedication we could build a church in each place worth $1050 to $1200, as work can be secured in part gratuitously.

Please indicate if it is best to hope for these extreme cases. These do not include other buildings now on the way, or places where old or any church buildings are now found.

Yours as ever,
O. M. STEWART,
Presiding Elder of Sedalia District.

That letter has the right ring. Where is the Lord's money? Here is a chance to furnish 2000 people with a place to hear the gospel for an outlay of $1750. Let us help all along the line.

National Educational Assembly.

Edmund Burke has said: "Education is the cheap defense of nations."

The facts of the census of 1880, concerning the illiteracy of our country, have caused within a few months a great revival of public sentiment, in favor of the national government supplementing for a few years, public school efforts of the various States, in proportion to the number of illiterates each may have. There are over 4,000,000 of people in the United States, twenty-one years of age and over, who cannot write. One-half of these are voters and represent every fifth voter. The nation has nearly six millions and a half of people ten years of age and over who cannot write. These masses of ignorant people are divided about equally among the white and colored people of the country.

Three-fourths of our ignorant population are in the sixteen Southern States, where are only one-third of the nation's population. The proposition for national aid is therefore largely in the interest of the South, made poor by the devastations of the war, and which has in its midst twelve-thirteenths of all the colored people of the nation.

This proposition for national aid in public school education, comes from prominent and representative men of the whole nation without respect to section, or party, or church. Several bills proposing relief are already before Congress. More than 15,000 petitioners have sent their appeal for aid from the South, and several legislatures in the South have spoken in favor of it. With scarcely an exception, the most prominent educators and philanthropists, and newspapers in the North have said "Amen" to this movement.

This is an opportune time for the friends of popular education to unite in every proper way to stimulate and direct public sentiment, in reference to this all-important subject. With this end in view there will be held a National Education Assembly at Ocean Grove, New Jersey, August 8, and 9, 1882. The Ocean Grove Camp-meeting Association has given the use of its magnificent auditorium, and the close proximity of this famous seaside to New York, Philadelphia, and scores of smaller cities, will insure an immense attendance.

It is expected that President Arthur and several of his Cabinet will attend one or more of these sessions. General John Eaton, United States Commissioner of Education, will make the opening address.

One chief object of the Assembly will be to exhibit by maps, prepared by the Census Bureau at Washington, the exact location of the illiterate masses of the nation, and to have discussions upon them in their relations to society and government, especially in the South, in Utah, in the territories, in Alaska, and in our great cities.

One session will be given to The Church and Education. At this, Bishop Simpson will preside and speak, and Drs. Crooks and McCosh are also expected to speak. At this session an effort will be made to exhibit the educational work accomplished in the Southern States since the war, by the great church educational societies of the nation. Each society will be represented by a prominent man of its own selection. Dr. Rust, of Cincinnati, Dr. Powers, of Chicago, Drs. Strieby, Gregory, Roberts, Kendall, Morehouse, Jackson, and others, representing various societies, will be present.

The last session on the evening of the 9th of August, will be given to the consideration of Methods of Relief proposed in Congress and elsewhere. Hon. H. W. Blair, United States Senator from New Hampshire will make the opening address. Several United States Senators and Representatives from northern and southern States have engaged to be present at this session.

A full and complete programme will be published in a few days. Reduced railroad fares will be arranged on all roads touching Ocean Grove. The conduct of the Assembly is in charge of Rev. Dr. J. C. Hartzell, who has the constant advice and co-operation of Commissioner Eaton, of Washington, and others.

Since 1843 the Free Church of Scotland has raised for its support and for missionary and benevolent work more than $76,000,000.

A Drop in the Bucket.

Bishop Warren very pertinently says: All Christians and denominations have recently been made glad by Mr. Slater's gift of $1,000,000, for the education of the Freedmen. Laus Deo. But do people consider what small dust in the balance it is? Only the interest—at most $50,000—can be spent annually. How much will that aid in educating 6,000,000 of people? for they are nearly all children, and ignorant. Massachusetts spends $5,000,000, or $15 each, to educate its children. Georgia spends $465,000, or 95 cents each, to educate hers. How little would that $50,000 add to the schools of the single state of Georgia; how very little to the schools for the children of 6,000,000 of colored people? It would be just about 3 cents to each colored child of schoolable age. It would hardly buy a tin cup with which to take and dip out the Pierian spring. But let no one be discouraged. It is not any one man's duty to educate the whole race; but it is every man's duty to do what he can; and it is every man's pleasure who loves his country, race and God.

These helps to the education of the colored people are needed, not only on account of the disabilities of the past, but of the present also. They are not only burdened with all the ignorance, superstition, depreciation of brain fiber that heredity can bring them, but they do not have a fair chance at the educational facilities of to-day. Georgia, that means to be just, has an average attendance of 30 per cent. of its children in schools, and an enrollment of 52 per cent. But of this low enrollment 60 per cent. are whites and 40 per cent. are colored. When three white children attend school for every two colored, it is easy to see what is detiny, if not design. Those who like the Master,

Come with succor speedy
To those who suffer wrong.
To help the poor and needy
And bid the weak be strong.

will for many years yet pour out the surplus of private fortune for public good. If a spasm of common sense could seize Congress long enough to enact some system for helping the common schools in proportion to illiteracy, and under national supervision, we should see the foundations of education partially laid. Even then, that higher education, which we have learned should be left to benevolence, would still call, during a century to come, for the enriched North to follow its instincts and history in helping the impoverished South.

Bro. Barnes' Brave Man.

A special to the Courier Journal from Frankfort, Ky., says: At Bro. Barnes' meeting last night there was an episode in which a colored brother and the highest judicial officer of the State gave a public exhibition of the fraternal relations existing between the white and colored races in Kentucky. While the evangelist stood with outstretched hands asking "Who will trust the Lord?" Judge Thomas F. Hargis, of the court of appeals, was moved to a confession and took his seat in the front row of chairs. Shortly after there passed down the aisle a penitent blacker than the midnight eyes of the sable goddess. Then came others who Bro. Barnes observed were careful to choose seats as far away as possible from the "dusky brother." Stopping right in the midst of the singing Bro. Barnes said: "My dear friends, you see that this colored brother has come forward to confess Christ, and you are staying away simply because you don't want to sit beside him. Here he sits alone on this front row, and all that have come forward have been careful not to seat themselves near him. Any man coming forward, despite the prejudice against color, and taking a seat by the side of this colored brother, will be a brave, noble man. I know in the eyes of society there is a difference between you and him, but dear friends, before God the difference does not exist. He was born this way, he cannot help his color; still he has a soul to save. If you stay away now it will prove the success of the devil's device. The devil knows Frankfort people, and has taken this advantage of their prejudices. Ah, my friends, this same devil is a sharp old fellow, but I'm going to get ahead of him. He doesn't think any one will have courage to sit next to this colored man. Friends will you let the devil triumph? A brave man, remember, is he who takes a seat alongside my colored friend, who has come forward to confess Christ and save his soul from peril of eternal damnation."

At this Judge Hargis arose and taking the sable penitent by the hand, sat down in the chair next to him, Bro. Barnes in the meanwhile looking on approvingly and with a quiet smile of happy satisfaction, exclaiming "The recording angel will note this on the book of life; praise the Lord."

Yesterday afternoon and last night the confessions numbered 45 for the soul, 42 for the body, making a total of 918 for the soul, and 286 for the body. The meetings of to-morrow will be the last held in this city, for on Monday Brother Barnes says he must go to Dayton, Ohio, whither the Lord has called him.

Ex-Secretary Ramsey, a member, says nothing will be done in the way of organizing the Utah commission and beginning its work until after the pending bill making the necessary provision for expenses becomes a law. The bill will no doubt be passed before the adjournment of Congress. Mr. Ramsey says the work of the commission will occupy more time than he had anticipated when he accepted appointment. Their labors, will not be continuous, but the commission will remain in existence until after the new territorial legislature has organized and passed the election laws of the Territory prescribed in the act of Congress. In the meantime, the commission will conduct the registration of voters according to the law of Congress, excluding those who not only practice but believe in ploygamy, and certify to the election. This may require several sittings of the commission, and several trips to the Territory. Mr. Ramsey thinks the commission is a step in the right direction, but it remains to be seen whether the results will be permanently beneficial.

For a State where the ratio of illiterate population is very much greater than the average, Texas will soon have a school fund that will be the wonder of the world, and the envy of the rest of the Union. By her constitution the proceeds of the sales of her public lands must go for school purposes exclusively. She has yet forty million acres unsold, which should produce not less than $100,000,000, a sum equal to the school funds in all the other States combined, and the interest upon which will give Texas as fine a school system as Massachusetts. Nearly $2,000,000 has already accumulated in the Treasury, but the schools of the State are in a lamentable state of decay and disorganization. A State University with an endowment of $2,000,000 will be erected next year, but before this money is invested or stolen the State should get a first-class educator and organizer to use it in a way that will do the most good.—Inter-Ocean.

We merely mentioned as an item of news last week the letter of Senator Hampton to the people of South Carolina. He warns us against the danger of division in the ranks of the Democratic party. The "Independent" comes in for a good share of the Honorable Senator's indignation—not to say, contempt. Well, we confess we don't prefer a big "I" to spell independent, and yet we like the word and what the word implies; and we've got to have more of it before we get right in politics in South Carolina. No doubt of it. We need a leader, and a much greater one than Hampton has shown himself in his recent letter. We want the Hampton of 1876, who openly preferred political defeat to victory by methods of indirection and fraud. WANTED for South Carolina, a political Moses. The people, the bone and sinew of the country, are ready to flock to his standard.—Southern Christian Advocate.

The arrival of the steamer S. J. Oteri on a regular passage from the Isthmus of Panama, with a fair passenger list and a cargo of fruit is an incident of no common significance to New Orleans. We learn that this voyage had been accomplished in four days and ten hours. Adding the mail time to New York to that made by the S. J. Oteri, and the service between Panama and New York could be performed via New Orleans in six days and twenty-two hours, instead of nine days by way of the island of St. Thomas. —Price Current.

Senator Watkins is more concerned for the "sovereign dignity" of New Hampshire than the honor of his own State. He groans in spirit at the spirit of avaricious litigation shown by the Granite State in the attempt to collect a little bill from Louisiana. We would much rather see the fine abilities of the Senator devoted to the ways and means of lifting up the fallen honor of Louisiana than wasted in denouncing a sister commonwealth who has asked—perhaps irregularly—that justice be done her citizens. The moderator of the Baltimore Presbytery is a colored man. Judging from the fuss made over the regular standing of the colored minister, Mr. Park, it will be a long time before the presbytery in the Southern Church will take a colored moderator. Is it not strange that Southerners, laymen, can sit with colored men in Congress, can sit with them on the municipal and school boards, can do all sorts of business with them, but can't endure them as equals in the Church of Jesus Christ, in whom there is no more white and black than there is male and female. God forgive us!—N. Y. Independent.

Bishop Levi Scott.

Rev. Bishop Levi Scott, D. D., Senior Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, died at his home in Odessa, Del., July 13, at 9:35 a. m. Of Bishop Scott's early life we have no special information, save his conversion to God, joining the Methodist Episcopal Church, and entering her ministry. As a preacher, his speech was always correct, his manners courtly, his address pleasing. His ministerial gifts were a clear statement of doctrine, burning entreaty, more than controversy. No man knew better than he how to vindicate the Wesleyan faith by clear statements and strong arguments. Bishop Scott has always taken great interest in the cause of education in our Church. He has always been anxious to raise the literary qualifications in our ministry, not by insisting that all should be graduates of some college or school of theology, but by pressing upon the attention of the ministry the necessity of using all diligence for their mental improvement. It is not our purpose to trace the course of the Bishop in all the varied toils of his itinerant life. He has filled with the greatest acceptance the various positions to which he has been called by the Church. A few years past he has been disabled from active duties, but he has constantly scanned the leading papers and kept his eye on the world's great movements. Blessed with a competence, and a pleasant home in the bosom of his devoted family, and surrounded by a host of friends of all ages, he passed life's evening hours not only without complaint or repining, but with abiding cheerfulness and buoyant hope. His heart never grew old or morose. He had no desire to die, yet in composed resignation he kept in daily readiness to go. Thus he calmly watched and waited for the chariot to call at his door, until, July 13, the Father said, "It is enough; come up higher," when "the weary wheels of life stood still," and the Bishop lay sublime in repose as he had been heroic in action and spotless in life.

Rev. Scott Chinn.

He is gone. Gone from the smoky fields of battle, and the weary toils of labor, to the glorious scenes of peace and pleasure, to mansions in the skies.

This man, who above all others, was pre-eminently the father of our work, out of which has grown our six southwestern annual conferences, with over 70,000 members, and an innumerable multitude who have already preceded him to the throne of God, has gone to his reward. Verily, death loves a shining mark; for in the death of Father Scott Chinn, we recognize the fall of a prince and great man in Israel. We mourn the loss of his presence, but we are strengthened by the victories of his life and the triumphs of his death. We seem to hear his words of encouragement even upon this side of the Jordan; yea, we hear them, for he being dead yet speaketh. The life and death of Rev. Scott Chinn have been, and will be, the mainspring of the salvation of multitudes, whose songs of glory now swell, and will swell, the chorus of the angelic host of shining ranks around God's throne. His work and influence will continue to be a benediction to the world, long after his name shall be forgotten on earth. The names of such heroes have ever been honored in the church, through time, and will be owned and glorified in heaven, through all eternity. Scott Chinn was born in Lexington, Ky., in [illegible], and died in this city on Saturday, June 17th, 1882, aged 80 years.

Scott Chinn, like his parents before him, was born under the galling yoke of bondage. He never enjoyed any school privileges whatever; but managed by his own exertions to learn to read the Bible when he was 13 years of age. This was when it was a crime for a slave to learn to read. And for this crime, although his master was not so very severe upon him, he incurred the wrath and punishment of his mistress. But, nevertheless, he continued to read and study secretly, and gathered a pretty good stock of information, which afterward served him so effectually in preaching the gospel in following years. His parents before him were warm-hearted Methodists. They early dedicated him to God, and at the early age of 13 he was converted to God and consecrated to His service. Called to preach when 15 years old, he had [illegible] preached many [illegible] standing upon logs and [illegible] in the woods of [illegible] brought [illegible] called in [illegible] year 1825 he was sold to a family in Nashville, Tenn., where he continued as faithfully as ever in the work of the Lord. His name was known far and near as "Widow Robinson's honest preacher, Scott." The burden of his message, to white as well as colored, was always "Jesus and him crucified."

In 1849, he and his slave wife came to New Orleans, the property of Judge Robinson. Here it was not long before he became acquainted with Fathers Ross and Green, with whom he joined in preaching in this city and the regions round about also. He communed with them in the old Gravier and St. Mary street churches, when it was a dangerous thing for a slave to be found on his knees in this city. From thence he aided in laying the foundation of Wesley Chapel; where he was ordained by Bishop Andrew, of the M. E. Church South—ordained without laying of hands, and authorized to administer all the sacraments of the church "to the negroes and such white persons as may accept them." With no rancour or lowness of disposition he still continued doing the work of an evangelist under this authority, until in the reorganization of our work here, in 1865, when the Mississippi Mission Conference was organized, and he was elected to deacon's and elder's orders and regularly ordained by Bishop Thomson; by whom he was also appointed to Soule's Chapel. To this same charge he was reappointed by Bishop Simpson in 1866, and in 1867 by Bishop Ames. In 1868 and 1869 he was appointed by Bishop Simpson and in 1870 by Bishop Scott. The year 1871 was profitably spent at First street Church, under appointment of Bishop Scott. In 1872, he was appointed to Simpson Chapel by Bishop Janes; to which he was reappointed in 1873. In 1874, under appointment of Bishop Merrill, he was again at LaHarpe Church. From here, in 1875, he was appointed to Thomson Chapel by Bishop Foster; and reappointed in 1876 by Bishop Gilbert Haven. This was his last appointment. In 1877, he and the now sainted Robt. Hodge were granted superannuated relations and placed in our ranks of honor. He was superannuated, not because he had at any time felt he had done enough for the Master, oh, no! he ever desired to continue in effective work, but he was given that relation by his brethren who loved him, esteemed his work and honored him with a seat upon the front ranks, among our veterans and heroes.

After his relation was changed he connected himself with Union Chapel, the new name and site of old Soule's Chapel, of which he was pastor and father in former days. Here he labored faithfully and lovingly with each successive pastor, and when in weakness he was unable to aid the preacher in charge in preaching, he, like the loving disciple, did not fail to counsel and persuade the children to love one another. During the years 1880 and 1881, under the providence of God, I, whom he had baptized at the altar of old Soule's Chapel, and under whose preaching and influence I was brought to Christ, and introduced into all the offices of the Church and Sunday-school, was his pastor. It was he who, when I was only 13 years of age, gave me my first exhorter's license. God bless the memory of Father Scott Chinn! This dear man of God is no more. When a mere boy, with many vexing discouragements, many a time I might have gone back, but he placed his tender hand, with a much more tender heart in it, on my head, and spoke words of encouragement which have ever been an inspiration to me.

The words I have nearly all forgotten, but that tender hand on my head, I can almost feel it now; it helps me even now. I will never lose its impression. Now this father, coming under my pastorate, in the same old charge in which he baptized me, took me in the church and licensed me, was as lovely as a John and as meek as a Moses. The life of Scott Chinn buds in a well rounded period of heroic Christian grandeur and perfection. He was a giant in his day, a veritable son of thunder; yet it may be that among those who ranked with him in his best days some might have been abler preachers than he, but lovelier none could be than the loving Scott Chinn. He knew and was known only to be loved. As he lived so he died. Only a few days before he died, with tears of joy, he said to me: "Son, I have no fear but rather full confidence in trusting this same Jesus whom I have preached from my youth up." His sickness was a lingering one, [illegible] all through the weary months [illegible] his affliction his eyes were fixed [illegible] the Savior. Thus he gradu[illegible] failed until his weary spirit [illegible] flight to the rest prepared [illegible] of God. The death [illegible] Chinn [illegible] a gloom in every home wherever his his name is known. No more devoted friend of young people ever lived. He is gone to join his sainted wife, and leaves behind a son in our ministry, two other sons, a daughter and several grandchildren to mourn his loss. Thus, one by one, the pioneers who opened up this field in 1865 are crossing over and passing to their reward. Of the twelve men who were marshalled here in 1865, and in the earlier days of our Church in the South, under Drs. Newman, Matlock, and Hartzell, only a few remain. May the children prove to be worthy of their ancestry.

The Trouble in Egypt.

The investment of English and French capital in Egypt, notably in the Suez Canal, and bonds of the government of the Khedive Ismail Pasha, have caused the English and French governments to assume control, through ministers of their selection, of the finances, as a guarantee of payment to their bondholders. The people have been heavily taxed, and as sincere Mohammedans have viewed with great displeasure the officious interference with their internal affairs by the Christians. The present Khedive, being favorable to English and French interests, has been virtually deposed by Arabi Pasha, the leader of the national sentiment, and who has the army and power in his hands. The Sultan of Turkey is not pleased with his proceedings, but Arabi is prepared to side with his rival and proclaim a holy war if he resorts to extreme measures for his suppression. The Sultan declined to interfere at the request of the powers, and they entrusted to England the initial measures for the overthrow of Arabi and the restoration of the Khedive in authority. The forces of Arabi, in view of the foreign fleet of war vessels in Alexandria harbor, began the erection of fortifications. Admiral Seymour ordered this work to cease, and on discovering that Arabi was ignoring the command, demanded the surrender of the fortifications within twenty-four hours. At the end of that time, on Tuesday, the 12th instant, the British squadron opened fire on the forts. In a few hours they were in ruins, and Arabi's forces retreated to the rear of Alexandria, not, however, before releasing the inmates of the jails. They, together with soldiers, began to rob and pillage and murder Europeans. Probably one hundred Christians were massacred. The Egyptian loss during the bombardment is estimated at 800. The British loss is unknown. For hours Alexandria was in flames, and the best portion is now in ruins. The next step will probably be the landing of troops and the pursuit of Arabi when a plan shall be agreed upon by the European powers.

Lynch Law in St. Tammany.

We have received a communication, signed by Elijah Lewis, chairman, and Samuel R. Porter, Joseph Taylor, Alfred Body, Hiram Jones, Thomas Crandall, Simon Jones, Wm. H. Ramsey, Frank Cloud, and Hiram Clark, members of a committee appointed by a meeting of colored citizens of Indian Village, St. Tammany parish, Louisiana, dated June 24. They say that on June 11th an atrocious crime was committed in that parish, and soon after it was rumored that Mealy Howard had been put to death by a band of unknown lynchers. A meeting of colored citizens was held, and the above committee of ten selected to wait upon the justice of the peace at Bonfonca to investigate the matter. They became satisfied on hearing the evidence from the justice and others that Mealey Howard had been properly committed to jail; he was turned over to a lawful officer with instructions to place him in the parish jail, and the officer started with his prisoner, but on the way was overtaken by a band of men unknown to him, who ordered him to get out of the way. The constable fled for his life, and then Howard was hung. The committee denounce this outrage in a parish which they say stands in the front rank of law and order parishes, and hope there will be no repetition of it "for a century to come." The action of the colored citizens in this case has been admirable, and the language of the committee is moderate and manly, such as should commend them to all good people of St. Tammany.

On the first Sabbath in July our Baptist brethren in Baldwin, La., had a baptism, upward of forty being baptized. Along and in connection with this, there was a man with his stand selling ice cream, cakes, and cigars, and such like luxuries as the company seemed desirous of purchasing. To us this seems a little mixed, and reminds us of a certain boy who was much inclined to learn and sing the foolish ditties he heard upon the street. His mother, being an earnest, active Christian, was anxious to correct this tendency in her son. So she procured a book of religious melodies, and sung these with her boy, who seemed delighted. The results of the first day's work were all that the mother could desire. Kneeling at night by his mother's side, he said his evening prayer, and then together they sang,

"O I love Jesus, sinner's friend."

With kisses, and a heart full of gratitude, she laid her precious boy down to sleep, thankful that thus easily and early in life she had been able to correct so foolish a habit. But judge of her surprise, the next morning, when the first thing she heard from her boy was—

"O I love Jesus, sinner's friend,"
Yankee doodle dandy;
O I love Jesus, sinner's friend,
Yankee doodle dandy."

The mother was shocked at this mixing of the sacred and the foolish on the part of her son. We do not want to throw stones at our Baptist brethren, but surely they ought not to make the administration of this holy sacrament the occasion for breaking the Sabbath.

Public Schools in Lousisiana.

This is from the Baton Rouge Capitolian Advocate, the official journal of the State:

Prof. E. H. Fay, Superintendent of Public Education, gives us the following figures, as taken from the recent act passed by the general Assembly:

Amount appropriated for public school purposes, $107,000.

This amount is to be distributed in the following manner:

Sixteenth section fund	$45,234 00
Seminary fund	5,440 00
Agricultural and mechanical fund	9,115 69
Salary of State Superintendent	2,000 00
Expense of office and salary of Secretary	1,000 00
Assessor's compensation	3,333 33
Assessor, parish Orleans	2,083 33
University of Louisiana (New Orleans)	10,000 00
State University (Baton Rouge)	10,000 00
Colored University (New Orleans.)	10,000 00

This amount taken from the entire appropriation leaves $8798 95 to be distributed for public schools in the parish of Orleans and the country parishes. Mr. Fay considers the appropriation of $10,000 for the three State universities to be taken from this fund, as in violation of article 224 of the Constitution, but the State Board of Education do not sustain him in his opinion. He will endeavor to have the payment of this $30,000 enjoined by the attorney-general.

By the subterfuge of calling the University of Louisiana a "department of the State University, two high schools for whites, one at Baton Rouge and the other at New Orleans, are allowed a share of $10,000 each of the public school fund. These appropriations of $20,000 are attempted to be offset by an appropriation of $10,000 for a Colored University, which has no material existence, but is supposed to be in New Orleans. Besides the inequality of these race misappropriations (for they are violative of the fourteenth amendment of the Constitution of the United States) the sums if all concentrated to the support a single State University would be inadequate.

The State school tax of one mill yields the revenue above, and after all the pickings and stealings sanctioned by the White League, now in power, leaves $8798 95 to be distributed for the public schools Year after year the schools have been assailed in one form and another, until there is little left worthy to be called a system of public schools in Louisiana. The proceeds from the sale of United States bonds have been "borrowed and divested," or in plain English stolen, and the bonds are held by private parties, who yearly "abstract" the interest from the meagre State revenues. Says the Protectionist, pointedly, in reference to the $107,000 State appropriation for schools:

Why the city of New Orleans alone will pay nearly half that sum to the sectarian schools under the thin disguise of orphan asylums, in which not a colored orphan is allowed to put his foot. Forty-four thousand dollars a year of public money are squandered on these sectarian schools in violation of the spirit of the constitution, and not a voucher taken to show how it is expended. No reports are demanded; no supervision claimed. The managers of these schools come down to the City Hall once a month, hand in a list purporting to be the orphans remaining on hand from babyhood to eighteen years of age, and without verifying the count or ever thinking of disputing it, the Administrators vote them so much per head of the public money.

This practical misapplication of funds is made in the name of charity, but it is really done in the interests of a political party that is trying to starve out our public schools. The city estimate for public education this year is $200,000. The State has promised $107,000 of which New Orleans may receive thirty per cent., or say $230,000 in all. The sectarian institutions are paid $135,000, though thinly disguised under another name.

The New-York correspondent of the Central says: "If any portion of the community is to be held responsible for the low estimate put upon Christianity and Christian effort, it must be the managers and editors of the secular press." We concede that it is hardly possible to overestimate the power of the press either for good or evil; but we are far from entertaining the thought that the "managers and editors of the secular press" are sinners above all men. To us the one great cause of the "low estimate placed upon Christianity and Christian effort," and the greatest hindrance to the progress of Christianity, is the inconsistent conduct of so many professing Christianity. Far too many professing Christians have one code of morality for business and another for their families and the Church. Many of this class occupy commercial positions, and are being closely watched by the world, and thus their fidelity to Christian principles and practice is being tested. "Will you pray for me?" said a young man who was just from the penitentiary; "I am a great sinner." In the course of a short conversation we learned that this young man's father was a professed Christian, prominent and active in the Church. The son hearing his father read God's word, lead in prayer, and cheat in business, was led to believe that religion was all a sham. The inconsistencies of professed Christians have done a hundred fold more toward leading people to place a low estimate upon the religion of the Lord Jesus than "the managers and editors of the secular press."

Nobody conversant with the ways of Louisiana Bourbons ever expected them to pass a law to enforce fair and free elections, but the law recently enacted is equal if it does not surpass any machinery for the development and protection of fraud to be found in the Southern States. A Democratic Governor appoints supervisors, and they in turn select commissioners who become judges, policemen and counters of the ballots. The Secretary of State issues the paper on which ballots must be printed, the size is limited to the sixteenth of an inch, and to have no device or distinguishing mark. The commissioners will reject all others, and reject any excess of ballots found in a box. The country knows how South Carolina regulates an excess of tissue ballots which invariably are found in the boxes at Republican precincts, and will understand the object of the same plan here. We can only hope the Bourbons have overreached themselves, for once, and that a gradual revolution may be effected in the course of time. As for the courts, the police and the militia they are all creatures of the White League, whose existence depends upon the continued perpetration of election frauds.

The Richmond Christian Advocate is responsible for the following:

THE YANKEES BOTHER US.

They were on the wrong side in the war. They are given to heresies. They are avaricious. And, somehow, nearly every morning in opening the papers some Yankee has given a million to found a charity, endow a college, or start a "plant" for the poor.

All these queer things puzzle us. The religion of the Yankee runs to udder for the feeding of the race. The religion of the South, we fear, is likely to develop in the line of Texas cattle—in horns, elevated, hard and hollow.

While we think that Bro. Lafferty has a very correct appreciation of the religion of the Yankee, it does, however, seem to us that the term "horns, hard and hollow" as applied to the religion of the South, is a little severe, but as he has been on the ground much longer than we it would be out of place for us to question the correctness of his opinion even on this matter.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Rev. Z. T. Gayden called last week and purchased a new bell for the church at Whitehall, La. He reports progress at his charge.

—John F. Patty, Esq., lay delegate to our last General Conference, has been appointed a deputy marshal by Marshal Pitkin. Success to you, Brother Patty.

—The Prince of Wales has begun to shine as a farmer. He won three first prizes at the Norfolk cattle show—one for a shorthorn bull and two for Southdown sheep.

—Editor E. Q. Fuller and Bishop Warren, of Atlanta, are among the speakers at Lake Bluff. Dr. Fuller filled the pulpit at Summerfield Church, Milwaukee, one Sabbath.

—Bishop Harris presided over the German and Switzerland Conference, Frankfort, Germany, the first week in June. He expects to return to the United States in August.

—Among recent appointments, we are pleased to notice that of G. R. M. Newman, Esq., a former student of our seminary on the Teche, to be a day inspector of customs at this port.

—J. B. Verdun, Esq., the efficient and popular clerk of court of the parish of St. Mary, was in the city recently visiting old friends. He speaks very highly of the work and influence of our churches in his parish.

—Mr. Strattan, nominated for State Superintendent of Instruction by the Illinois State Republican Convention, June 28th, is a Prohibitionist, and the Germans rebel against him.

—A. P. Albert, Esq., brother of our assistant, left this city on the 10th, for Washington, D. C., where he expects to enter upon the study of medicine. We wish him a career of usefulness in the profession of his choice.

—Alexander H. Stephens is a friend of struggling young men and women, and now has fourteen dependent upon him for their education. For some he pays merely the tuition and for others all expenses. To each goes a check every month.

—Rev. J. B. Van Meter, pastor of Huntington M. E. Church, Baltimore, has retired from the editorship of the Baltimore Methodist, because he could not do justice to both appointments. The committee on publication will edit the Methodist.

—General Lew Wallace, our Minister to Turkey, is reported by cable as being the main stay of the government in Turkey, and chief adviser and minister of consolation to the Sultan in this the most trying hour of his life. When it comes to fighting a battle, writing a novel, or sustaining the suzerainty of the highcockolorum of the Mohammedans, General Wallace will get in his work with true American enterprise.—Inter Ocean.

—Bishop Bowman has already made a journey from St. Louis to Greencastle, Ind., where he attended commencement at Asbury University. We are glad to record this substantial recovery of the industrious, almost over-zealous, and loved superintendent. A note from Rev. J. R. Berry states that Bishop Foss rode out in a carriage, July 5, and strong hopes are expressed that if there is no relapse the Bishop will attend his autumn conferences.—Northwestern.

—The Baltimore Methodist says that during the Senatorial term of Joseph R West, whom the President has appointed a district commissioner, "he was a member of the Committee on the District of Columbia, and thus gained an extensive acquaintance with district affairs. His nomination was received with great favor by citizens generally, who regard him as one well qualified for the duties of the office."

—Rev. Dr. C. H. Fowler, after a brief visit to Lake Bluff, went, last week, with his family to California. He will inspect some of our missions in the interior and west, and return to Chicago about the first of October, in time to attend the Rock River conference. Dr. Fowler's health is perhaps as good as usual, but he is under medical interdict with respect to even ordinary speaking in public. His throat has been overtaxed and is giving him some trouble. Physicians encourage him with promise of recovery if he does not overuse or misuse his vocal organs. It is believed that change of air, somewhat of rest, and a touch of recreation will "bring him 'round" again.—Northwestern.

—Dr. Hartzell, writing from Syracuse New York, the home of Bishop Peck says: "The Bishop has been a great sufferer for five months. His last public service was at the Little Rock Conference. He reached home from that distant point very sick indeed, and only the mercy of God added to excellent care saved him from the grave. In May he attended the Bishops meeting at Detroit, and had a severe fall when about to step into a carriage, and dislocated his shoulder. He is now able to be about but has only partial use of his arm. The old veteran remembers with pleasure his last tour in the South and talks with enthusiasm of our Southern work. He said to me "My heart was so drawn out towards that work that I would like to live and labor and die in the midst of it" But in all human probability he will never visit our Southern Conferences again. He presides at the Central New York Conference this fall and will at that session close up his fiftieth year of labor in the Methodist ministry. He sends love and greeting to all the brethren".

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

F. Harvey, Shreveport: "We have had a grand time in protracted meeting. There were 36 converts, and 12 backsliders reclaimed. Our Children's day collection was $1."

A. J. Hall, Cheneyville: "We observed Children's day. The opening address was by J. E. Heskins, the closing one by myself. Rev. John Sparks preached. Sunday school collection $3 95."

J. H. Hasen, Columbus: "I was absent from my work about a month because of sickness in my family. I left it in care of one of my local preachers. I was heartily received on my return. The work is in good condition. Have two Sunday-schools with 35 in attendance at each. George W. Shelby is a Superintendent. We are in need of books and tracts."

John Qualls, Jackson: "The church is doing well, though the membership is small. I have been surprised with a new suit of clothes and a pair of gaiters from Sisters Selina Conway, Caroline Shattuck and Amanda Capital A basket meeting was held June 18th for the benefit of church repairs. Revs. Wm. Forest, Geo. Lucey, Hampton James, Chas. Monroe, Charles Kershaw, and some of our Baptist brethren participated, and we had a grand time. We raised $33 85. Sabbath school is prospering under Superintendents Geo. L. Shattuck and R. L. Perry and a splendid corps of teachers."

R. T. Louis, Plaquemine, June 27: "We have had no preaching on account of small-pox, for seven weeks, but I have kept the Sunday-school up at a private house. Our Sunday-school is doing well. I conduct it myself. We have plenty of good books. I wrote to the Sunday-school Union for assistance, and Brother J. M. Freeman sent us 79 selected books. God bless Bro. Freeman and the Sunday-Shool Union. I would advise our brethren to read the Minutes of the Conference, the ADVOCATE, and Discipline, and they will find all necessary information concerning Sunday-school helps, and thus save troubling the presiding elder for books. Times are hard, and our people are poor, but there are a faithful few, who are doing all they can to purchase a lot for our church. The opposition would be strong against us, but I have never learned to stoop to opposition. With our Captain in front we shall fight on, and conquer. I wish to give thanks to Sister Elizabeth Hebert of the Baptist Church, Mrs. Tolema of the Catholic Church, together with the faithful few sisters of our Church for their present of a $4[illegible] of clothes. May God bless and spare them to do many good deeds for the poor. We will have our pro rata for the Gilbert Haven School as soon as we can."

MISSISSIPPI.

M. Adams, Ex Prairie: "The camp meeting will convene at New Hope Chapel, five miles northeast of Macon, August 18th. We expect a nine days' session, and are making considerable preparation. We hope all will come prepared to camp on the ground. Reduced railroad fare may be had on the Mobile road from Shubuta to Columbus."

W. A. McAllister, Pelahatchie: "We have purchased a lot and built us a neat church. It was dedicated April 3d. Our pastor is Rev. J. D. Walden. Elder Williams held our quarterly conference, and about 275 listened to his addresses. On the night of the 25th fourteen were added to the church. Our church is called Little Zion. We have organized a Sunday-school."

J. B. Smith, Moss Point: "At St. Paul's Church the Children's Day service came off, with J. C. Walker as Superintendent of the Sunday-school. Collections, Wm. Lee, 70; Mary McDonald, 50; Jackson Hunt, 50; Alvina Grant, $1 55; Anna Andrew, 50. Total, $4 60. Rev. W. Blake addressed the children. There was collected in Somerville school 60, at Scranton 80, making a total of $6."

N. Cannon, Pass Christian: "My second quarterly conference was held at Bay St. Louis, 24th instant Rev. J. Campbell, P. E., was with us and we were pleased to meet him. The members of the conference made their reports admirably. On Sunday morning the elder met the Sunday-school and gave an encouraging address. At 11 a. m. the love feast was held and we had a glorious time. At 3 p. m. the elder preached a glorious sermon and administered Lord's supper, and 74 communed with us. Elder's collection, $16 25."

L. J. S. Bell, Herbert: "Children's Day was observed with marked success. After a sermon on the usefulness of training children for service in this and the life to come, I presented the claim of the Board of Education and a collection was taken up by Misses Mary Land and Emma Baxstrum, $2 80, and Masters Robert Jones and Major Baxstrum, $2 35. We are trying to get our members to get their minds on things above, by sending their children to the universities. We will send in the amount pomised Rust University before long. Have had five additions to the church. The places of worship are all too small and the houses are literally packed."

From Our Mission Rooms.

DEAR BROTHER—Glory to God in the highest. Peace on earth. Good will to men. The last twelve months have been months of victory for missions and for Methodism.

This second time we write you because we are moved of God and must speak. Six hundred millions of our kinsfolk are sinking down in sorrow and darkness, because we have not told them that Christ died for them.

Their salvation is now reduced to a question of dollars and cents. Give us the money and we will give the gospel to every human being in the lifetime of this generation. All things else are now ready. Christ has died and is risen. "Light breaks in. Peace settles on the air. God invites. The church prays. The world awakes. The doors are open. The men are ready. The cause advances. Heaven rejoices."

Dear brother, bring up to your next conference the name of every member of your church, with some contribution for mission. We want the names and amounts for publication, according to the Discipline.

Is your Sunday-school organized into Juvenile Missionary Society? Please read the enclosed circular and see that your Sunday-school Superintendent receives it. Be kind enough to read Bro. Cravens' letter sent your Sunday-school, and have it read to the school. Help him (Superintendent), help us to help God to help the heathen.

Nearly every conference and charge advances, but the field widens. Give us 25 per cent. advance this year, and again next, and we will reach a million this quadrennium. Give us one collection each month in your Sunday-school, and something from each Methodist this year, and the million is God's. Can you not give us at least this advance? We must keep step with awakening Christendom. The order is, Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward.

We remain in the hope of the gospel. Always your friends,

J. M. REED,
C. H. FOWLER,
Corresponding Secretaries.

LUCKNOW, April 23d, 1882.

DEAR CHILDREN—The girls and boys of our North India Sunday-schools send you a hearty greeting and many thanks for the "Good News" you have sent us away around here in the midst of heathenism. We now know about the Savior and have a hope of the Christian Heaven. Some day when we meet in heaven we will tell you, as best we can, how much you have done for us, and how gladly we accept the Bible. With it has come much hope and peace to us.

Let me tell you about some of the Hindoo children I have known in the Sunday-school. One youth said to me: "I was poor, in a dreary home, with no comforts—able to get but one meal a day. At the mission school I learned to think and be truthful. Now I have a happy home and comforts."

Mr. Phelps, a merchant in Madras, said to me the other day: "I take my clerks from the mission schools, for they are as intelligent as the Government school boys, and are honest and truthful." And [illegible] contractor told me that he [illegible] Christians because he [illegible] trust them. Not very [illegible] poor little Hindoo girl [illegible]; after much hunting she was found ninety miles from her home. She had lodged [illegible] of a lower caste, and [illegible] broken her caste and cared [illegible] home. The [illegible] a council, and the father [illegible] "We cannot give her to the [illegible], for they are very [illegible] the Holy Beggars, [illegible] have to beg. We [illegible] give her to the Christians, for they are honest and love children." [illegible] The Patriot, [illegible] newspaper, had [illegible] answer: "Why [illegible] get on better [illegible] school boys?" [illegible] they can be [illegible] is raising up [illegible] "Wisdom [illegible] children."

[illegible] I baptized a [illegible] followed and [illegible] relatives. [illegible] old He- [illegible] would [illegible] came [illegible] you [illegible] I [illegible]

A Pulpit Disgraced and a Congregation Insulted.

MR. EDITOR: An incident both flagrant and contemptible in itself and demoralizing in its effects has lately occurred, that arouses every lover of truth and purity in Christian character. It becomes our painful duty to hurl the denunciations of a goodly number of disciples of Christ, and of a conviction inwrought into our very being. Our credulous people have been sufficiently imposed upon and misled by political demogogues and ignorant and self-conceited so-called preachers.

It is a patent fact that half-educated men have an ear for the high-sounding and the bombastic. We find men, in all the different professions, who have had but a bare taste of an education, and who, having memorized certain high-sounding superfluities in speech, and speeches and sermons of good men, use these upon all occasions to beguile the innocent and to mislead the ignorant. There are men among us, who, having no education in the true sense of the word, but having read or heard of Jupiter, Apollo, Socrates, and other ancient philosophers or mythological deities, with great lung power thunder forth these accounts, and console themselves in the "clap" and amen! of the unwary that they are preaching wonderfully. But many of our mothers and fathers, even though they have not a collegiate education, and cannot read the story of the ancients, have what is far superior to a smell in college and in many instances superior to a college education (since many graduate from college greater fools than when they entered), that very rare commodity, namely: common sense.

Grant that they cannot comprehend thoroughly the motions of the planets when explained by a cobbler, they can and do appreciate the preaching of the gospel of Christ. By the purity of their Christian character, the piety of their life, and secret power, a result of close living, they can detect instantly the difference between the preaching of the gospel and the howling of an hypocrite. And when they ask that the "word of truth" be expounded to them by "the called of God," set apart especially to the work of the ministry, they are not to be imposed on by being given in return the scraps and husks of so called science by a false pretender.

And now to the facts. The First Street Methodist Church, containing many grand personages, even though age shows itself in the whitened head and furrowed brow, has had its pulpit disgraced, and these noble saints, who have passed through persecutions and fire of a slave period, insulted by the entrance and howling of a politico-religio-medico-charlatan, whose record is black with infamy and disgrace. This astute demogogue succeeded in insinuated himself into the confidence of the pastor of said church, on recommendation of certain brethren, who served as "cat's paws," and entered the pulpit upon a Sunday night; also secured the promise that he be allowed to preach on a Thursday night, to take a collection. The Lord's temple was profaned by the entrance of this false teacher, who caused a wave of laughter and amusement, verging on to the theatrical, as he entered. This irreverence is shocking to the delicate sense of reverence required in the passage "the Lord is in His holy temple; let all the earth keep silence before Him."

This so-called minister had been pastor of one of the African Methodist Episcopal Churches in this city, which church is now closed. He also had organized an independent church and there, free from the restraints of communion and brotherhood, the baser passions broke loose into scenes of foul wickedness too gross to mention, and too foul and contaminating to contemplate. Failing here he applied for membership into the conference from which he had withdrawn and had been expelled, and was cordially readmitted by Bishop and conference.

It is a published fact that he is guilty of a cutting affray, of having been into gambling saloons and of having used profane language. A good sister of First street church has repeatedly said that, while she was in company with a distinguished gentleman of our city, this so-called minister approaching, forgetting the rules of decency and propriety elevated his feet to the level of the table and called for a mixed drink. This Christian woman [illegible] to the instincts of her [illegible] nature remonstrated with [illegible] for tolerating such an [illegible] presence, but he (her [illegible]) that this gent- [illegible] brother of the [illegible] (?) [illegible] when he pronounces the name of the Divine.

All of these facts and more were well known to the brethren when they misrepresented that gentleman to their pastor. We cannot account for it, but upon the ground that misery loves company," or "birds of a feather flock together," or to be scriptural "The wicked plotteth against the just." But, "though hand join in hand, the wicked shall not be unpunished; for the arms of the wicked shall be broken; but the Lord upholdeth the righteous." And now a word to our people and pastors. They need to know that flights of oratory and high-sounding words do not constitute the preaching of the gospel. Away with strained efforts at eloquence in the pulpit, and tell the simple story of the cross, of Christ's life, suffering, death, resurrection and pleadings for sinners, the living truths of Christianity that cheer the soul and move holy living, honest lives and true devotedness.

We need more truth telling Christians, honest living Christians, debt-paying Christians than "golden mouthed preaching" or silver tongued oratory." We do not charge this sin wholly upon the pastor, since he is a stranger in the city and was mislead by his brethren. We do lay it upon the conscience of that pastor, and all other pastors of our churches, that they beware whom they request to preach in the pulpits over which God has appointed them by means of their Bishops. Hold sacred and defend the purity of the pulpit, in order that streams of blessings may flow therefrom and a life hid with Christ may have its healthful influence upon the members thereof. Preach scriptural holiness and live the religion of Christ every day, and the fruit must and will come in a good conscience, sheaves for the master, and "an exceeding and eternal weight of glory." We charge you to be more vigilant in keeping out the "wolves in sheeps clothing" and denounce all wickedness.

Letter from Meridian.

MERIDIAN, MISS., July 10, 1882.

EDITOR ADVOCATE: It is gratifying, certainly, to the friends of the colored people, to witness the rapid strides they are making in the matter of intellectual culture, and to contrast their present educational status with that of 1860.

It is to be regretted, however, that our own race does not take a greater interest in their progress in this particular, by their presence occasionally at their schools, at their closing exercises, and other exhibitions of their advancement up the hill of learning.

We had the pleasure, a few days since, to attend the final examination and closing concert of Meridian Academy, under the management of Mrs. M. V. Keever, and must admit that we were surprised at the results. What we witnessed there, we regarded is not inferior to any thing of the kind we have seen and heard in any school, either white or colored. In fact, Mrs. Keever is an unusually educated woman, and a superior teacher. Her refined and polished manners have done more as a mere example, to elevate the tone of our colored people here, than any other means.

Her concert and exhibition at the close would have highly entertained the most intelligent audience, and we hope that it will be repeated here soon to an audience of our white citizens, that they may see and know what is actually being done in our midst. This school is under the auspices of the colored Methodists, and richly deserves the encouragement and patronage of all who desire the welfare of the race, and a good education.

CITIZEN.

From Verona.

VERONA, MISS., July 10, 188 2.

DEAR SIRS: We had the pleasure of meeting elder J. M. Shumpert, presiding elder of the Okolona District, in our city this morning. He called at the office of the Colored Mutual Benefit Association, where all such honorable representatives of the grand old M. E. Church will always find a welcome hand extended by the president. He expressed much hope at the great out look for good on his district. He represents that he is much pleased at our success in the C. M. B A., and wished us unbounded success. The elder stated that our Association was most favorably received because we had a membership already that would guaranty its promises, and was much pleased when we informed him that we had $7,000 already in our "Security Fund," and that we had just made draft on the Treasury for $300, for the benefit due one of our members, who died in Chattanooga, Tenn., Mrs. Mary J. Trimble, and was more pleased to learn that the money will go to educate a little orphan girl who is the great [illegible] by the death of this good [illegible].

SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

THIRD QUARTER. LESSON IV. July 23d.
BLIND BARTIMEUS. (Mark x, 46-52.)

Jesus and his company were en route to Jerusalem, fresh from the lesson of suffering taught in the preceding lesson.

The knowledge that he was present greatly excited the beggar, and inspired him with highest hopes. Jesus, thou son of David—Christ was a lineal descendant of David; consequently the name was appropriately applied to him. David stood for the greatest character in Jewish history, the man after God's own heart, hence designating Christ as his own son linked him with the greatest of the nation.

Those hedging Christ about with barriers, preventing the access to him of the poorest and most unworthy, were sure to be overruled by him.

The blind man represents the sinner, who, without faith, is without the evidence of things unseen (Heb. xi, i) yet in his darkness he can at least dimly discern the evidences of the approach of one who gives life and light; he calls appealing for mercy to Jesus (that is, Savior), and the son of David (that is the great King); his cry, though not always at first answered, is heard, and he is called in turn, and receives his sight, without fee, reward, or condition of any kind, as the unpurchased and unpurchasable gift of God's love." No Cure for Consumption.

There is no cure for consumption, whether of the lungs, bowels or kidneys; yet the patient may be spared to long years of life, and the fatal termination kept from approaching, if Brown's Bitters are used. This medicine strengthens the weakened parts, restores to healthy action the impaired functions, and stops all decay and wasting away of the organs affected. It is the best life-giving medicine ever invented, and thousands of living witnesses stand ready to affirm the truth of this assertion. A trial bottle will convince you of its merits.

The Story of a Great Discovery.

There appeared not long since, in the Chicago Weekly Inter-Ocean, a remarkable article with the above title, occupying nearly five columns of that able journal. It describes very clearly and with great particularity the inception, development and successful result of an effort by a thoroughly educated and intelligent American physician to discover an element, or combination of elements in nature which would, without a resort to drug-medication, cure diseases through a restoration of weaknesses or exhausted nerve and life-forces to their normal condition. The scientific aspect of the discovery is so clearly explained in the article that both the learned and unlearned can see the basis of facts and ligitimate deductions upon which to rest. Many of the practical results already obtained through the use of this new vitalizing substance, and in cases of the utmost desperate character, where all remedies had failed and the most skillful physicians found themselves at fault, are given in the article, and its high value as a health-restorer testified to by individuals well and honorably known throughout the country, who have in their own persons proved its wonderful healing-power.

The paper referred to is written calmly, and presents the whole subject in a way to arrest attention and bring conviction to almost any one who can reason from known facts and natural laws, and weigh evidence with impartiality. In order to give the article a still wider circulation than it obtained through the source in which it first reached the public, it has been printed in a neat pamphlet and will be mailed by STARKEY & PALEN, 1100 Girard Street, Philadelphia, to any one who will drop them a letter or postal card.

I wish that all the preachers in charge would let me know how many delegates will come from their several charges, so that I may know how to get homes for them; and also how many will come horse-back, and how many will bring their wives with them. It is best to leave your wives at home, and come horse-back as a good many of our members live a long ways out of town and the brethren will have to go some distance to get homes. Our membership here is very small and it will be hard to find homes for all.

Carving "a Sow and Pigs."

Philip Wood was a village carpenter, who had developed an uncommon skill in wood carving, and had made some striking figures for the adornment of his sweetheart's [illegible], a lass above himself in rank and fortune. In the hope of improving his circumstances, and thus lessening the disparity between them, he went to London, where he sought work in vain, until his [illegible] of money was reduced to a single guinea.

The huge dome of St. Paul's was then rising above the smoke of London. Philip Wood applied to the foreman for work in carving the wood for the interior. Repulsed by him he haunted the place day after day, and at last attracted the notice of the great Sir Christopher himself.

"What have you been used to [illegible]?" asked the architect.

The carpenter, in the extremity of his agitation, could only stammer out:

"[illegible], your worship."

"[illegible]!" said Sir Christopher. "[illegible], carve me a specimen of your [illegible], a sow and pigs, it will be [illegible] in your line—and bring [illegible] this day week. I shall be [illegible]."

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

F. Walker, Monroe: "We observed Children's Day; there were 100 children and 70 adults present. We collected and forwarded to Dr. Kidder $5 25. Hard times and whiskey afflict the people. Water has just left the land, and people are going to work."

TEXAS.

A. Jackson, Groesbeck: "I have worked up three schools with 110 scholars. We have no churches on this circuit, one was burned down this year; but we are building a new one, which we hope to complete this year. It is 40x24. Children's Day was observed; collection, $1 50. Received in the church five."

S. Smith, Belton: "I wish to say a few words concerning the district conference that is to be held at Belton, July 27th. Please say to the brethren, as the times are hard, to please leave their families, for we want to do the very best we can, and are preparing everything that is necessary."

E. B. Rollins, Paris: "There are four colored churches here, and the fifth is building. All are deeply in debt but ours, and we are not clear. Whiskey has been driven out, and I think this is the reason our church prospers. Paris is ahead of any town in this matter. Our church is worth $2500, and we want just as good a minister next year as the State can afford, with pretty fair learning. We are behind other churches in this respect. Bro. Moore has done more good for us than any man since emancipation; his work in Clarkville has also been very good."

MISSISSIPPI.

A. Lemon, Durant: "Our presiding elder has made his second visit, and administered sacrament to eighty-two members. The church is prospering. The Lexington church is in debt, and it keeps on a drag. Children's day was observed, with exercises of music and singing, and speeches by ladies and gentlemen. Collection was $5 20."

J. P. Jordan, Enterprise: "Our second quarterly conference, on the Enterprise circuit, convened June 19th, 1882, J. W. Dunn, P. E., being present, and conducted the services properly, preached a fine sermon, and administered the Lord's supper to sixty communicants. Collection $16 30. On the children's-day, C. W. Ivy, P. C., preached an instructional sermon to the children, and $8 70 was taken up by the following Sunday School scholars. Gents: C. H. King and Robert Jordan. Ladies: Elizabeth Perry and Susanna Jordan."

Beauty Regained.

The beauty and color of the hair may be safely regained by using Parker's Hair Balsam, which is much admired for its perfume, cleanliness and dandruff eradicating properties.

The Virginia Democrats declared it inexpedient to nominate a candidate for Congressman at large. They will support J. E. Massey, Re-adjuster.

If bilious, or suffering from impurity of blood, or weak lungs and fear consumption (scrofulous disease of the lungs), take Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" and it will cure you. By druggists.

A LADY SAID

"Those Horrid Pimples! No, I Cannot Go. Please Present My Excuses.

Probably two-thirds of the ladies in society and homes of our land are afflicted with skin diseases of various kinds, to do away with which, if it could be done without injury, would be the happiest event of their lives. Then she would have instead of a disfigured and marred countenance, one that would be handsome, or at least good-looking, for any one with a clear, pure skin, no matter what the cut of her features is, has a certain amount of good looks which attract everybody. As it is now, she imagines every one sees and talks about "those freckles," "those horrid pimples," and other blemishes with which she is afflicted, and this is true of either sex.

To improve this appearance great risks are taken; arsenic, mercury, or high-sound titled named articles containing these death-dealing drugs are taken in hopes of getting rid of all these troubles. In many cases death is the result. No alleviation of the burning, heating, itching and inflammation is given. All troubled with Eczema (salt rheum), Tetters Humors, Inflammation, Rough Scaly Eruptions of any kind, Diseases of the Hair and Scalp, Scrofula, Ulcers, Pimples or Tender Itchings on any part of the body, should know that there is hope for them in a sure, perfect and elegant remedy, known as "Dr. C. W. Benson's Skin Cure." It makes the skin white, soft and smooth, removes tan and freckles, and is the best toilet dressing in the world. It is elegantly put up, two bottles in one package, consisting of both internal and external treatment. Our readers should be sure to get this and not some old remedy resuscitated on the success of Dr. Benson's and now advertised as the "Great Skin Cure." There is only one,—it bears the Doctor's picture and is for sale by all druggists. $1 per package.

A Sensation

HAS OFTEN BEEN MADE

by the discovery of some new thing, but nothing has ever stood the test like Dr. C. W. Benson's Celery and Chamomile Pills.

They really do cure sick headache, nervous headache, neuralgia, nervousness, sleeplessness, indigestion, paralysis, and melancholy.

Sold by druggists. Price, 50 cents a box. Depot 106 North Eutaw St., Baltimore, Md. By mail, two boxes for $1, or six boxes for $2.50, to any address.

C. N. Crittenton, New York, is wholesale agent for Dr. C. W. Benson's remedies.

On Tuesday morning July 11th, Admiral Seymour commenced the bombardment of Alexandria. In a few hours the forts and batteries facing the sea were a heap of ruins. The Egyptians made a spirited resistance, but the British loss was very small. The Khedive placed his family on a Turkish gunboat. On Wednesday the town was set on fire by the Egyptians.

"Rough on Rats."

The thing desired found at last. Ask druggists for "Rough on Rats." It clears out rats, mice, roaches, flies, bed-bugs. 15c. boxes.

It is as obligatory on Christians to give for the support of the gospel as it is to pray and talk.

How to Save.

All hard workers are subject to bilious attacks which may end in dangerous illness. Parker's Ginger Tonic will keep the kidneys and liver active, and by preventing the attack save much sickness, loss of time and expense.—Detroit Press.

We cannot live better than in seeking to become better, nor more agreeable than having a clear conscience.

SAMARITAN NERVINE.

Samaritan Nervine

Cures Epileptic Fits, Spasms, Convulsions, St. Vitus Dance, Virtigo, Hysterics, Insanity, Apoplexy, Paralysis, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and all Nervous diseases. This infallible remedy will positively eradicate every species of Nervous Derangement, and drive them away from whence they came, never to return again. It utterly destroys the germs of disease by neutralizing the hereditary taint or poison in the system, and thoroughly eradicates the disease, and utterly destroys the cause.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Female Weakness, general Debility, Leucorrhœa or Whites, Painful Menstruation, Ulceration of the Uterus, Internal Heat, Gravel, Inflammation of the Bladder, Irritability of the Bladder. For Wakefulness at night, there is no better remedy. During the change of life no female should be without it. It quiets the Nervous System and gives rest, comfort and nature's sweet sleep.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Alcoholism, Drunkenness and the habit of Opium Eating. These degrading habits are by far the worst evils that have ever befallen suffering humanity. Thousands die annually from these noxious drugs. The drunkard drinks liquor not because he likes it, but for the pleasure of drinking and treating his friends, little thinking that he is on his road to ruin. Like the Opium Eater, he first uses the drug in small quantities as a harmless antidote. The soothing influence of the drug takes strong hold upon its victim, leading him on to his own destruction. The habits of Opium Eating and Liquor Drinking are precisely what eating is to alimentiveness, as over-eating first inflames the stomach, which redoubles its cravings until it paralyzes both the stomach and appetite. So every drink of liquor or dose of opium, instead of satisfying, only adds to its fierce fires, until it consumes the vital force and then itself. Like the gluttonous tape worm, it cries: "Give, give, give!" but never enough until its own rapacity devours itself. Samaritan Nervine gives instant relief in all such cases. It produces sleep, quiets the nerves, builds up the nervous system, and restores body and mind to a healthy condition.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Cures Nervous Dyspepsia, Palpitation of the Heart, Asthma, Bronchitis, Scrofula, Syphilis, diseases of the Kidneys and all diseases of the urinary organs. Nervous debility, caused by the indiscretions of youth, permanently cured by the use of this invaluable remedy. To you, young, middle-aged and old men, who are covering your sufferings as with a mantle by silence, look up, you can be saved by timely efforts, and make ornaments to society, and jewels in the crown of your Maker, if you will. Do not keep this a secret longer, until it saps your vitals, and destroys both body and soul. If you are thus afflicted, take Dr. Richmond's Samaritan Nervine. It will restore your shattered nerves, arrest premature decay, impart tone and energy to the whole system.

DR. HARTER'S

A combination of Protoxide of Iron, Peruvian Bark and Phosphorus in a palatable form. The only preparation of iron that will not blacken the teeth, so characteristic of other iron preparations.

GENTLEMEN:—I have used Dr. Harter's Iron Tonic in my practice, and in an experience of twenty-five years in medicine, have never found anything to give the results that Dr. Harter's Iron Tonic does. In many cases of Nervous Prostration, Female Diseases, Dyspepsia, and an impoverished condition of the blood, this peerless remedy has, in my hands, made some wonderful cures. Cases that have baffled some of our most eminent physicians, have yielded to this great and incomparable remedy. I prescribe it in preference to any Iron preparation ever made. In fact, such a compound as Dr. Harter's Iron Tonic is a necessity in my practice.

Standard Silver

As a rule the quality of Government Coin has been the standard on which Silversmiths have based their quality. The Standard of United States Coin is 900-1000 copper or other alloy. The standard of Great Britain is 925/1000 pure silver to 75-1000 alloy.

Our leading Silversmiths, the GORHAM COMPANY, adopted the English standard many years ago, and so careful has been the surveillance over the quality of their ware, that not a SINGLE PIECE has been known to leave their Factory under the standard. So well is this now understood that their trade mark [trade mark] is as well known to all purchasers of Solid Silver in this country as is STERLING the Hall Mark of England, as a sure guarantee for a pure metal.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

It is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The Vigor cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair,

The Vigor is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.

BY ALFRED ENSIGN.

When sorrows wave sweeps o'er the soul,
And changes day to darkest night;
When all around is wrapped in gloom,
And vain we cry for light—more light,
Where is the balm to ease our pain,
To lift bowed head and breaking heart;
Oh, where the voice at whose command,
Our bitter anguish will depart?

Alas! that voice is not on earth;
Not here we find the healing balm;
But when we lift our thoughts on high,
We find the holy saving calm.
The solace borne on angel wings
Is by our loving Father given.
When sorrow's wave sweeps o'er the soul,
Think not of earth, but look to heaven.

Sympathy with the Russian Jews; a Paper by the Rev. James Mitchell, D. D., of Atlanta, Ga.

The number of sympathizers with the persecuted Russian Jews is much larger in this country than one [illegible] We receive letters and essays on this subject from all parts of the country written by [illegible] philanthropists of all denominations, and do not publish [illegible] of space only. THOUGHTS ON THE FUTURE OF BIBLE LANDS.

[illegible] Wise: Allow me to [illegible] through your paper a few reflections [illegible] what to me is a desirable [illegible] for Bible Lands, and I [illegible] Syria, Palestine, and [illegible]. This field should constitute [illegible] state, the political center [illegible] in the ancient city [illegible], and its commercial [illegible] cities of Egypt. The [illegible] and [illegible] wants of [illegible] century demand such [illegible] head of the Medit[illegible]

[illegible] England and Russia came [illegible] in Asia, the necessity [illegible] intermediate state at [illegible] evident [illegible] has so widely [illegible] Empire as a [illegible] and Rus[illegible] uphold one of the [illegible] of the dark [illegible] likely that [illegible] longer uphold [illegible] as a judg[illegible] Church.

[illegible] Lands; [illegible] Protest [illegible] but not [illegible] as [illegible] have a [illegible] ancient [illegible] his[illegible] Hebrew [illegible] as [illegible] human masses as well as territory, are needed; but, as I have said before, with the Turk the imperial dominion of the Arab closes, and that of the Hebrew commonwealth begins again.

We have reached the time of transition, but the movement must be slow, as Israel is not ready to assume control, and Europe is unwilling to let go the hope of dominion over Bible Lands, nor will those grasping powers turn away from the spoils of the grand Turk until obliged to do so by the money power of the world, used as an instrument in the hands of a great ruler, for neither religion nor equity has much weight in the hands of the average statesman, and the poor Hebrew may suffer persecution another thousand years, unless thus God becomes his helper and restores national power and diplomatic agencies in imperial courts of sufficient weight to command respect.

But what are the signs of the times pointing to this great, and, to me, desirable event, the erection of Bible Lands into a compost nation under Hebrew rule? First, the mutual jealousy of the European powers as to the dominion of Egypt, which, for the time being, is the governing power of the trinity of Turkish provinces. Egypt is the key to the situation, and its emancipation and independence should come first. The Hebrew bankers should purchase all its bonds, and, as far as possible, secure the control of the stock of the Suez Canal, and turn a part of the stream of Russian emigration thereon; and yet I am not clear on this question of emigration. Possibly the political education of the Russian emigrant needs that improvement that America alone can give. If my doubt is correctly taken at this point, then the duty of the hour is to attract every unsettled Hebrew in the old world to our country, that they may learn the nature of civil and religious liberty. But to return to the Egypt of to-day, England and France may exercise a protectorate over it; they will do more if I expound God's word correctly.

In the final dissolution of the Turkish Empire now at hand, France will grasp a few of the Barbary States, but will not hold Egypt.

Germany will be content to round out her home empire, and add the German provinces of Austria, and will be entirely willing to checkmate France and England in Bible Lands by a Hebrew nationality. Austria will follow Germany in this.

Russia is the friend of America. As long as a Romanoff holds the throne of Russia, the voice of America, uttered in respectful and friendly terms, will have weight, much weight, in St. Petersburg; and as Russia is willing to set a limit to her own southward march, I will venture the conjecture that she is willing her Hebrew subjects, in their flight from race troubles, which possibly she can not control, should find a secure home in the Bible Lands, and will gladly unite in a protectorate to secure their nationality therein. For some great and wonderful purpose God has allowed the great families of England, Germany, and Russia to be united closely through the House of Denmark, and may not this cause I am now pleading be one of his purposes?

Second. Of America, it is needless for me to speak to your readers; they know the pulsations of her mighty heart for liberty, equity, and religion; and how far they can rely on her moral influence in their behalf, when the hour for action comes, her existence, her institutions, is one of the grandest signs of the times we live in. Let Jew and Gentile unite to swell the volume of her moral light and power, and render needless military power, which is ever savage power.

Allow me to congratulate you on the success of the Hebrew Union College. I have watched its foundation and rise with much interest, and trust the ample wealth of your people will be so poured upon it that the reputation of your race for liberality will be sustained, and that the divided, and too often antagonistic spirit of a loose congregationalism will be remedied by mild connectional bonds of union among American synagogues. As you have united the interests of the College with the emigration [illegible] both will succeed, [illegible] people will [illegible] Jews with an against their wrongs in Russia; but in dealing with that power our true policy is to let her know that America, her ally and friend, asks the Bible Lands for the Hebrew race, of which she has more in her empire than any other nation holds, so that in exercising paternal care she has ample claim in equity to unite with us in the moral enforcement of the demand in the international court. The resolve at St. Petersburg to recognize and exercise such a paternal care would wonderfully soften the national heart of Russia, and change its whole tone toward your people in that empire. They would become to Russia an important political factor, to be wisely used in the great game of statesmanship and national reconstruction.

A Hebrew friend placed two of the late numbers of your paper in my hands. I read and returned them. They contained a lecture by a gentleman whose name I do not recollect. It was a stricture on the Christian Scriptures; it looked harsh to my eye, and not calculated to do good; much out of place, I thought, as this is an age in which Protestant or evangelical Christianity is laboring to soften the hard lot of Israel. This reflection was followed by another thought I will likewise express: A better acquaintance with our general literature among Hebrew students would soften and change this harsh tone. Let Dr. Wise challenge the benevolence of the Christian world, not only to aid the Russian refugees, but to contribute to the foundation of a Greek Chair, in what I trust may become a Hebrew University, and allow the New Testament as a text-book therein, and let it take its chances with the other classics, for its writers were all Jews. With much respect I remain yours, etc.,

JAMES MITCHELL.

ATLANTA, GA., March 20, 1882.

The Faculty and Regency of the Hebrew Union College certainly do not object to the reading of the New Testament in Greek or translation. The students, also, we think, take an interest in that volume, although time is too short to pay any particular attention to that branch of literature just now. That "lecture of a gentleman" to which the Doctor refers, was either Mr. Worthington's essay, "The Roman Trial of Jesus," who is himself a Christian gentleman, who certainly does not intend to give offense, or it was our own essay, "The Pharisees in the Gospels," which is a strictly critical and inoffensive essay. Evangelical Christians must not expect of us Jews, we think, that we have nothing to say against the Christian story, and reject it on account of prejudice, whim, or ignorance; nor must it be expected that we will not speak out whatever may fairly be said in defense of our ancient faith, which is attacked so frequently by Christian orators and writers. We appreciate the charitable and philanthropic feelings of Evangelical Christians toward our co-religionists, and do under all circumstances reciprocate in the same spirit of humanity and true religion. It must not be expected, however, on that account, that we tacitly subscribe to Christology or expect our friends to subscribe to Rabbinism; or that they or we should not utter freely whatever they might have to say in favor of their respective creeds or in rejection of the other. If we cannot agree to disagree we have not commenced to agree at all. We can and ought to be humane and charitable to one another, notwithstanding the disagreements in doctrine and form of worship, and ought to encourage free and fair discussion for the sake of truth.—American Israelite.

A treaty has been concluded between the United States and Corea. It recognizes the latter as an independent power, provides for the settlement of consuls at the open ports in Corea, allows American ships in distress to anchor even in ports not open for traffic, provides for the punishment of offenses against the law by citizens of either country, for the observance of the tariff laws of the respective countries, prohibits the export of ginseng from Corea, and the importation of opium altogether, and makes that of guns, ammunition and weapons subject to the written order of the native authorities. Scholars of either country may go to the other in order to study its language, literature, laws, arts, and industries. Each shall mutually aid and comfort the other, and thus promote intimate friendship.

The Arkansas Republican Platform.

The Republicans of Arkansas, in convention assembled, make the following declaration and platf rm of principles:

Whereas, In every republican form of government having political parties, the party in power by the suffrages of the people is the one responsible for the public welfare; therefore,

Resolved, That we arraign and hold responsible the Democratic party of Arkansas—

1. For robbing the school fund which the Republican party accumulated while in power.

2. For robbing the State treasury of nearly a quarter of a million dollars of money which had by high taxation been forced from the honest toiling citizens of the State.

3. For perverting the Peabody fund by dividing it among Democratic officials instead of using it to educate the masses in accordance with the wishes of the philanthropic donor, Mr. Peabody.

4. For repealing the law that required railroads to pay the principal and interest of the railroad aid bonds issued to the respective roads, thereby doing all in their power to cast that burden upon the people.

5. For passing a law, that sells lands for taxes without advertising, thereby depriving the honest citizen of any chance to ascertain if any errors or mistakes have been made in the assessment, levy or collection of the same, until, in many instances, too late for a remedy.

6. For passing what is known as the over-due tax law, but which should be known as the law to enrich corrupt rings and rob and oppress the people.

7. For allowing sheriffs, after they have given tax receipts for levied taxes, to report it delinquent and retain the money in their own possession, thereby robbing the State and counties of their funds and at the same time casting a cloud upon the tax-payer's title.

8. We especially hold the Democratic party of Arkansas responsible for committing the greatest possible crime against American citizenship or a free government by preventing in many counties where there are large Republican majorities, with the aid of bull-dozers and armed men, a free and honest expression of opinion at the ballot-box in the election of public officials—by intimidating voters so that they dare not go to the polls for fear of their lives; by failing to appoint judges of elections selected from both political parties, as expressly directed by law; by stuffing ballot-boxes, changing votes after they are deposited, and by making false and fraudulent returns of elections.

Resolved, That the palladium of our liberties and the perpetuity of the blessings of a free government demand that every qualified elector, rich or poor, shall have the right to cast one free and untrammeled vote at every election by the people, for any person he may desire, and to have that vote honestly counted and returned in accordance therewith, and that the person who receives the highest vote shall be peaceably inducted into office as contemplated by law.

Resolved, That we favor the enactment of a law by the next general assembly of Arkansas requiring the general election for county and State officials to be held upon the same day members of Congress are elected in this State, to the end that a fair election may be secured and the expenses for holding the same may be curtailed, thereby saving to the people thousands of dollars of the public funds by obviating the necessity of two elections when one is sufficient.

Resolved, That we are not in favor of the repudiation of the just obligations of the State, believing it beneath the dignity of a great State like Arkansas to stand upon legal quibbles, or to urge them where such a course operates as a stain on commercial honor and integrity, or where a just and valuable consideration has been received by the State; therefore we shall insist upon a settlement and payment of all claims against the State which in equity and good conscience should be paid, and that the rightfulness of such claims should be submitted to some competent tribunal for determination instead of being made the hobby of demagogues for the purpose of official preferment.

Resolved, That all State and county officials should be held to a strict accountability for their official conduct and for the funds placed in their hands; we therefore denounce the Democratic party of this State, and its officers, agents and attorneys, for the loss of the public funds of the State, and for not prosecuting and convicting well-known defaulting officials and pursuing their securities upon their bonds for the indemnification and protection of the treasury.

Resolved, That we are in favor of repealing the Democratic law of selling lands for taxes without advertising, and for restoring the old law requiring the same to be advertised; that we are in favor of the repeal of the law for collecting over due taxes passed by the last legislature.

Resolved, That we deprecate the Democratic law which brings convict labor in competition with free labor, and authorizes the hiring out of persons sent to jail for any offense, as we believe it to be an attempt to revive the enslavement of man.

Resolved, That we favor the improvement of the Mississippi river and its tributaries in such a manner as will render the navigation thereof safe and uninterrupted, and protect the citizens from overflow and inundation.

Resolved, That the permanency and stability of republican institutions are dependent upon the educated intelligence of the whole people; therefore we are in favor of the maintenance of such a system of free schools as shall enable the humblest citizen of Arkansas to obtain a thorough education in the common English branches at the public expense.

Resolved, That we are not only in favor of immigration, but also in favor of treating immigrants, after their arrival, so that they will realize the enjoyment of all the rights, privileges and immunities of native born citizens.

Resolved, That we are in favor of such legislation towards railroads as will encourage the building of more roads, instead of trying to cripple those already built.

Resolved, That we reaffirm and approve the platform adopted by the Republican party of the United States at Chicago in 1880.

Resolved, That we deplore the sad and tragic death of our late president, James A. Garfield, and view it as a great national calamity, occurring as it did in the midst of a successful and brilliant administration; and we fully indorse the administration of President Arthur, and feel assured that the wise, moderate and patriotic course pursued by him can but redound to the interest, happiness and welfare of the people.

Resolved, That we cordially invite all citizens, regardless of former political affiliations, to unite with us in the promulgation and ratification of the above declaration of principles, and in the election of the candidates pledged to their enforcement.

From Our Mission Rooms.

REV. J. H. Mansell and wife, of the North India Mission arrived in New York, June 27th, on the steamship Furnesia, of the Anchor Line. Their present address is 28 Vassar street, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

NAINI TAL, INDIA.—By report dated in May, the height of the season at Naini Tal, our mission workers were fully occupied and prospering. The place seems to have quite recovered its tone from the depression caused by the land slips. Our former mission premises are partially reoccupied. The Chapel is used for native service. Mrs. Dr. Humphrey has opened a native Christian girls' boarding school in the old mission bungalow. Two of the smaller buildings are rented. In the new English church, now under Dr. Humphrey's ministration, the congregations are good; Sunday-school of about 100 attendants. The native Sunday-school is somewhat larger.

THE FOOCHOW COLLEGE.—Subscriptions among the Chinese are progressing to complete the $4000 expected from them as the purchase money for the new building. Mr. Ahok recently reported a considerable sum received from his friends in the South. He has recently paid a visit to Hongkong and other parts. Some advanced Christian pupils are expected from the Hongkong schools. With such accession an Anglo-Chinese Theological class could be formed ere long. The students heretofore received were not Christians on entrance, but have mostly become such in the college. "The fruits of last winter's revival," writes Mr. Oblinger, "seem to promise well as to permanence. There is no playing truant on Sunday because of prejudice or fear, though there is a case now and then from mere idleness. On the whole the conduct of the boys would compare favorably with that of an equal number of pupils in America." The High School is full and doing good (Chinese) work. It is likely soon to require the whole of the building hitherto devoted partly to the Biblical Institute. The Cutler School is growing in like manner "I feel that much of the prosperity in the schools," continues the missionary, "is owing to Bro. Sia Sek Ong, who was appointed assistant in this work. He takes much of the worry and annoyance off my hands."

Mr. Ahok, on his return to Foochow, brought with him five youths for entrance at the college, two of them the sons of a rich merchant at Tam sui, the rest from Amoy.

BULGARIA.—Superintendent Challis is still contending for his right to carry on the school at Loftcha. The expulsion of the converted priest, Peter Tickoheff and his friends from Rasgrad has been already reported. Further light is thrown upon the case, and the motives at work by Mr. Tickoheff's report of his interview with the Metropolitan Bishop at Rustchuk, his ecclesiastical superior. At the close, the priest said: "If they will show me from the Bible that I do not rightly understand, I will then acknowledge my error." "But the Metropolitan," continued the report, "instead of answering me from God's word, said: 'What can I do for you, seeing that you refuse to read the history of the Oriental Othodox Church, and the ordinances of the Fathers.'" He added, also, that he was very sorry for me, as he loved me. Now, however, he said I was deceived by the Protestants, and said I would have to suffer on account of my belief. He said I could not live in any village any longer, nor in my own house, for such were both the ecclesiastical and civil laws. What the Metropolitan threatened was accomplished with the help of the local authorities; but this has not shaken me in the least; on the contrary, it convinced me more and more of the truth of the Lord's words, "If they have persecuted me, they will also persecute you." The Government ministry seem to be now siding with the ecclesiastics and seem ambitious to be considered "defenders of the faith." It is feared that the Prince will soon make a decided exhibition of subjection to Russian influence. A thoroughly Russian Cabinet is not impossible.

ITALY MISSION.—At Naples our congregation has been twice disturbed by a violent assault on the part of a few persons. Heavy stones were thrown through the windows, but fortunately no one was hurt. The leader of the assault has been put under arrest. At Milan eight new members have been received during the past year, and several probationers. Many have joined the female Bible circle, among them a baroness with her daughter. In Rome the converted parochial priest of Porto San Giorgio, Signor Cruciani, has begun his preaching services in connection with our mission, and with a success "surpassing expectation." An editorial in the Fiaccola says concerning him: "His language is clear, penetrating, fervent, and at the same time simple and plain; so that when he shall have overcome the difficulties which always beset the first attempt at such a work we are quite confident that he will become, through the Divine Spirit, an instrument specially adapted for the diffusion of the Gospel and the conversion of his fellow countrymen." His gentleness and tranquillity of spirit and affability of address are manifest toward all, but these are the least grounds of expectation concerning him. Hope is based chiefly upon the profound and spiritual consecration which seems to characterize him.

MISSIONARY CONCERT FOR AUGUST — SOUTH-INDIA MISSION — SOURCES OF INFORMATION.—Besides Dr. Reid's History, vol. ii, and the January Manual for the history of the mission, many articles on the recent development of the work will be found in the Christian Standard (Philadelphia) of the following dates: "Cheering from India," (Miss Ansley's Orphanage,) S. Bishop Hurst's Address.

Bishop Hurst sends the ministers in Iowa the following address:

"With glad and grateful heart I congratulate you on the magnificent triumph of the prohibitory amendment on June 27th. On that day the sun set on redeemed Iowa Your part in this conflict has been worthy of the first decades in the history of our church. Your irresistible appeals; your tireless work by day and night, at home and abroad; your sympathy with the sufferer, and charity towards the authors of his sorrow; your intelligent presentation of the evils of intemperance, to the young and old, in the English, German and Scandinavian tongues; your unanimous and simultaneous uprising even before the General Assembly placed the privilege of a vote before the people; and your patience in the midst innumerable of obstacles and much misrepresentation, have helped in no small measure to achieve a victory whose territorial area and scope in time no faith or imagination is strong enough to measure.

"When the first western itinerants preached in the cabins and out on the broad prairies between the Mississippi and the Missouri, they encountered only the Indian and the wild beast, and all the inconveniences of an unsettled country. But in every community where you have lived and labored, you have had intemperance as your constant foe, fortified by wealth, talents, social arts, and great persistence. Your heroism, however, has proved to be of the same firm, fine fibre as that of our fathers, and posterity will give it as secure a place in its love and gratitude. But our victory will be barren, and our accountability greater, if we do not embrace the now wider opportunity for the good work of gathering souls, of healing the wounds made by uncontrolled intemperance, and of guarding and educating our people on those more insidious dangers of intoxicating drinks from which no popular verdict or righteous legislation can exempt us. To this new phase of the great reform let us now address ourselves. For what you have done towards the triumph of the 27th, our 80,000 members in Iowa, and the millions of our communion in this and distant lands, will thank you, and join with you and your congregations in thanksgiving to him who gave his inspiration at the beginning of this great contest, and in prayer that he may give us the courage and wisdom to reap the best possible harvest from the signal popular triumph of thirty thousand majority in Iowa over the biting serpent and stinging adder of intemperance."

Plant Trees.

The man lives not in vain who plants trees; who plants them everywhere, in the streets, around his dwelling, up and down the fields, along the brooks, on the hills. While living, they are in their life, leaf, blossom, and shade as near and dear and welcome to him as kindred or friends; silent but beautiful companions, the graceful droop or waving of their branches is a continual greeting and blessing. A child brought up in familiarity with the beauty of trees, either graceful or grand, and taught to love them and care tenderly for them, has learned something beside which name, reputation, dress, or gold can bear no comparison, and gives not a tithe of the pleasure. How dearly the old man loves to sit in the arm chair under the trees he planted years ago, when he was young. They have grown grand and beautiful and strong. What a contrast to his weakness and bent form, and yet what a comfort they give! But when he has gone, and his life has ripened and died away as rich as the fall of the brilliant leaf, how precious the name and memory left behind! Existence may be lost to sight, but the trees carry his name on to distant generations. Such a one can ask no better epitaph than this:

He planted a tree,
And they
Who reclined in its shadow
Rise up and call him Blessed.

THURSDAY, JULY 27, 1882.

The sixty-sixth annual report of the American Bible Society has been received.

The late census shows that there are 14,840 persons in Texas who were born in Virginia.

The catalogue of Hedding College, Abingdon, Illinois, has been received, with the compliments of Rev. George W. Peck, president.

It is said that there were 2000 speeches a week made in Iowa in favor of prohibition during the month before the election, and then hard work at the polls by all the friends of temperance.

We have received a copy of El ... Opinion, of Santo Domingo, in which has been republished in Spanish an article from the New Orleans Price Current, on trade between the two cities.

We are indebted to Rev. John J. [illegible], Richmond, Va., for a fine engraving of the Bishops of the M. E. Church, South. The likenesses are said to be trustworthy. Price 50 cents, five for $1. Address Bro. [illegible], as above, for copies of it.

Encouraging Work.

Bishop Elliot, of Texas, in the Churchman gives his idea of "easy work" and an "encouraging place." A young clergyman once wrote to him and wanted to know if there was "any more encouraging work in Western Texas." "I wrote him," says the Bishop, "that never since the days of the apostles had there been any difficulty in finding plenty of men to do encouraging work. When I come across such sweet young persons as that, I don't say 'Go West, young man.' Give him a dear, comfortable little parish, a sweet little rectory, and let the ladies make slippers for him. I never tell a man I have an easy place for him. If you want an easy place, come and make it." There are plenty of men in the Methodist Episcopal Church whose instincts seem to turn toward "easy work," and "encouraging places." There is a great surplus of this kind. But the men now needed are those who can take hard and difficult places and make them easy. We want a little more of that spirit which characterizes the saddle-bags ministry.

As a preacher Rev. Rowland Hill was simple, clear, and fluent. He had a most remarkable talent for illustrating any great and important truth. On a certain Sabbath he gave out for his text, "We are not ignorant of his devices," and began his sermon by telling the following tale: "When a mere boy I met a drove of pigs in one of the streets of a certain town, and to my surprise they were not driven, but quietly followed their leader. This singular fact excited my curiosity, and I followed the swine till they quietly entered the butchery. I then asked the man how he succeeded in getting the poor stupid, stubborn pigs so willingly to follow him. He told me the secret. He had a basket of beans under his arm and kept dropping them as he went along and so secured his object. Ah! my dear hearers," said Hill, "the devil has got his basket of beans, and he knows how to suit his temptations to every sinner. He drops them by the way. The poor sinner is thus led captive by the devil at his will, and if the grace of God prevent not, he will get him at last into his butchery, and there he will keep him forever. It is because I am not ignorant of his devices that I am anxious to guard you against them." Perhaps some may say that this is not a very elegant illustration. We shall not have words about that. It was true and natural, and suited the audience, and Rowland Hill had sense and grace enough to speak so that those who heard him could understand what he said.

We have received a copy of the report of the Board of Supervisors of the Louisiana State University to the General Assembly. About 150 white youths are cared for. The annual appropriation of $10,000 realized in 1880-81 $6700, while $24,000 per annum are required to keep it from degenerating "into a mere high-school or a sham," as the treasurer says. The unwise scattering of the school-fund of the State between three "universities" reduces them all to an unenviable condition; and since all are founded on the color line, it may well be a matter of indifference, as it now is, whether any or all of them have any existence at all. The Baton Rouge institution, headed by the son of the Confederate General Sydney Johnston, might be assigned to the care of the Southern Historical Society; the New Orleans institution relegated to the Boys' High School; and the Colored University perpetually dissolved. As a substitute, the General Assembly might establish a State University, open to all the youth, and lawfully and generously support it with the public money.

Miss Julia Isabelle, the Woman's Home Missionary laboring at La Teche, writes: "The missionary work at LaTeche is progressing. We have a sewing-school of twenty-five scholars, from five to eighteen years of age. Our manner of instructing is as follows: We occupy one hour in sewing; this includes plain and fancy work, and one hour in religious instruction. Baldwin.

Baldwin, St. Mary parish, is making commendable progress in the direction of morality, temperance, education, and general prosperity. Twelve months ago, there were three saloons, and not hardly a respectable store in the place. Now, they have one saloon less, and two respectable stores, where intoxicating liquors are not sold, and which are closed on Sunday. At the time referred to, Sunday was the most noisy day in the week, and the streets were the scene of horse-racing, gambling, and drinking. The white people, who make up a large part of the population, were without church or Sunday-school privileges, or even a day-school that was worthy of the name. Now, they have a quiet and peaceful Sabbath, a respectable congregation of white people meeting regularly twice every Sabbath in the commodious chapel of Baldwin Seminary, the president, Rev. W. S. Fitch, A. M., serving as pastor, a Sunday-school, and a social meeting every Thursday evening. A prosperous school has been maintained at the seminary for nearly eight months. Father Baldwin, after a brief visit to Ohio, has returned full of zeal to continue his generous efforts in behalf of Christian education, and this splendid property (his generous gift to the Church), to which we have several times referred in our columns, is daily improving and becoming more valuable and beautiful, and when complete will be most admirably adapted to the purpose for which it is designated. President Fitch is making elaborate preparations for the formal opening of the seminary in October. The leading paper of the parish and the best citizens speak in terms of high praise of this noble enterprise, and cherish the hope that the people of Louisiana will not fail to appreciate it. The business interests of Baldwin are mainly in the hands of honorable, sober, and enterprising men, and with its excellent railroad and river facilities, and the splendid country back of it, its prosperity and success seem to be assured; and it is sure to become a strong point for Christian education and Methodism. At the time of the late flood, when so much of this part of the State was inundated, Baldwin village and four thousand acres of land were free from the great overflow. A fine opportunity is here afforded to people who value church and school privileges to buy homes on easy terms. Baldwin is situated in one of the most healthy and beautiful locations in Louisiana, and must in the near future become not only an educational center, but also a favorite winter resort. May it be early preempted for the Lord Jesus Christ, and become a mighty center of sanctified learning and power. Father Baldwin requires of all to whom he sells real estate that they pledge themselves never to sell intoxicating liquors on the premises, and not to do business upon the Sabbath.

A Sketch of Bishop Scott.

Bishop Scott was born at Cantwell's Bridge, now Odessa, Del., Oct. 11, 1802. He was bred to hard labor. The event upon which his life turned was his conversion to God, Oct. 16, 1821. He joined the Philadelphia Conference in 1826. These were "days of mighty preachers and preaching;" but he soon became one of the foremost men in the Conference. In 1840 he was appointed principal of Dickinson College and Grammar School, where he served three years. At the General Conference of 1848 he was elected assistant book agent of the Methodist Book Concern, New York. In 1852, at the same time of Bishops Ames and Simpson, he was elected Bishop. Dr. Buckley remarks: "Three stronger men were never in our history elected to the office; with their senior associate Janes they carried the administration of the Church triumphantly through the years of the Rebellion." He was the first of our bishops who made the tour to Liberia, Africa, a journey which shook him for years afterward. In 1872 he was stricken with paralysis, and has done but little official work since. Dr. Buckley observes: "It is the custom in our Conferences to call each man's name, and he who is authorized to speak answers, if all is well, "Nothing against him;" and so our good Bishop, who has so meekly borne for thirty years his high office, as he goes to his rest, is accompanied with the universal testimony, "Nothing against him; nothing, absolutely nothing. Pure and above all reproach."

Rev. J. G. Vaughan, the new pastor for Ames Methodist Episcopal Church, reached New Orleans last Saturday and regularly entered upon his work. Bro. Vaughan [illegible] Ames Church as [illegible] and suffering [illegible], hoping to [illegible] health by a change of climate. Louisiana and Texas are bad places for worn-out and broken down men. Nor does he come to displace or undo the work of any other man, but as a Methodist preacher to do his work. He seems to be a man of clear convictions and strong decision. We heard him preach his first sermon Sabbath morning, and were pleased. He gave us what we call a real gospel sermon, full of good common sense. As a preacher he does not orate nor mince, but speaks words of soberness plainly. The brethren were decidedly pleased with their new pastor. We extend to Bro. Vaughan a hearty welcome to his new and important field of labor. "May his bow abide in strength."

The Purification of Congress.

The press of this section is republishing what purports to be sentiments expressed by Mr. Calkins, of Indiana, on partisan and unfair methods of deciding election cases by the House. Mr. Calkins is chairman of the elections committee, and his remarks are construed as a censure upon the decisions of his associates in the House in recent cases. We do not know what particular cases Mr. Calkins referred to, but if he has in view the South Carolina, Florida, or Alabama cases, his position will excite the sympathy and regret of peaceful and Union loving citizens of the South. Every case acted upon by the House to date has met with their universal approval, and they are found within the lines of all political parties.

The purification of Congress by the ejectment of men whose certificates are based on successful nullification of national laws, tissue ballots and false counts of the vote, is an eminently national and not a party matter. It needs to be urged with vigor. When communities combine under the cardinal principle that the end justifies the means, Southern Bourbons, like the Mormons of Utah, may present perplexing problems for examination, and appeal to the love of power of a strong minority party for support, yet a steady adherence to republican principles and doctrines, and above all to common instincts of justice, will be sufficient to overcome the sophistry, the perjury and the consummate skill of these enemies of the Republic.

The unseating of Messrs. Dibble, Chalmers, Wheeler, Finlay, Tillman and Shelley, and the admission of the Congressmen elect, was a great triumph for the law and order party in the Southern States; and a notice to the unscrupulous that righteous methods are safest in the conduct of elections. Let Mr. Calkins and his colleagues stand firmly to their duty in the premises. It is certainly unpleasant, yet necessary for the safety and prosperity of the country.

Senator Hill on Equal Rights.

Benjamin F. Hill, U. S. Senator from Georgia, now lying at the point of death in Atlanta, is reported by Col. Lamar, of the Macon Telegraph and Messenger, as follows:

Motioning us to a chair near his own, he grasped our hand and sat for many moments fixedly gazing into our face, as if to read our thoughts. Suddenly he raised himself, and fronting us fully with a mighty effort, he said: "I had desired to live for two reasons, chief among which was that I might have made a speech, which I had partly prepared, to the people of this whole country, upon the relations between the white man and the black man, I have always been in favor of giving the negro equal and exact justice—nothing more and nothing less. My friend, we cannot have good government or stable society in this land when one party seeks to dominate the other by the use of the negro vote." His voice had grown stronger and more distinct as he spoke, and then came the old flash to his eye, the familiar poise of the head and his marked gesticulation.

The Senator might have added "or by the use of tissue ballots, false counts, and shot guns."

We take the following from the Times-Democrat of Friday last. It tells its own tale of woe, and needs no comments of ours:

A SERIOUS DILEMMA.

Owing to one those extraordinary and deplorable mistakes that sometimes occur in the best regulated Legislatures, as in the best regulated families, a very serious danger threatens the public schools of our city.

It appears that the bill introduced in the Legislature to raise a revenue for the support of the public schools of New Orleans, provided for an appropriation, by the city and State, of a sum not exceeding $250,000, as it passed the Senate, but, by an error of an enrolling clerk, the amount was changed to the sum of five hundred and fifty dollars. The act, as erroneously enrolled, was unfortunately signed and promulgated without the error being noticed, and most curiously, the original bill containing the proper appropriation of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars has been mislaid and temporarily lost.

Should the original bill be found, as we most earnestly hope it will the Secretary of State declares he will have it duly promulgated as the correct bill, and that will doubtless avert the threatened danger to our public schools, which else would be compelled to close on the first of January, 1883, and remain closed until some measures of relief could be adopted, which would probably involve an extra session of the Legislature.

LaTeche District Conference.

The first district conference of LaTeche District has just closed a very interesting session, in the town of Washington, La. Fifty-six members answered the roll; and every charge was represented. The conference organized on Friday, July 14, with Rev. A. E. P. Albert, Presiding Elder, in the chair, and Revs. S. E. H. Morant and H. J. Wright as secretaries. The usual disciplinary questions were all answered satisfactorily, and elicited very profitable discussions. The literary exercises, the anniversaries, as well as the conference meeting feature of the session were all highly appreciated and greeted by crowded houses. The various reports showed the district to be in a very promising spiritual and, with some exceptions, an encouraging financial condition. The Gilbert Haven School of Theology interest was given a grand rally, which promises tangible results. Concerning the SOUTHWESTERN and its editors, the Conference adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, That we re-affirm our devotion to the SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and that we urge upon our people the importance of subscribing and paying for it; and that we will take every advantage to circulate it in our charges and in the District.

Resolved, That while we regret the removal of Rev. Dr. Hartzell from its editorship to another sphere of great responsibilities in our church, we still wish him God-speed; and that in the Rev. L. P. Cushman, the present editor, and Rev. A. E. P. Albert, our Presiding Elder and his assistant, we have two worthy and able defenders of the faith and of our interest, for whom we can and will do all in our power for their success, and the greater stability of the SOUTHWESTERN.

The conference was well provided for by the good people of Washington, to whom they returned a hearty vote of thanks. A vote of thanks was also tendered to the Washington Argus, the Morgan La. & Texas Railroad, and the citizens of all classes for their uniform courtesies. The next district conference convenes at Boonsville. The following apportionment for benevolent collections to be paid at the next annual conference was agreed to unanimously:

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Mrs. Bishop Simpson is Vice-President of the American Silk Grower's Association.

—Juan B. Alvarado, Governor of California from 1836 to 1843, died at Pueblo on the 14th, aged 73.

—Senator Joseph Brown, of Ga., has given $50,000 to the State University at Athens, Ga., the interest on which is to be used for educating poor young men.

—The Houston Methodist, M. E. Church, South, says: "Rev. D. W. Carter, pastor of Jonesboro station, will probably go as a missionary to Mexico next fall."

—Rev. Dr. Matlack, after recovering from malarial fever, had erysipelas in his face and eczemia in both hands and arms up to the elbows. He is now slowly gaining.

—Rev. Hugh Miller Thompson, of Trinity Episcopal Church this city, has received a call to go to Rochester, New York. Numerous petitions have been presented to him from his congregation urging him to remain. This is a pleasant incident to record.

—Judah P. Benjamin, has enjoyed great prosperity as a lawyer in England. Recently in looking over his list of cases, he found that it included just half of all the suits from the entire realm that were before the House of Lords on appeal.

—Rev. J. R. V. Thomas, D.D., pastor of the A. M. E. Church at Bayou Sara, and formerly of the St. James A. M. E. Church in this city, died at his home in Bayou Sara last Thursday and was buried on Friday. In the death of Dr. Thomas, the African M. E. Church loses one of its ablest, purest Christian ministers. We extend our sympathy to the bereaved family.

—Prof. J. M. McPherron, for the last seven years the popular and very efficient principal and musical director of Straight University, has severed his connection with the University, and goes to Boulder, Colorado. He has our best wishes for his success. His departure is very much regretted by his many friends.

Falkinburg, transferred to Austin Conference, goes to Galveston to succeed Bro. Miller in the charge of our Church there. We We were pleased to meet these brethren.

—Hon. E. Jefferds, nominated for Congress by the Republicans of the third district of Mississippi, is a lawyer, stands high in his profession, and was formerly one of the Judges of the Court of Errors and Appeals of Mississippi. Though a former citizen of Iowa, he has gained a residence in Mississippi, and commands the confidence and respect of the people.

—Auguste Gottschall preached his farewell sermon at Union Chapel. He has been a help to many of our brethren with large congregations, assisting at communion service, and preaching in the different churches. He left for Kansas City, Missouri, to seek better health and business. We hope that he will be successful, and that God's blessings may follow him.

—The National Temperance Advocate, for July, referring to the comments of this paper on Hon. T. T. Allain's experience in a Baton Rouge bar-room, says: "Mr. Allain made a great mistake when he consented, even upon so pressing an invitation from a wealthy white planter, to go into the saloon at all. He should become a total-abstainer, and also use his position and opportunity as a legislator to render unlawful and close up all the Louisiana whiskey-shops, and thus wipe out the "liquor color line."

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

H. C. Armston, Live Oak: "Saturday night, July, 1st, F. Lewis, C. M. Smith, and others gave a supper and the pastor $5 50. They had a grand time. Elder Cushman was here at the time. It is always joyous to us to have the Elder come around with sweet and kind words. May he live long."

T. Jackson, Natchitoches: "We held a basket meeting, July 4, with a large attendance. The following preachers were on the stand: C. W. Reeves, King Mickelberry, Wm. Harrison, John Jefferson, A. Spears, T. Jackson, and S. Duncan. Collection, $30 80. At the close of the quarterly meeting, forty-nine spoke for Jesus."

George Washington, Ouachita City: "After my first sermon, eight were received on probation, and some backsliders renewed their vows. Then the high water deprived us of a place to worship. Financially, we are embarrassed, but the people are in good spirits. I have two good Sabbath-schools. In the midst of hard times, we have raised for all purposes $91 60, and received thirty-one additions."

Bro. B. J. Jackson, superintendent of the Sunday-school, Terrebonne, says: "Our Sunday-school is having a wonderful degree of prosperity. Since the first quarter, over eighty have joined it. Many of the old people have joined the school, and seem to enjoy it much. Children's Day was a gala day for our school. We raised on that day fifteen dollars for the Gilbert Haven School of Theology. Bro. Carr, our pastor, is doing a good work. He has put brick pillars under the church, and is loved and respected by all the people."

Wm. Davis, New Iberia: "Our church and Sunday-school are in a prosperous condition. We had a grand exhibition on the Fourth of July, and had a very nice time. We owe a debt of gratitude to Mrs. Laura F. Roberson, Miss Julia Mobley, and Miss Susie Mobley for the interest they manifested in our exhibition. Their sweet music, rendered on the occasion, was charming. These ladies have always shown free and noble hearts toward aiding the Church. Such instruments are a blessing to our Church. We had 130 children on the stage the night of our exhibition, and a large congregation. A bright future awaits our church in this place. Bro. John Pierre, from Wesley Chapel, New Orleans, superintended the exercises. He is doing much good here in our Sunday-school. Pray that the Lord will continue to bless us in our good work."

TEXAS.

A. C. Culbreath, Huntsville: "Work is in good condition. Elder Pullam held second quarter. Collection, $12 70."

Jeremiah Smith, Orange: "I am working hard here, and my progress is slow. In a meeting of two weeks 6 joined on probation."

D. W. Tucker, Lavernia: "Our people were gladdened by the presence of Elder Henson. Reports were favorable. sixty members on the circuit. Raised $33 85 in behalf of the church. Elder's collection, $4 50. Seven joined on probation."

F. Gilmore, Anderson: "Children's day passed off nicely. There was a large turn out, recitation of verses, an address on education, and the collection was $4 75. The young people are greatly interested, and some of them are preparing to go to high schools."

Geo. W. Norris, Marshall: "Elder Molloy appointed me to Cypress Circuit in February, and high water made it difficult to reach. There are four appointments, and a large membership. Have had six converts and ten additions. Will start a protracted meeting, also build a new church at Cedar Grove soon."

A. Foster, Mayafield: "Our third quarterly conference was held at Milam Grove, 15th and 16th inst. Rev. H. Swann, of Calvert, was with us, and we were benefited by his words. Sixty partook of the Lord's supper. We gave the Elder $5 90. The Sunday-school is alive. Times are hard, but we are moving on."

A. Harper, Victoria: "Our second quarterly conference convened on the 24th inst. The brethren were all present. The reports were all very good. The Committee on Education reported $30 raised for Austin Seminary. The session was a pleasant one, and a great many were out to visit the conference. After the business was transacted the elder made some very appropriate remarks on the punctuality of the brethren, and other matters of importance. On Sunday morning the children had their review for the quarter by the pastor, then a short lecture by the elder. At 11 o'clock we enjoyed a love feast meeting. At 3 o'clock had a glorious sermon by the elder on Judgment, after which he baptized five infants. At night we had the pleasure of hearing Rev. A. Richard, Principal of the Victoria high school. He had arrived in company with the elder and being invited, accepted and spoke on the institution of the sacrament. A collection of $19 65 was taken for the elder, then the sacrament was administered to 150."

MISSISSIPPI.

J. B. Smith, Moss Point: "The second conference on Pascagoula circuit was held by Elder Campbell at Summerville. Four Sunday-schools, with 185 pupils, are in good condition. Received, 10 members; expelled, 3; died, 3; children's collection, $6; Rust University, $220; paid pastor, $106 15; house rent, $18; furniture, $36; elder, $5—total, $167 15."

S. Blackwell, Maysraville; "There are a large number of people here, but we are sorry to say we have no traveling preacher. The last visit from a presiding elder was in 1877. The church has been taken from us for debt, and we are crying aloud for help. Please do something for us. There are four or five counties along the Mississippi river that have no M. E. churches in them, I think it is a shame. Please send laborers into this field to work."

P. Blue, Greenwood; "Owing to high waters, we could not have our first quarterly conference. Our second conference was held June 4th and 5th. Elder Barnsy was on time, and had a very pleasant session. The brethren were highly pleased with his sermon. The work is prosperous; 36 additions to the church, 16 children baptized, and 5 adults. The Sunday-schools doing well. The stewards report shows that $170 had been raised for the preacher in charge and $22 50 for the presiding elder. The conference elected a board of trustees to act with the preacher in charge to try to build a church in Carrollton."

TENNESSEE.

A. Burdett, Friendship: "We had a good time children's day. Collection, $3. Elder Price gave us a good talk. Three new members were taken in."

J. Kenseer, Manchester: "I have had a temperance experience of two weeks. What a dreadful time it was. I could scarcely believe that I could hold out, but, thank the Lord, I am ready to uphold that cause. God help all of our preachers to abstain from the use of tobacco and strong drink."

Edward Pinkett, Watson: "I found my way to my appointment after much delay caused by high water. Brother Higgins little society was alive waiting for me. Their love for Bro. H. cannot be told. The Sunday-school is in a lively condition. There is a hopeful, prosperous opening here for us."

H. Robinson, Spring Hill: "The third Sunday was observed as Children's day. The forenoon was devoted to education talks. Milton McKissacks, Milton Sharber, Henrietta Sharber, and Sally Williams took the collection, $1 45. The children now are the coming church members."

E. Provine, Smart Station: "Third quarterly conference was held by Elder Price. Pastor's reports in some respects was encouraging. Stewarts reported: On missions $13, Freedman's Aid $8, church extension $5, S. S. Union 50c, Bible cause 35c, Bishops $3, claimants 35c. Quarterly collection was $14 45. Two joined the church, three additions. Through the energy of Mrs. Provine $16 53, has been raised to purchase a bell for the church. There are four prosperous Sunday-schools on the circuit. At Fingal's chapel we are preparing to ceil the church, have raised $13 for the work."

B. F. Whitley, Sparta: "Second quarterly meeting was held by Elder Key. He spent three days with his visiting. We are still trying to build up the mother church. I have had 11 additions since conference, and there are three good Sunday-schools on the work. Have built one new box church, and have bought a lot of two acres in town for $120, which will be all paid for the last of November. Some of the lumber is on the ground. We will lay the corner stone August 12th. We need a church in town very much, as the nearest is a mile and a half from Sparta. Rev. Jesse P. Price spent three days with me, preached good sermons, and during the meeting we had seven converts."

S. P. Bell, McMinnville: "Our third quarterly conference was held by Rev. J. P. Price, of the West Tenn. District, and his wise counsels and rousing sermons will long be remembered by the people of all denominations. The several committees, and members of the conference were all in time with their reports. Two joined the church, 7 were received into full connection. Missions committee reported $4 80, education $1 25 tracts 50c, Freedman's aid 25c, church extension 25; quarterly collection was $20 55. The claims of the elder and preacher were promptly met. Intemperance is rife among certain classes here but we hope to succeed in overcoming the evil."

W. S. Butler, Gallatin: "We held our quarterly meeting on the 25th ult. Our presiding elder, Rev. James Pickett was with us, and preached some powerful and practical sermons to the people, which will not soon be forgotten by those who heard them. May God speed him, he is doing a good and noble work among our people. We held our Love Feast on the following Tuesday night, and truly had a glorious time. The Church is in a thriving condition, considering the bad crops of last year. Ninety odd paid their fees; we collected $26 60. We also have a large and thriving Sunday-school. We have collected up to the present time $9 for the missionary cause. Also $1 for the Sunday-School Union. For some cause we have failed to receive our Sunday-school papers for three weeks. We made a grand rally all along the line on the 2d inst., for the temperance cause. R. C. Walker, one of our young local preachers from the Central Tennessee College preached us a stirring temperance sermon in the afternoon. He promises to be a young man of much service to the Church. Our day school which will last six months is progressing finely, 126 scholars enrolled. Pray for us."

Read This Slip.

The corresponding secretaries of our Missionary Society have just sent out statements to each conference of the amounts raised per member last year for missionary work, under the above caption.

The slip I received surprised me very much when it stated that "the Tennessee Conference last year only gave 6 1 5 cents per member to save the world." I venture the assertion without fear of successful contradiction, that there was not, and is not now, a member among the five thousand of the conference but was, and is able to give more for the missionary work. The oldest, blindest, or youngest member could have done more than that for so ground a cause. Why they did not some one else may be able to say. As a race our people work harder, spend more money, and get less for it than any other race; all things being equal. Nevertheless, there is no other race that gives freer and more liberally, comparatively, for the cause of our Master than our race. And the truth is that they will give more liberally to the cause of missions if they can but [illegible] that the heathen who once [illegible] down to wood and stone are crying "come over and help us." But how can these people [illegible] a [illegible], one who has in-[illegible] himself, and full of zeal [illegible]? I feel like confessing the sins of my brethren by declaring that the missionary cause has suffered because of the negligence of pastors. "I do remember my faults this day." It is very evident that there is not one of our five-thousand members but what would give as much as five cents a week for the missionary cause, if there was some way arranged to collect every week. Now if this was done we would raise the magnificent sum of thirteen thousand dollars. Now, our brethren of the Southern German Conference who gave $1 35 7-10 per member last year, only gave about .0037 cents per day, or .0259 cents per week, and yet it was a good round sum. Now I see no reason in the world why each member of our churches can not give as much as one cent per week for missions. If each of the five thousand members give only one cent per week we will be able to report $26,000 at the annual conference. It does seem to me that floods, back waters, exodusters, or droughts ought not to keep any member from giving one copper cent per week for this grand cause. There are members of our several churches that never give as small a sum as five cents at any contribution, and their contribution would make up for a score of others who do not intend to give anything. Certainly, there is no member of any of our churches but what would give five cents four different times in a year for this cause. If they but did this we would have one thousand dollars for missions. If our members are provoked to good works by the liberality of our German brethren above mentioned, so that this year will give as much per member as they did last year, we will carry to conference six thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars for missions. Ought we to be satisfied doing less than this? Some will probably say making collections on paper and collecting money are two different things. I admit it, but at the same time is it not possible for us to do as much? Some will think, and not [illegible] to say so, as well as to won[illegible] I expect my members to [illegible] how much I will report. I [illegible] that I expect them to [illegible] they can and intend to [illegible], as near as possible [illegible] from the people for [illegible] the conference as such, [illegible] I intend to have [illegible]. This year [illegible], work is plentiful, [illegible] raging; and [illegible] to me that we [illegible] to conference this [illegible] $116 97 as last year, but [illegible] up as much as 25 cents [illegible] at $1250 for the [illegible] of the world. We [illegible] we but stop and re[illegible] the horrible pit from which [illegible]; if we will give as [illegible] to the missionary [illegible] to funerals, picnics, [illegible]. Now it seems to [illegible] called for to tell the [illegible] put off their decent clothing [illegible], coffee, and making [illegible] that they may [illegible] or any other cause, for [illegible] Bishop [illegible] said once, [illegible] and members are [illegible]

SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

THIRD QUARTER. LESSON V. July 30th. THE TRIUMPHAL ENTRY. Mark xi, 1-11.

Animals dedicated to sacred purposes must have been previously unused (Num. xix, 2; Deut. xxi, 3; 1 Sam. vi, 7). It is probable, therefore, that the use of the ass's colt was to designate the sacredness of the Lord's person and of the act he now performs. The ass was a common beast of burden. It turned out that they were questioned about their intentions in taking the colt; but were permitted to depart in peace upon making the reply Jesus told them to make: "The Lord hath need of him." They spread their garments on the road before the Savior, a usual method of showing great respect to royal personages, and they now recognize Jesus as the king whose kingdom is on the eve of being proclaimed. There is an intimation that the disciples supposed the supreme moment had arrived when the kingdom of Christ would be established. While this was not true in the sense imagined by them, yet the kingship of Christ is asserted in this triumphal entry, a kingship none the less real and glorious because its nature was misapprehended. On his first entry, Jesus goes into the temple, inspects everything, but touches nothing, retires from its precincts for the night, and returns in the morning prepared in mind and spirit for the work of purging his Father's house. It was too late for anything more that day. He went out unto Bethany with the twelve; the distance was less than two miles. In the crowded passover season accommodations within the city may have been limited. There was possibly some danger from enemies. Besides, Bethany was the home of Mary and Martha, his friends.

Over in Georgia.

The Southern Cultivator and Dixie Farmer, of Atlanta, Georgia, says:

The South deemed it her right, under the sanction of the great principle announced by the fathers, to separate from the North and build a government for themselves. They, also, claimed that a necessity required the exercise of the right declared. But the North negatived both the principle and the necessity by her overwhelming power, restraining the seceding States and holding the government together by the sword. This effort on the part of the Southern people to put into practical use the great principle enunciated by our fathers as an inherent and an inalienable right, proved a failure, and we must await the disclosures of the years to come as to how much the principle has suffered in the unequal and disastrous conflict. If by the defeat of the South we are to understand that our fathers erred when they proclaimed the right of a people to throw off one government and establish another, then there is little left which can call for the commemoration of the Fourth of July.

The Defiance, of Atlanta, says:

Georgia is infested with a band or a rising generation of bulldozing young white men that do not regard the law any more than if there were no law. It matters not if a person be innocent of any charge or crime, of which he is accused, these "law breakers" do not wait to let the law do its duty, but band together and either horse-whip, murder or lynch whichever is the most convenient to them. We know of not less than twenty or thirty colored people that have [illegible] and riddled with shot, and of these many cases that we know of and none [illegible]. The [illegible] Who is to blame? The bourbon democracy is to be blamed, and are to be responsible for the lives of these poor people. Can a country prosper with such a law as this? Can a country prosper with lynch law and murder as their chief corner-stone?

[illegible]

The August St. Nicholas is to be especially devoted to travel and adventure, told in story and poem and picture. Mr. Boyesen will write of "How Bart went Whale Hunting;" the adventures of Mrs. Peterkin in Egypt will be entertainingly described; there will be some funny verses about "Punjaubs of Siam," a Turkish story of "Hassan's Watermelon," an interesting account of a "Visit to the Home of Sir Walter Scott," "How a Hoosier Boy saw the Tower of Pisa," "Stories from the Northern Myths," "A Balloon Story," etc., etc. One of the most beautifully illustrated articles in the number will be one on "Summer Days at Lake George."

The American Agriculturist for August contains a carefully prepared list of a large variety of interesting facts and statistics, giving a full showing of the whole Agricultural work, resources, and production of the United States, and of each State and Territory—of great value for future reference. Orange Judd Co., 751 Broadway, N. Y.

The first place in "The Popular Science Monthly" for August is given to the concluding part of the address of Emil du Bois-Reymond on "The Physiology of Exercise." In "National Necessities and National Education," Dr. B. W. Richardson makes a strong and direct plea for attention in the public schools to a broader physical education. Mr. Wm. W. Jacques, Ph. D., contributes a paper on "Acoustic Architecture." M. Stanislas Meunier, a French geologist, describes "A Gigantic Fossil Bird." Professor Tyndall gives the measure of the "Progress of the Germ Theory of Disease." Prof. Harvey W. Wiley explains "The Chemistry of Sugar," and adds the assertion that this country ought to make its own sugar, and could do it if it would. A large amount of space is given to literary notes and brief miscellaneous articles, and they are of unusual value. New York: D. Appleton and Company. Fifty cents per number, $5 per year.

In the North American Review for August, Rev Henry Ward Beecher writes of "Progress in Religious Thought," pointing out the many influences, social, educational and scientific, which are by degrees transforming the whole structure of dogmatic belief and teaching. T. V. Powderly, the official head of the Knights of Labor, the strongest union of workingmen in the United States, contributes a temperate article on "The Organization of Labor." The well-known British military correspondent, Archibald Forbes, writes of "The United States Army," dwelling more particularly on those features of our army management which appear to him to be most worthy of imitation by the military governments of Europe. "Woman's Work and Woman's Wages," by Charles W. Elliott, is a forcible statement of one of the most urgent problems of our time. The author sees no advantage to be derived from the employment of woman in man's work, whether of brain or of hand; such employment, he insists, only reduces man's wages, and does not really add to the resources of the whole class of workers. In "The Ethics of Gambling," O. B. Frothingham analyzes the passion for play with rare ingenuity. "The Remuneration of Public Servants," by Frank D. Y. Carpenter, gives matter for serious consideration, both to the civil service reformers and their opponents. Finally there is a paper on "Artesian Wells upon the Great Plains," by C. A. White, of the Smithsonian Institution. The Review is sold by booksellers generally.

It Has Worked Wonders.

A lady writing from Racine, Wis., makes this gratifying report: "We finished taking our second supply of Compound Oxygen last month; it has worked wonders for my mother. When she began treating with the Oxygen she was extremely low and prostrate in her bed with a variety of complaints. I had no hopes of her recovery. She is now able to go about the house and do many pieces of work, and is a continual testimony before me of the wonderful power of Compound Oxygen." Our Treatise on Compound Oxygen, containing large reports of cases and full information, sent free. Address Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1109 and 1111 Girard Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

From Our Mission Rooms.

REV. J. O. DAVISON, who, after nine years labor in the Japan Mission has returned to this country with his family for a season, reported at the Mission Rooms July 12th. He confirms all the hopeful utterances of others concerning the anticipated progress of Christianity in Japan. He feels special delight in the direct work of preaching the gospel to the people, and has made encouraging evangelistic tours in the southern section of the country, or on the island of Kiusiu, where his permanent station, Nagasaki, is situated. Mr. Davison's present address is Flemington, N. J.

REV. JULIUS SOPER'S TOUR IN JAPAN.—In the absence of Dr. Maclay, Mr. Soper has acted as Superintendent of the Mission. We have recent intelligence of a tour of observation and evangelistic work in which the ordinances were administered at many of our stations, begun by Mr. Soper, May 2 and closed by his return to Yokohama, June 6. Dr. Maclay was expected there June 25.

DR. MACLAY'S ADDRESS, on account of the removal of the Theological school from Yokohama, is now Tokio, Japan.

LOFTCHA, BULGARIA.—In this place, where the governmental obstructions to our work were recently reported, Superintendent Challis has finally secured so much advantage as to proceed with the new building. The authorities will not permit it to be called a school house; but no conditions are imposed as to the use made of it.

UTAH MISSION.—Rev. T. C. Iliff has been recently appointed by Bishop Wiley to the pastorate of our church in Salt Lake City. Mr. Iliff has been in charge of the church at Bloomington, Ill., and will remove greatly to the regret of the people. His former experience in Utah, however, and other reasons combine to render his presence and labors there, in the view of the Bishop, especially important at the present time.

"REJOICE WITH US"—So says the pastor, Rev. G. R. Vanhorne, of Central Church, Rockford, Illinois. They raised $750 for missions—being $430 above assessment, $250 over the year before which was looked upon as the best year ever known. All this, while with great effort the society is building a $30,000 church edifice.

What a Former Invalid Said.

"I suffered for years from an exhaustive weakness, and was fast approaching consumption. I felt that insanity and a premature grave was inevitable; but thanks to Brown's Iron Bitters, I am again restored to perfect health of mind and body." DEATHS.

Drowned at West End, June 24th, little Benjamin Taylor. By the consent of his mother he went fishing with Mrs. Watson, in company with other children but never returned home until found in the lake and brought home by his father. This was a painful stroke to the mother. The family belonged to First Street Church, the boy to class No. 11. The funeral was conducted by Rev. Montgomery, pastor, on the 26th and attended by large company of friends.

On Tuesday night of last week, Miss Sarah Griffin, who had so long and patiently borne the heavy cross of intense physical suffering, yielded up her pure spirit and "crossed over the river to rest under the shade of the trees." Our sympathies go out to the afflicted family in their sad bereavement, but they have the blessed assurance that she has "only gone before, and awaits their coming to welcome them to that bright world where pain, sickness and sorrow, and parting and death will be known and felt no more forever.

When a board of eminent physicians and chemists announced the discovery that by combining some well known valuable remedies, the most wonderful medicine was produced, which would cure such wide range of diseases that most all other remedies could be dispensed with, many were skeptical, but proof of its merits by actual trial has dispelled all doubt, and to-day the discoveries of that great medicine, Hop Bitters, are honored and blessed by all as benefactors.—Democrat.

West Tennessee District—Tennessee Conference.

I wish that all the preachers in charge would let me know how many delegates will come from their several charges, so that I may know how to get homes for them; and also how many will come horse-back, and how many will bring their wives with them. It is best to leave your wives at home, and come horse-back as a good many of our members live a long ways out of town and the brethren will have to go some distance to get homes. Our membership here is very small and it will be hard to find homes for all. L. M. MOORE, P. E.

A Mite Song.

[illegible] a drop in the bucket,
But every drop will tell;
The bucket would soon be empty,
[illegible] the drops in the well.

[illegible] a poor little penny,
It was all I had to give;
But as pennies make the dollars,
It may help some cause to live.

A few little bits of ribbon,
And [illegible] toys, they were not new,
But they made the sick child happy,
Which has made me happy, too.

Only some outgrown garment;
They were all I had to spare;
But they'll help to clothe the needy,
And the poor are everywhere.

A word, now and then of comfort,
That costs me nothing to say;
But the poor old man died happy;
And it helped him on the way.

God loveth the cheerful giver,
Though the gift be poor and small;
What doth he think of his children
When they never give at all,

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

LOUISIANA.

H. Jackson: "A grand picnic was given by the Sabbath-school, June 18, at Pleasant Hill. There was a large attendance: Rev. A. J. Pickett, our pastor, and his wife, took a great interest in it. We had a nice time with the children."

We desire to call special attention to the six month's work of the Sixth Street Methodist Episcopal Church, M. J. Dyer, pastor. In February, Bro. Dyer entered upon his work. He found about 40 discouraged yet struggling members, the church with over eight hundred dollars debt upon it, and one of the smallest congregations and Sunday-schools in the city. The outlook to a man of ordinary faith was everything but hopeful. He began his work by preaching sermons full of Christ, and visiting from house to house. The gospel he preached he lived. With steadiness of purpose and faith in God, he moved upon the works of the enemy. At this writing, he makes this report. Seventy-five have been received on probation; sixty one adults have been baptised, and eight children; $418 50 have been collected and paid on the debt of the church, $12 for the insurance of the church property, and $261 50 towards the current expenses of the church. The pastor received a nice new suit of clothes in which to shine, costing $34. A large, attentive and respectful congregation, and one of the most promising Sunday-schools in the city. The trustees are making plans for the enlargement of their church for the accommodation of the people who desire to hear Christ's gospel preached at the Sixth Street Methodist Episcopal Church.

A. Moore, Coushatta: "The Lord blessed us with some happy converts. In protracted meeting of two weeks there were ten converts and two backsliders reclaimed. The crops here are fine. Cotton is better than for years. A great deal of corn will be raised."

TEXAS.

Mrs. Louisa Cole, general agent of the Woman's Home Missionary Society, writes complaining that some pastors do not give the work encouragement, but that a vigorous canvass of the charges is to be made.

H. W. Wilson, Cold Springs: "June 15, Children's Day, there was a large congregation in attendance. We were delighted to hear the little ones make such heroic speeches. There were some other speeches by young ladies of the community; also by McWheatley and others on education. Collection was $4 55."

Robert Williams, Frost Chapel and Pittsville: "Children's Day was observed, and there was an unusually large congregation at each place. Our collection was $3 60. Our Sunday-school picnic came off on June 30, and the Lord favored us with a fine day, and we did not fail to avail ourselves of the opportunity of enjoying it. The children in delivering their dialogues and speeches acquitted themselves worthily. The singing by the choir was grand. W. S. Smith is superintendent."

A. Lockhart, Pilot Point: "Being without a house to worship in from last fall until this spring, our class and prayer meetings have been silent. The sheep scattered; [illegible] went to the Indian Territory. The pastor told the members who [illegible] that we must have a house, and he preached in the new [illegible], in April, by aid from the [illegible] Extension Society. Our [illegible]-school is growing, and [illegible] W. Oliver and wife have [illegible] workers. The visit of [illegible] good. I have [illegible] school six months [illegible]

His collection was $10; on Children's day we raised $3 15.

J. D. Walden, Brandon: "Elder D. A. Williams held our quarterly meeting at Pelahatchie He preached good sermons, The church there was dedicated in April. There were 11 accessions.

J. W. Winbush, Abbeville: "Children's day was observed. Our pastor Rev. A. D. Payne led, as Superintendent E J. Turner was ill. There was a recitation of verses, a collection of 70c, and a sermon on education by the pastor. Committees had decorated the church and placed flowers in the pulpit."

"Rough on Rats."

The thing desired found at last. Ask druggists for "Rough on Rats. It clear out rats, mice, roaches, flies, bed-bugs. 15c. boxes.

Rev. Wm. McDonald, in a sermon at the Round Lake Holiness Convention referring to the perils of human nature says, there is a tendency in human nature to run in ruts, and one is healing the sick. I believe God does that. I am not calling in question the fact, but the divine record does not magnify this. It is an incidental, not an essential, to Christianity. I have looked through the New Testament and noted the instruction given to those who were healed. To those who were healed He told them to keep still, but to all who had been delivered from internal foes, He said, Go tell what great things He has done. He knew human beings so well that He knew a man would go 1000 miles to be healed from some bodily disease when he would do nothing for salvation. One man who was healed told it abroad, and Jesus could do nothing there; the people were all after healing and he wanted to save souls. When the gifts were distributed, to some were given the gift of healing; if all had it the people would soon be wild. Another is the mere external, dress, for example; some people are always driving away at this. I am in perfect sympathy with what they think, but not with the way of doing. We are so apt to drive away at the ear. More can be done by kindling a fire in the soul. Have you ever seen an old oak covered with dry leaves, all withered, the storms of winter have not been able to take them off, but spring comes, and it is warmer; the sap starts up from the roots and out into the limbs, and off come the leaves. If you want to get the external right, get the internal right first. I fully accept the end in view, but don't fire away at fingers and ears and head to get the fire in the soul, and the eye will see the inconsistency. Another peril is the unwarrantable assumption of being led by the Spirit. We can be, and are, led by the Spirit, but we are led by the Spirit shining through the word. The main teaching is through the word. People must not take all impressions as being of the Spirit. The only method of trying the Spirit is by the word of God. Mention was here made of Nathan Bangs while in his missionary work in Canada, passing a house and having an impression that he should go in and talk and pray with the people. He passed on, however, when the impression was so strong that he turned back and found that the house had not been occupied for months. Wesley had trouble on this line with his workers.

A LADY SAID

[From Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper.]

"Those Horrid Pimples! No, I Cannot Go. Please Present My Excuses.

Probably two-thirds of the ladies in society and homes of our land are afflicted with skin diseases of various kinds, to do away with which, if it could be done without injury, would be the happiest event of their lives. Then she would have instead of a disfigured and marred countenance, one that would be handsome, or at least good-looking, for any one with a clear, pure skin, no matter what the cut of her features is, has a certain amount of good looks which attract everybody. As it is now, she imagines every one sees and talks about "those freckles," "those horrid pimples," and other blemishes with which she is afflicted, and this is true of either sex.

To improve this appearance great risks are taken; arsenic, mercury, or high-sound titled named articles containing these death-dealing drugs are taken in hopes of getting rid of all these troubles. In many cases death is the result. No alleviation of the burning, heating, itching and inflammation is given. All troubled with Eczema (salt rheum), Totters, Humors, Inflammation, Rough Scaly Eruptions of any kind, Diseases of the Hair and Scalp, Scrofula, Ulcers, Pimples or Tender Itchings on any part of the body, should know that there is hope for them in a sure, perfect and elegant remedy, known as "Dr. C. W. Benson's Skin Cure." It makes the skin white, soft and smooth, removes tan and freckles, and is the best toilet dressing in the world. It is elegantly put up, two bottles in one package, consisting of both internal and external treatment. Our readers should be sure to get this and not some old remedy resuscitated on the success of Dr. Benson's and now advertised as the "Great Skin Cure." There is only one,—it bears the Doctor's picture and is for sale by all druggists. $1 per package.

A Sensation

HAS OFTEN BEEN MADE

by the discovery of some new thing, but nothing has ever stood the test like Dr. C. W. Benson's Celery and Chamomile Pills.

They really do cure sick headache, nervous headache, neuralgia, nervousness, sleeplessness, indigestion, paralysis, and melancholy.

Sold by druggists. Price, 50 cents a box. Depot 106 North Eutaw St., Baltimore, Md., By mail, two boxes for $1, or six boxes for $2.50, to any address.

C. N. Crittenton, New York, is wholesale agent for Dr. C. W. Benson's remedies.

Two Bursts of Eloquence.

Hon. W. E. Robinson, of Brooklyn, who has been talked of for several appointments, is reported as telling of the service he has rendered to the country since the present session of Congress began, in the following grandiloquent, highfaluting, mystical, oratorical sublimities:

When I came here I found the American eagle drugged and drowsy, her blood poisoned with political pyæmia, her wings covered with the mildew of monarchy, and her beak filled with Lowell garbage. I roused her from her ignoble slumber, I brushed the dew from her magnificent pinion, I gave her voice to the music of freedom, and sent her with her magnificent wing to fan the tempest and soar to the sun.

The Christian Advocate, of New York, puts in in its quill and whistles out the following;

Surely such superior service can not be reasonably rewarded except by appointing this gigantic genius minister to the Court of St. James, and empowering him to twist the tail of the British lion with the terrible thumb-screw of his vengeance, until that ancient animal piteously pleads for pardon.

Now after he is done with that, could you not get him to take the Irish donkey by the ear?—Religious Telescope.

Unnecessary Misery

is endured by bilious and dyspeptic sufferers who neglect to take Simmons Liver Regulator. Headache, constipation, piles, colic and indigestion are cured by this pure vegetable remedy.

The Alabama Republicans resolved to support the Greenback and Independent state ticket, consisting of J. L. Sheffield, for governor; A. H. Townsend, for secretary of state, P. L. Jones, for attorney-general; J. M. Montgomery, treasurer; J. W. Shields, for auditor; J. P. Ward, for superintendent of education.

A Dead Shot

may be taken at liver and bilious disorders with Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets." Mild yet certain in operation; and there is none of the reaction consequent upon taking severe and drastic cathartics. By druggists.

The institute of Christian philosophy authorises an auxiliary institute at the Monona Lake Assembly at Madison, Wis., under the direction of President John Bascom.

Opinion of Dr. H. R. Walton, Annapolis, Md.

COLDEN'S LIEBIG'S LIQUID EXTRACT OF BEEF AND TONIC INVIGORATOR is a most excellent preparation. It is par excellence, superior to cod liver oil or anything I have ever used in wasted or impaired constitutions, and an excellent preventive of malarial diseases. (Remember the name. COLDEN'S—take no other.) Of druggists generally.

The Legislature will adjourn without acting on the Sunday law question. This is an evidence that the average legislator of this State is behind the people in the matter of moral reform, and those of our citizens who are lovers of morality, decency, and a proper regard for the Sabbath have little to hope, in the way of a Sunday law, from those who teach by example that they do not believe Sunday should be observed except as day of recreation and pleasure.—Terrebonne Times.

A Fool Once More.

"For ten years my wife was confined to her bed with such a complication of ailments that no doctor could tell what was the matter or cure her, and I used up a small fortune in humbug stuff. Six months ago I saw a U. S. flag with Hop Bitters on it, and I thought I would be a fool once more. I tried it, but my folly proved to be wisdom. Two bottles cured her, she is now as well and strong as any man's wife, and it cost me only two dollars. Such folly pays."—H. T., Detroit, Mich.—Free Press.

Lost Friends.

[We make no charge for publishing these letters from subscribers. All others will be charged fifty cents. Pastors will please read the requests published below from their pulpits, and report any case where friends are brought together by means of letters in the SOUTHWESTERN.]

DEAR EDITOR: I wish to inquire for my daughter Mary Ann. I was sold from her in 1846. At that time we both belonged to Daniel Priest, who lived in ——, Montgomery county, Ky. I was sold to Daniel Bains, who lived in Bourbon Co., Ky. Afterward I was sold to a trader named Pierce Griffin. He carried me to Louisiana, on Bayon Plaquemines, twenty-five miles below Baton Rouge. My name at that time was Emily Priest; now it is Emily Wilson. The last time I heard from my daughter she was in Natchez, Miss., living with a doctor whose first name was John, last name I never heard. Address me at Topeka, Kansas, 504 Monroe treet. 21-m6t

DEAR EDITOR—I wish to inquire for my kin people. I was hired out from my mother, and when I came back she was sold, and I don't know where to. She left two children, Kitty and Henry Bonay. Their owner, Jacob Bonay, lived in Virginia, Moreland county. Mother was Tracy Bonay. My name is Sophie Evans, and I live in Warren county, Miss. Address me at Russellville.

DEAR EDITOR—I desire to inquire for my father and sister. Sister, Martha Thomson, was bought by James Thomson in Noxubee and brought to Attala county, Mississippi. Father, Anthony Hudson, was sold and carried to Alabama during the war. I heard of him in Noxubee county at the time of the surrender. Address me at Durant, Miss. J. FULLYLOVE.

DEAR EDITOR—I wish to inquire for my father. I have not seen him since I was a boy. The last heard from him he was in Brandon, Miss. Mother was Margaret McNair. I had a brother Wesley in Hazlehurst, I would also like to hear from. Address me at Handsboro, Miss. ALBERT RANKINS.

DEAR EDITOR—I wish to inquire for my brother, who left us when I was a little girl. I got one letter from him in 1879, from Memphis, Tenn., but my letter did not reach him. His name is Stephen Patton, but sometimes he went by the name of Stephen Strond. Mother, who is now dead, was Mary Patton. She died August 18, 1880. When he left there were two brothers and five sisters, only one married, but now all are married except me. Sister Mary is dead. My home is at Prairie, Coffee county, Tennessee, but I am now at St. Charles, Ky., teaching school.

MISS GEORGIA L. PATTON.

Somebody's Child.

Somebody's child is dying—dying with the flush of hope on his young face, and somebody's mother thinking of the time when that dear face will be hidden where no ray of hope can brighten it—because there was no cure for consumption. Reader, if the child be your neighbor's take this comforting word to the mother's heart before it is too late. Tell her that consumption is curable; that men are living to-day whom the physicians pronounced incurable, because one lung had been almost destroyed by the disease. Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" has cured hundreds; surpasses cod liver oil, hypophosphites, and other medicines in curing this disease. Sold by druggists.

A colored man named McTaylor, in Webster Parish, La., maltreated a white lad and then fled for safety. He was pursued by the boy's father and two others, brought back, tied to a tree and shot to death, and the vultures picked his bones bare.

It Has Worked Wonders.

A lady writing from Racine, Wis., makes this gratifying report: "We finished taking our second supply of Compound Oxygen last month; it has worked wonders for my mother. When she began treating with the Oxygen she was extremely low and prostrate in her bed with a variety of complaints. I had no hopes of her recovery. She is now able to go about the house and do many pieces of work, and is a continual testimony before me of the wonderful power of Compound Oxygen." Our Treatise on Compound Oxygen, containing large reports of cases and full information, sent free. Address Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1109 and 1111 Girard Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

There was a national temperance camp meeting at Seymour, Ind., at which twelve thousand people were present.

Mrs. Mary Morey, of Camden, N. J., writes: "Brown's Iron Bitters has cured me of much suffering and distress resulting from dyspepsia, urinary trouble, and weak lungs. It has made me very regular in my habits, and I feel in perfect health. Life is very happy to me now."

Secretary Chandler is reported to have remarked, "We politicians never agitate temperance. But let the temperance people go on. Agitate, agitate, agitate. When you get the wave high enough we will jump into our boats and ride in." Not the great and learned are to do the hard, dirty work of this great temperance war. Others must dig the ditches, lay the foundations, pick the stone and rear the fortifications, but they are going up, and it matters little who may put on the cap stone with shouting.—Christian Statesman.

A LETTER FROM GERMANY.

SIEGEN, January 9, 1882.

Very esteemed sirs:

The praise your Liver Pills have called forth here is wonderful. After taking one and a half boxes of your genuine DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS, I have entirely recovered from my four years' suffering. All who know me wonder how I, who, for so many years, had no appetite and could not sleep for backache, stitch in my side, and general stomach complaints, could have recovered.

An old lady in our city, who has suffered for many years from kidney disease, and the doctors had given her up, took two of your Pills, and got more relief than she has from all the doctors. Yours truly,

J. VON DER BERG.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

The genuine are never sugar-coated.

Every box has a red wax seal on the lid, with the impression: McLane's Liver Pill.

The genuine McLANE'S LIVER PILLS bear the signature of C. McLane and Fleming Bros. on the wrappers.

Insist upon having the genuine DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS, prepared by Fleming Bros., of Pittsburgh, Pa., the market being full of imitations of the name McLane, spelled differently, but of same pronunciation.

If your storekeeper does not have the genuine DR. C. McLANE'S CELEBRATED LIVER PILLS, send us 25 cents, and we will send you a box by mail, and a set of our advertising cards.

DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC.

A combination of Protoxide of Iron, Peruvian Bark and Phosphorus in a palatable form. The only preparation of iron that will not blacken the teeth, so characteristic of other iron preparations.

GENTLEMEN: I have used DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC in my practice, and in an experience of twenty-five years in medicine, have never found anything to give the results that DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC does. In many cases of Nervous Prostration, Female Diseases, Dyspepsia, and an impoverished condition of the blood, this peerless remedy, has in my hands, made some wonderful cures. Cases that have baffled some of our most eminent physicians. have yielded to this great and incomparable remedy. I prescribe it in preference to any iron preparation made. In fact, such a compound as DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC is a necessity in my practice. DR. ROBERT SAMUELS.

ST. LOUIS, MO., Nov. 26th, 1881. 3104 Wash Avenue.

It gives color to the blood, natural healthful tone to the digestive organs and nervous system, making it applicable to General Debility, Loss of Appetite, Prostration of Vital Powers and Impotence.

Foo Choo's Balsam of Shark's Oil

Positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness Known.

This Oil is abstracted from peculiar species of small White Shark, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as Carcharodon Rondeletii. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist Priest about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal that for over 300 years no Deafness has existed among the Chinese People. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1 per bottle.

HEAR WHAT THE DEAF SAY!

It has performed a miracle in my case.

I have no unearthly noises in my head and hear much better.

I have been greatly benefited.

My deafness helped a great deal—think another bottle will cure me.

"Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, as the writer can personally testify, both from experience and observation. Write at once to Haylock & Jenney, 7 Dey street New York, enclosing $1, and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. Agua Cure

Is a purely vegetable bitter and powerful tonic, and is warranted a speedy and certain cure for Fever and Ague, Chills and Fever, Intermittent or Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, and all malarial disorders. In miasmatic districts, the rapid pulse, coated tongue, thirst, lassitude, loss of appetite, pain in the back and loins, and coldness of the spine and extremities, are only premonitions of severer symptoms which terminate in the ague paroxysm, succeeded by high fever and profuse perspiration.

It is a startling fact, that quinine, arsenic, and other poisonous minerals form the basis of most of the "Fever and Ague Preparations," "Specifics," "Syrups," and "Tonics," in the market. The preparations made from these mineral poisons, although they are palatable, and may break the chill, do not cure, but leave the malarial and their own drug poison in the system, producing quinism, dizziness, ringing in the ears, headache, vertigo, and other disorders more formidable than the disease they were intended to cure. AYER'S AGUE CURE thoroughly eradicates these noxious poisons from the system, and always cures the severest cases. It contains no quinine, mineral, or any thing that could injure the most delicate patient; and its crowning excellence, above its certainty to cure, is that it leaves the system as free from disease as before the attack.

For Liver Complaints, AYER'S AGUE CURE, by direct action on the liver and biliary apparatus, drives out the poisons which produce these complaints, and stimulates the system to a vigorous, healthy condition.

We warrant it when taken according to directions.

Vote It Out.

There is an evil in the land,
Rank with age and foul with crime,
Strong with many a legal band,
Money, fashion, use, and time;
'Tis the question of the hour,
How shall we the wrong o'erpower?
Vote it out!
This wil put the thing to rout,
Vote it out!
Let us rise and vote it out.

We have begged the traffic long,
Begged it both with smiles and tears
To abate the flood of wrong,
But it answered us with sneers;
We are wearied with the scourge—
Vote it out!
Loyal people raise the shout,
Vote it out!
Let us rise and vote it out.

'Tis the battle of the hour,
Freedmen, show your strength again;
If the ballot is your power,
This will bring the foe to pain;
We have preached against the wrong,
We have plead with words of song;
Vote it out!
Vote and pray with heart devout,
Vote it out!
Let us rise and vote it out.

Never shall the promise fail,
God is with us for the right:
Truth is mighty to prevail,
Faith shall see in joyous sight;
We shall see the hosts of rum
Palsied with affright and dumb,
Vote it out.
Then we'll put the fiend to rout,
Vote it out:
Let us rise and put him out.

Politics and Religion.

Under this caption the Southern Christian Advocate (M. E. Church South), Samuel A. Weber, editor, published at Charleston, S. C., in its issue of July 22, gave the following expression of its views of Christian citizenship:

We see a growing necessity for the pulpit and Christian journalism each to pronounce itself with no uncertain meaning as to the vital relations between politics and religion. We call these relations vital, and as they are. The very life of the country, in the personal integrity of the individual citizen, is involved in the use or abuse of our political [illegible] and rights.

It is impossible to evade personal [illegible] any more than to [illegible] because, forsooth, we are [illegible] by neighbors. We do [illegible] our individuality, nor our [illegible] for our conduct with [illegible] to God, by mix[illegible] crowd. "What is [illegible] business is nobody's [illegible]" is a specious fallacy—a [illegible] and dangerous lie. [illegible] own business is not [illegible] an amiable virtue. [illegible] supreme [illegible] is a significant [illegible] of sin.

[illegible] little more specific, [illegible] and measures [illegible] of gross [illegible] by our [illegible] by [illegible] of con- [illegible] of carrying [illegible] that [illegible] [illegible] friend of ours was called upon a few years ago to open a political convention with prayer. He went and prayed—possibly with more earnestness than faith—that such plans and means should be employed as the God of justice and truth would favor. We are not informed whether there were many Amens to the prayer or not, but this much we know, that the parson remained to participate as "a looker-on here in Vienna" in the council chamber of his party, for as a matter of course it was his own party he was serving in the earnest prayer which he offered. Imagine his surprise and mortification when one of the party leaders arose in his place and spoke somehow in this way: "Gentlemen, this campaign must not be conducted on the principles of the Young Men's Christian Association; this thing of conscience you must let alone; you've got no use for conscience. You must lie, gentlemen, lie like the Devil." Certainly "like the Devil," if at all; for he is the father of lies, and has a paternal interest both in the lie and in the liar.

Now, we candidly inquire, is a course like this, or such as this may be a caricature of, is such a course a necessity, or to put it in the usual form, a political necessity? No, a thousand times, NO; no more than is such a leader a necessity.

We would as well commence at the right place, and demand for the service of the country good men and true. We don't want infidels, nor blackguards, nor gamblers, nor drunkards, nor blasphemers, nor time-servers in our places of honor and trust and official responsibility. South Carolina has patriotic sons and virtuous citizens enough, to be her representatives and leaders; and the best elements of our moral and social and civic life call them to the front. It is not the trickster and the demagogue that is to save the country. It is the man who has the wisdom to see the situation as it is, and who has the courage, in the first place, to have a conviction, and then the courage to announce it; it is such a man as this, the product of the times and the inspiration of the hour, who, under God, is our born leader. WANTED, GOOD MEN FOR OFFICE!

We have left possibly the most difficult part of our self-imposed task yet untouched. About everybody will agree with what has been written; but how to affect the general weal through the individual man and citizen and voter, how to purify the country through the sources of its power and influence, the State through the hearts and homes of our people, this is a delicate matter, and involves a weighty responsibility. Better not approach it all, if not in the fear of God.

In Heaven's high arch above his head, a glorious form appeared,
Whose left hand bore a flambeau bright, his right a sceptre reared,
A diadem of purest gold his brow imperial crowned,
And from his throne he thus addressed the watchman on his round:
What of the night, what of the night! watchman! what of the night?
The myriad foe, in close array, come on to try their might—
A night assault—and if thy trump mistake a single sound,
I'll hang upon these battlements the watchman on his round!

Let us apply some of the general principles with which we prefaced this article. Responsibility, in its final analysis, rests upon the individual head. Sin is a terribly personal thing. It comes right home to each person as he stands in his nakedness before God. Suppose, for instance, a man perjures himself at the ballot box. Let him know that this is a matter between himself and his God, and that it is as certainly a sin and a crime and a shame as though no other man of his neighborhood or of his State had committed it. It is none the less wrong because others do it, because many others do it, even if all others do it. We mustn't divide out a responsibility for a great wrong, and try to persuade ourselves that a people, or the people, as a whole, committed it. The people may be guilty of wrong-doing, but we are guilty, dear reader, in proportion as by connivance or actual participation, we are personally involved in any given sin.

"But doesn't the end justify the means?" Well, that depends upon two things, first, as to what constitutes the "end," and, secondly, as to what constitutes the "means." We learned about one "end" in our [illegible]. And if we teach it to [illegible] let us not neutralize [illegible] frequently violating [illegible] that the [illegible] to glory [illegible]

"But mustn't we fight the Devil with fire?" Never. For then we encounter him with his own weapons. Fear God and do right, is a safe rule everywhere and all the time. A compromise with principle, with truth and with righteousness, doesn't pay in the long run. Nigh cuts, in politics or elsewhere, are neither seemly nor safe. And, besides, they are wrong. Frequently the shortest way through is the longest way round.

We write with most exalted conceptions of our duty, first of all, to God, and then to our country. We love our country; but far above all else we love truth and the God of truth. Let us be true to ourselves—the best interests of the country and the highest instincts of our natures, remembering that the one of these involves the other.

Under the inspiration of such views as the above, we criticised a few weeks ago a letter from Gov. Hampton to his constituency in South Carolina. Referring to this letter we wrote:

Senator Hampton warns us against the danger of division in the ranks of the Democratic party. the "Independent" comes for a good share of the Honourable Senator's indignation—not to say contempt. Well, we confess we don't prefer a big "I" to spell independent, and yet we like the word and what it implies; and we have got to have more of it before we get right in politics in South Carolina. No doubt of it. We need a leader, and a much greater one than Hampton has shown himself in his recent letter. We want the Hampton of 1876, who openly preferred political defeat to victory by methods of indirection and fraud. WANTED for South Carolina, a political Moses. The people, the bone and sinew of the country, are ready to flock to his standard.

In reference to this note, one brother, an earnest Christian layman, writes us as follows:

I have just now opened my Advocate, and without going further than your editorial remarks upon the Hampton letter, I must say, that I thank Almighty God, that the editor of the Southwestern Christian Advocate, has the manhood to speak as you have in regard to "independence." I tell you, my dear brother, the frauds practiced by our people are demoralizing to the whole country. The old men who claim to be Christians, teach the young to defraud, and the young men afterwards reflect, and look upon these old men as hypocrites. I tell you it is a deplorable state of affairs.

We have also received the following from a member of the South Carolina Conference. He does not hesitate to allow the use of his name. We, however, print his letter like the two others incorporated in this article, anonymously. Read what he says:

DEAR BROTHER WEBER: I know that the Southwestern Christian Advocate is a Church paper, and confines its columns strictly to religious matters. I do not consider that it has departed from its province. And I must tell you that I was struck with your very strong paragraph in the "Review" column on first page, in your issue of the 1st inst. I was delighted with your comments on "Senator Hampton's letter to the people." I am entirely in accord with you in the desire to see greater independence among our people, and in the importance of this great principle in character, also the need of a "political Moses" to lead us in this critical juncture in our country's history. And, Sir, I believe that the time has fully come for those occupying your responsible position, and the ministers of God everywhere, to lift their warning voice, and cry out against the fraud that is being practiced by all political parties for the accomplishment of their ends.

I can see no hope for our country with its present practices and its present leaders. If the Almighty has retired from the government of the nations, then, there is nothing else left us but to take the government of our country into our own hands. But this is not the case. "The Lord reigneth." And whether or not the men recognize His sovereignty, and render obedience to His will, the end will establish the fact that He has not been an indifferent spectator of what has been passing.

No man has ever hardened himself against God and prospered; and what is true of the individual, is equally true when applied to the nation. The fact that the masses practice fraud does not justify any man in allowing himself to become so corrupted as to follow their example. It is true that the masses are not directly guilty of fraud, and a few only, comparatively speaking, who are anxious for position, are working the machinery of politics; but the question arises, Are we not responsible for knowingly yielding ourselves as the instruments of their unrighteousness, by keeping silent when we ought to speak, and by our ballots placing such men in office over us? I for one think so. "Thou shalt not follow [illegible] to do evil." "Neither be partaker of other men's sins."

God will never forsake the people who put their trust in Him. We may suffer inconvenience, and even oppression from the success of those who oppose us, but it will be of short duration. A just cause, correct principles, and righteous action will ever have the approbation of Heaven; and "If God be for us, who can be against us?" "Through him we shall do valiantly, for He it is that shall tread down our enemies." Whatever misfortunes befall us as a people, whatever may be said of us, nothing is more to be deprecated than is expressed in this short sentence: "God is departed from them." Let us "trust in God and do the right."

Number three comes from an educated young Christian gentleman—a gentleman by birth and breeding and instinct and principle. We greet him as one of the rising young men of the State, and receive with unaffected emotion, at their just value, his expressions of kindly consideration of our work. We share the letter with our readers:
